† In addition to the facts from Z. T. Emerson, in History of Knox County, p. 148, I have used a date found upon a map of Knox County, prepared by Samuel Morrison in October, 1875, and now in the State Library. Inferring from later legislation, the actual boundary of Knox County seems to have been on the north, the present north lines of the following Counties:—Parke, Putnam, Monroe, Jackson, Jennings, Fayette and Union, including part of Wayne.

STATE PRINTING AWARDED.

Statement Showing Proceedings of the Board of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery in Awarding the Present State Printing Contract.

At a meeting of the Board of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, held on the 23d day of September, 1903, the specifications and notice asking for bids on the State printing, etc., for two years, was approved.

The following is the notice, which was ordered sent at once for publication (two insertions) to the Indianapolis Journal, Indianapolis Sentinel, Indianapolis News, Indianapolis Sun and Indianapolis Morning Star:

NOTICE.

BUREAU OF PUBLIC PRINTING, BINDING AND STATIONERY,
INDIANAPOLIS, September 23, 1903.

To Printers, Book-Binders and Stationers:

The Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery will, in accordance with an act of the General Assembly, approved April 13, 1885, receive sealed proposals on the 28th day of October, 1903, at the hour of 12 o'clock noon, for doing the public printing and binding, and furnishing the stationery for the use of the State of Indiana for a term of two years, commencing on the 18th day of November, 1903.

At the same time and in the same manner, covering the same period, the Board will also receive separate bids for the printing and binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, in accordance with the law authorizing the publication of same.

All bids submitted must be signed by parties proposing to do the work, securely sealed, and accompanied with such certified checks and samples as are hereinafter named. Bidders must bid on all items in the proposals and make extensions of prices, and place the totals at the bottom of each of the classes. Bids will not be considered unless these requirements have been complied with.

Upon receipt of said sealed proposals they will be opened and signed by members of said Board, and as soon thereafter as the bids and samples can be properly examined the competing bidders will be notified to be present, when the contracts will be awarded to the lowest and best bidder, or bidders, according to law; the Board, however, reserving the right to reject any or all bids submitted.

Each bidder, at the time of submitting his bid, shall also submit and deposit with the Board, payable to the order of the Governor of Indiana, a certified check, on some bank approved by the Board, in the sum of $5,000 for the general printing, binding and stationery contract, and $1,000 with the bid for the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports contract, as a guarantee that such bidder will enter into a contract pursuant to such bid and notice and the specifications referred to herein, and will submit a bond as herein provided to the approval of the Board, and if any such bidder shall fail to carry out the terms of this notice and such bid and enter into such contract and file such bond, in that event the Governor shall deliver the check, or the proceeds thereof, to the Treasurer of State, to be collected by him as such Treasurer as liquidated damages for the failure of such bidder to carry out the terms of this notice and his bid and the specifications referred to herein, and enter into such contract and file such bond.

The successful bidder or bidders will be required to furnish separate bonds, to be approved by the Board, in the sum of $50,000 for the general printing, binding and stationery, and $15,000 for the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, at the time said contract or contracts are awarded to said bidder or bidders, for the faithful performance of all work in accordance with the specifications hereinafter named, and that in every instance the paper and material furnished shall be in weight, color and quality the same as called for in the specifications.

The work on the general printing, binding and stationery will be let as a whole to the lowest and best bidder in the aggregate, no division of classes being allowed, divided into three classes, as specified by law, as follows:

The first class shall comprise the laws, journals, reports of officers and public institutions, and all books and pamphlet work to be printed on book paper.

The second class shall comprise all legislative bills, commissions, letter heads, circulars, blanks and other work usually executed on writing paper, and all articles of stationery.

The second class shall also include the printing and blocking of all the State election ballots provided by the general election law, passed by the Fifty-second Session and subsequent sessions of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, and all the printing and stationery that may be required in the preparation and sending out of the State election ballots. All of which shall be prescribed and subject to the approval of the State Board of Election Commissioners.

The third class shall comprise the folding, stitching, covering and binding, and all work belonging to the binding business.

The contract for printing and binding the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports will be let as a whole to the lowest and best bidder, according to law, the Board reserving the right to reject any or all bids submitted.

The contractor or contractors shall maintain an office in the city of Indianapolis for the transaction of all business under said contracts, and must agree, upon the taking effect of the contracts, to maintain a plant of sufficient capacity to do the work of the State speedily and without unnecessary delay. All work under said contracts shall be performed within the State of Indiana.

Any bidder or bidders who shall be awarded these contracts shall not assign or sub-let the same, or any portion thereof, without the written consent of the Board of Public Printing.

The Board has made a basis upon which bids are asked solely for the purpose of securing uniformity of bids, but will not be governed by this basis alone in awarding the contracts. Given in the specifications is a statement from the Clerk of the Board showing approximately the quantity of articles used the past two years, which will assist the Board in determining which, if any, of the bids submitted are the best for the State.

Thos. J. Carter, Clerk of the Board, will furnish, upon application, specifications and full particulars regarding the work.

On the 28th day of October, 1903, in response to the above notice, sealed bids were received from the following firms:

Baker & Thornton Co., general printing, binding and stationery, and Supreme and Appellate Court Reports.

Sentinel Printing Company, general printing, binding and stationery, and Supreme and Appellate Court Reports.

Levey Bros. & Co., general printing, binding and stationery, and Supreme and Appellate Court Reports.

Wm. B. Burford, general printing, binding and stationery, and Supreme and Appellate Court Reports.

Cheltenham Press, Supreme and Appellate Court Reports.

After making an examination and approving the certified checks required to be filed with bids, the members of the Board attached their signatures to each of the bids submitted.

The Governor, as President of the Board, then announced to the bidders present that the bids submitted would be carefully examined, and the lowest and best bids would be determined by comparison of samples submitted and extension of prices on the basis of quantity used the past two years, as given in the specifications, and that the Board would be ready to announce its finding Saturday, November 7, at 10:30 a. m., and invited bidders to be present.

The Board's clerk was then directed to make extension of prices of bids as submitted on the basis of quantity used the previous two years, as shown in specifications, make a thorough examination of samples submitted, and make report at the time announced above.

At a meeting of the Board held on November 7, at 10:30 a. m., the clerk reported that he had carefully gone over the several bids and carried out the extensions as directed, and had also made a careful comparison of samples, with the following result:

As shown by the above report, Wm. B. Burford being the lowest and best responsible bidder on both the general printing, binding and stationery and Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, and whose samples upon examination were found to be satisfactory, was unanimously awarded both of said contracts for the ensuing two years, to take effect on the 18th day of November, 1903.

The Governor then announced the result of the Board's action and stated that all bids and samples submitted, together with the clerk's extensions, were now open to public inspection.

After directing the clerk to prepare the contract and form of bond and notify Wm. B. Burford to be ready with his bond at 2:30 p. m., on this date, in order to close up said contracts, the Board then took a recess until this time.

At the hour of 2:30 p. m. the Board reconvened with all the members present.

Wm. B. Burford was present and presented as bondsmen for printing contracts for the ensuing two years himself, John T. Burford and Charles Mayer, with sworn affidavits that each of them were worth, over and above all debts and liabilities, viz: Wm. B. Burford, $100,000; John T. Burford, $60,000; Charles Mayer, $100,000.

The above bond being satisfactory, were accepted as bondsmen in the sum of $50,000 for the general printing, binding and stationery contract, and $15,000 for the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports contract.

Thereupon the following contract was entered into with Winfield T. Durbin, Governor, Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State, and David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, of the first part, and Wm. B. Burford of the second part, for doing the public printing, binding and stationery and furnishing the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports for two years from the 18th day of November, 1903:

CONTRACT AND BOND FOR GENERAL PRINTING, BINDING AND STATIONERY.

THIS AGREEMENT, made and entered into this 7th day of November, 1903, between the State of Indiana, by the Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor, Hon. Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State, and Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, these being the Board of Commissioners of the Bureau of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, of the first part, and Wm. B. Burford, of Indianapolis, Indiana, of the second part:

WITNESSETH, That the said party of the first part, after full examination and comparison of bids made by the party of the second part, and other like responsible bidders, to do the printing, binding, lithographing and furnishing the stationery for the State offices and the public institutions of the State, and for legislative purposes, for two (2) years from the 18th day of November, 1903, according to the specifications hereto attached and made a part of this contract, has found the proposition of said party of the second part to do the printing, binding, lithographing and furnishing the stationery, as specified in said specifications, to be, in the aggregate, lowest and best bid submitted, and does now annex the same to this agreement and accept the same.

The said party of the second part therefore agrees to promptly and faithfully provide the material and execute the work in the annexed proposal and furnish the stationery for the time mentioned therein at the prices therein above named, speedily and without unnecessary delay, and all of said material and work shall be subject to the inspection of the Clerk in charge of the Bureau of Printing, Binding and Stationery in the said annexed proposal for the time mentioned therein, at the prices therein above named, speedily and without unnecessary delay.

It is also agreed by the party of the second part that said party of the first part can order such printing, binding, lithographing and stationery at such times and in such quantities as may, in their judgment, be required by the State offices, public institutions and for legislative purposes; and any and all articles that may be required or work to be performed, not embraced by the lists, specifications and schedule hereto attached, shall not be done or performed unless first ordered by the Board, and the price therefor first ascertained and agreed upon by the parties hereto.

The said party of the first part, in consideration of the faithful execution of the foregoing stipulations by the said party of the second part, and the rendering of full and detailed bills for the work done, and the material and articles furnished, when completed and delivered, agree that they will cause the amount thereof to be audited and paid out of the treasury of the State of Indiana, in the manner provided by the law; and that they will not audit any bills for purchases of blank books, printing, binding, lithographing or stationery made by any other person or persons other than the said contractor; and should the party of the second part neglect or refuse to carry out any of the provisions of this contract, the party of the first part shall have the privilege immediately to cancel their contract without in any way affecting the remedy of the State upon the bond.

In Witness Whereof, The said party of the first part has caused this instrument to be signed by the Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, and the said party of the second part have hereto set their hands and seals this 7th day of November, 1903.

WINFIELD T. DURBIN, Governor,
DANIEL E. STORMS, Secretary of State,
DAVID E. SHERRICK, Auditor of State,
Board of Public Printing.

WM. B. BURFORD, Contractor.

Approved by order of the Board of Commissioners of the Bureau of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, this 7th day of November, 1903.

THOS. J. CARTER, Clerk.

The undersigned, William B. Burford, Charles Mayer and John T. Burford, do hereby acknowledge themselves bound and indebted to the State of Indiana in the penal sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000).

Witness our hands and seals this 7th day of November, 1903.

The conditions of the above undertaking are as follows:

Whereas, On the 28th day of October, 1903, a certain bid for a contract was made by said William B. Burford to the State of Indiana, by its Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, respecting the public printing, binding, lithographing and furnishing stationery for the State of Indiana for the period of two (2) years, beginning with the 18th day of November, 1903; and,

WHEREAS, It has been required by the said Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery that all persons submitting bids for said contract shall accompany said bid with a certified check for $5,000, conditioned that if said contract is awarded to said bidder, then he will enter into a contract with the said Board, and will duly perform the terms of said contract in the manner and form specified therein.

Now, if the said William B. Burford shall, in the event the contract specified shall be awarded to him, enter into a contract with the said State of Indiana, by its Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, in compliance with the said bid, and if the said William B. Burford shall duly perform the terms of the said contract, when so entered into, in the manner and form specified therein, then the obligation of this instrument shall be null and void, otherwise in full force and effect.

WM. B. BURFORD.
JOHN T. BURFORD.
CHAS. MAYER.

STATE OF INDIANA, }
MARION COUNTY. } SS:

Before me, a notary public in and for said county, personally appeared William B. Burford, Charles Mayer and John T. Burford, and acknowledged the execution of the above bond.

Witness my hand and seal this 7th day of November, A. D. 1903.

M. H. PEACOCK,
Notary Public.

CONTRACT AND BOND FOR SUPREME AND APPELLATE COURT REPORTS.

THIS AGREEMENT, Made and entered into this 7th day of November, 1903, between the State of Indiana, by Winfield T. Durbin, Governor, Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State, and David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, these being the Board of Commissioners of the Bureau of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, of the first part, and Wm. B. Burford, of Indianapolis, Indiana, of the second part:

WITNESSETH, That the said party of the first part, after a full examination and comparison of bids made by the party of the second part and other like responsible bidders, to do the printing of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, in accordance with the law authorizing the publication of the same by the State of Indiana, for two (2) years, from the 18th day of November, 1903, according to the specifications hereto attached and made a part of this contract, has found the proposition of said party of the second part to do the printing and binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, as specified in said specifications, to be, in the aggregate, the lowest and best bid submitted, and does now annex the same to this agreement and accept the same.

The said party of the second part, therefore, agrees to promptly and faithfully provide the material and execute the work in the annexed proposal, and furnish the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports for the time mentioned therein at the prices therein above named, speedily and without unnecessary delay, and all of said material and work shall be subject to the inspection of the Clerk in charge of the Bureau of Public Printing and Binding.

The said party of the first part, in consideration of the faithful execution of the foregoing stipulations by the party of the second part, and the rendering of full and detailed bills for work done, and when completed and delivered, agree that they will cause the amount thereof to be audited and paid out of the treasury of the State of Indiana in the manner provided by law; and that they will not audit any bills for the printing and binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports of the State made by any other person or persons other than the said contractor; and should the party of the second part neglect or refuse to carry out any of the provisions of this contract the party of the first part shall have the privilege immediately to cancel this contract without in any way affecting the remedy of the State upon the bond.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, The said party of the first part has caused this instrument to be signed by the Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, and the said party of the second part have hereunto set their hands and seals this 7th day of November, A. D. 1903.

WINFIELD T. DURBIN, Governor,
DANIEL E. STORMS, Secretary of State,
DAVID E. SHERRICK, Auditor of State,
Board of Public Printing.

WM. B. BURFORD, Contractor.

Approved by order of the Board of Commissioners of the Bureau of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery this 7th day of November, 1903.

THOS. J. CARTER, Clerk.

The undersigned, Wm. B. Burford, John T. Burford and Charles Mayer, do hereby acknowledge themselves bound and indebted to the State of Indiana in the penal sum of fifteen thousand (15,000) dollars.

Witness our hands and seals this 7th day of November, 1903.

The condition of the above undertaking is as follows:

WHEREAS, On the 28th day of October, 1903, a certain bid for a contract was made by said Wm. B. Burford to the State of Indiana, by its Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, respecting the public printing and binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports for the State of Indiana for the period of two (2) years, beginning with the 18th day of November, 1903; and,

WHEREAS, It has been required by the said Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery that all persons submitting bids for said contract shall accompany said bid with a certified check for $1,000, conditioned that if said contract is awarded to the said bidder then he will enter into a contract with the said Board, and will duly perform the terms of said contract in the manner and form specified therein.

Now, if the said Wm. B. Burford, shall, in the event the contract specified shall be awarded to him, enter into a contract with the State of Indiana, by its Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery, in compliance with the said bid, and if the said Wm. B. Burford shall duly perform the terms of said contract, when so entered into, in the manner and form specified therein, then the obligation of this instrument shall be null and void, otherwise in full force and effect.

WM. B. BURFORD.
JOHN T. BURFORD.
CHAS. MAYER.

STATE OF INDIANA, }
MARION COUNTY. } ss:

Before me, a notary public in and for said county, personally appeared Wm. B. Burford, John T. Burford and Chas. Mayer and acknowledged the execution of the above bond.

Witness my hand and seal this 7th day of November, 1903.

M. H. PEACOCK,
Notary Public.

SPECIFICATIONS

Submitted to Bidders Asking for Bids on Present Printing Contracts, Including Prices of Successful Bidder.

GENERAL PRINTING, BINDING AND STATIONERY.

The specifications call for the printing and binding of the reports of the officers of State, public institutions, Documentary Journal annually, the Acts of the General Assembly, the House and Senate Journals, and all miscellaneous pamphlets and printing, and furnishing stationery, blanks, etc., that may be needed by the different departments for the public service and the General Assembly, including all printing, stationery and binding ordered by the State Board of Election Commissioners, and which are paid for out of the treasury of State, for two years from the 18th day of November, 1903.

The work to be done above named will be divided into three classes, as follows:

FIRST CLASS.

All the book and cover paper used in printing the reports, acts, journals and all classes of pamphlet or book printing that may be required for the use of the State, shall be the best on the market, of the quality named in the specifications, and the contract shall be per pound for the amount used, no allowance being made for waste, handling, freight or otherwise. The weight of book and cover paper will be determined by comparison with samples furnished, on basis of 25x38 book and 20x25 cover, and all weights must be furnished at the same price per pound as that bid on in specifications.

In the printing of reports and all classes of printing requiring the use of book or cover paper, contractor will be required to consult the Board or its Clerk as to the size, weight and quality of paper to be used. If at any time contractor uses any other grade of book or cover paper than that coming within the contract without the consent of the Board or its Clerk, it will be charged at contract price, or if an inferior grade is used it will be allowed for according to grade used, or rejected entirely, if so ordered By the Board.

The composition shall be bid for by the 1,000 ems, actual measure in book or pamphlet, no blank pages or other unreal charge to be allowed, divided into two classes, as follows: Plain matter and rule and figure work. Rule and figure work shall consist of three or more justifications of words or figures with rules, or four or more justifications of words or figures without rules, to be measured as plain matter, one measure, as bid on per 1,000 ems rule and figure work, in accordance with size of type used.

All work not classed as rule and figure work, including institutional vouchers, shall be measured as plain matter, one measure, as bid on per 1,000 ems plain matter, in accordance with size of type used.

The price bid on per 1,000 ems shall include the cost of page and galley proofs required, making up pages, handling, locking up forms and all work required in delivering same to press. But where forms are re-made up, or plates are used, when composition is not measured, contractor will be allowed the customary time allowance per hour actually required in re-making up, locking up forms and delivering same to press, which extra time must be accompanied by an affidavit sworn to before a notary public.

The type used in printing the reports, acts, journals and all classes of pamphlet or book printing shall be modern face, unless otherwise ordered, and make a clear, neat appearance, and the spacing between words, etc., shall be the same as is done on all first-class book work.

In spacing between lines on all book composition, only six-to-pica leads will be allowed, unless otherwise ordered. In no case will contractor be allowed extra pay for setting matter "solid."

In making up type pages only such spacing as is necessary to make neat appearance of page will be allowed, and under no circumstances will contractor be allowed to use wide spacing in order to increase the number of pages.

Press work shall be bid for at so much for the first 100 impressions and so much for each additional 100 impressions, 16 pages to form, including make-ready and ink. All forms of a less number of impressions to be paid for as a full 100. Press work as bid on in this class applies only to book work.

The price bid for press work shall be to do first-class work and furnish the best quality of ink.

SECOND CLASS.

This class will include the furnishing of all blanks, both printed and ruled and printed, including legislative bills, to be bid for at so much for the first 100 and so much for each additional 100 copies, of the weights, sizes and quality of paper specified; the manufacturing of all blank books, both plain and printed, at so much per quire, including paging, indexing and binding, of the kind of binding and weights and sizes of paper specified; all description of lithographic work; embossed letter heads and envelopes; printed letter and note heads; miscellaneous printing, paper, etc., and the furnishing of all description of stationery, such as inks, inkstands, lead pencils, pens, penholders, etc.

All propositions in this class call for first-class work and material on all description of printing and lithographic work, and the best quality of paper, of the kinds, sizes and weights specified. The stationery calls for the best in use, and must be of the kind and quality specified.

In the furnishing of all description of blanks, blank books and all kinds of writing and other paper named, the contractor must conform to sizes, weights and quality mentioned in specifications, unless otherwise ordered.

THIRD CLASS.

This class will include the binding of books in leather, cloth and paste-board, and pamphlets, etc., with paper covers, and the tipping in of signatures, plates and maps, as follows:

All books bound in leather, cloth or paste-board shall be bid for at so much per 100 signatures of 16 pages each for folding, gathering and sewing, complete, and so much apiece for covers, including the cost of all materials used, lettering of title in any style, and all work necessary to complete book. Binding must be of best material and first-class workmanship, and to be counted by the number of copies actually delivered. All books bound in paste-board shall be sheep backs and paste-board sides. In no case will wire stitching be allowed on books bound in cloth, sheep or boards.

All pamphlets, etc., with paper covers, shall be bid for by the 100 signatures, including all handling, assorting, folding, wire stitching or sewing, trimming, and so much for putting on covers, in good, workmanlike manner.

All signatures of a less number will be paid for as a full 100 signatures. Covers will only be allowed for the actual number ordered.

The tipping in of signatures, plates or maps shall be bid for by the 100 signatures, plates or maps, including folding, stitching and trimming.

Specifications call for the best binding and most approved material now in general use.

The Board reserves the right to reduce or increase the number of copies of all publications, and to order any report or pamphlet bound in any manner specified in this class at contract prices.

Samples of binding and full information will be furnished upon application to the Clerk of Board.

LEGISLATIVE.

All bids shall be to include all the printing, binding and stationery of the General Assembly at the same prices and under the same conditions as supplies named in the specifications.

All orders for supplies for the General Assembly must be made upon the Board in the same manner as required in ordering for State offices and institutions, and all requisitions shall be made out by the Clerk of Board, and all bills certified by him as correct according to contract, before same will be allowed.

All supplies for the General Assembly shall first pass the inspection of the Clerk of Board before the same is delivered to the House and Senate, and by him certified as proper and correct according to order.

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.

All work shall be delivered to the departments in the State House free of charge.

All articles furnished under this contract must be, in every respect, of the most improved material now in use.

All articles furnished or work done, not enumerated in specifications, must be furnished in the most economical manner practicable, and at prices not to exceed the regular market price for similar articles.

The contractor must at all times be able to furnish the exact quality of supplies named in specifications, but if by mutual agreement between Board and party ordering and contractor any different kind is substituted, the quality and price shall not exceed that named for similar articles in specifications.

In accepting the contract for general printing, binding and stationery, the contractor will be required to do the work promptly and without unnecessary delay, in a good, workmanlike manner. If at any time the contractor fails to do the work authorized by the State within a reasonable length of time, the Board reserves the right to order the work done elsewhere, and have the bill sent to the contractor, who shall make out his bill to the State for the work done at contract price and no more.

Proofs and revises of all description of printing shall be furnished and delivered without charge to the State.

All charges for changes from original copy, after type is set, shall be certified to as having been ordered by the officer making such changes, and must be accompanied by an affidavit from the contractor or his agent, sworn to before a notary public, certifying that such charge is just and proper.

All bids shall be to furnish the exact amount of printing, stationery and binding ordered, at prices bid in specifications. In no case will contractor be allowed to charge for more than the exact amount of any article ordered.

All supplies ordered shall first pass the inspection of the Clerk of Board before the same is delivered to any department, which order shall be accompanied with an itemized statement giving name and quantity of articles delivered, which will be receipted for by proper officer receiving said goods, and a duplicate of which shall be left with said officer.

All orders for supplies must be made upon the Board, whereupon the Clerk of the Board will make out requisition for supplies required to be furnished through the contractor; and in no case will contractor be allowed to fill an order for supplies for the State without having first obtained a requisition for same from the Board.

All requisitions and bills shall contain the size, name and quality of paper used, and full name and number of article of stationery ordered. In no case will Board entertain any requisition or bill made out with pencil.

The printed copies of the session laws of the General Assembly required by law must be delivered to the Secretary of State within forty days from the date on which last copy shall be furnished the contractor by the Secretary of State.

In determining the lowest and best bid, quality of samples will be taken into consideration. All samples submitted must be properly labeled as to size, weight and quality and number of items for which samples are intended to cover, together with name of bidder on each sample submitted. All samples submitted to be flat, not folded, or put up in roll, and shall remain the property of the State.

Submit the following list of samples, which must be whole sheets of the sizes indicated, unless otherwise specified:

CLERK'S STATEMENT TO BOARD.

BUREAU OF PUBLIC PRINTING, BINDING AND STATIONERY,
INDIANAPOLIS, September 23, 1903.

Board of Commissioners of the Bureau of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery:

GENTLEMEN—I herewith submit a statement showing, approximately, the principal transactions of the State with the contractor for the general printing, binding and stationery for State offices, institutions, General Assembly, State Board of Election Commissioners and Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, covering the period of the present contracts.

Have made no list showing the number of miscellaneous pamphlets, etc., printed, as they vary so much in size and quantity, and would probably be of little or no assistance to bidders. Samples of practically all the printing done for the State the past two years are on file and can be seen by bidders at any time.

There will be printed annually, as provided by law, the reports of the Auditor of State, State Horticultural Society, Indiana Academy of Science, State Board of Agriculture, State Geologist, State Board of Health, State Board of Medical Registration and Examination, State Board of Tax Commissioners, Board of State Charities and Quarterly Bulletins, Treasurer of State, Hospitals for Insane, Institute for Blind, Institute for Deaf, Department of Inspection, Indiana Boys' School, Industrial School for Girls and Woman's Prison, School for Feeble-Minded Youth, Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, State Soldiers' Home, Documentary Journal (containing annual and biennial reports), and the Catalogues of Indiana University, Purdue University and State Normal School.

There will be printed biennially, as provided by law, the reports of the Adjutant-General, Attorney-General, Bureau of Statistics, Custodian of Public Buildings, Secretary of State, Labor Commission, Commissioner of Fisheries and Game, State Library, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Purdue University, Indiana University, State Normal School, Indiana State Prison and Indiana Reformatory.

The following is an approximate list of articles ordered for which bids are asked:

SPECIFICATIONS.

SUPREME AND APPELLATE COURT REPORTS.

The specifications call for the printing and binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, and all bids shall be to do the work strictly in accordance with the law authorizing the publication of said reports, and must be in quality and workmanship the same as sample to be seen in the office of Secretary of State. All of said work to be done under the supervision of the Reporter of the Supreme and Appellate Courts.

There will be printed of each volume of the Supreme Court Reports 1,500 copies, and of each volume of the Appellate Court Reports not to exceed 1,200 copies. Each volume of these reports will contain seven hundred pages, exclusive of index.

The work to be done is specified as follows:

The paper used in printing the reports shall be a clear white, or tinted, sized and calendered, No. 1 law book paper, of the weight to the ream mentioned in the specifications, and the bids shall be per pound for the amount used, no allowance being made for waste, handling, freight or otherwise. If any other weight paper of the kind mentioned above is ordered, the price per pound shall be the same as that bid on in specifications.

The composition shall be bid for by the 1,000 ems, one measure, net, actual measure in the book, in accordance with the sizes of type used. No blank pages or other unreal charges will be allowed.

The price bid on per 1,000 ems shall include the cost of making up pages, locking up forms and delivering the same to the press.

The type used in printing the reports shall be modern face, unless otherwise ordered, and make a clear, neat appearance, and the spacing between words, etc., shall be the same as is done on all first-class book work.

The style of type and make-up on said reports shall be subject to the approval of the Reporter of the Supreme and Appellate Courts.

In spacing between the lines only six-to-pica leads shall be used, unless otherwise ordered by the Reporter.

The press work shall be bid for by the 100 impressions, 16 pages to form, including make-ready and ink.

The price bid for press work shall be to do first-class work and furnish the best quality of ink.

The binding of said reports shall be bid for by the single copy, complete, including all handling, assorting, folding, sewing of signatures, trimming, covering and lettering of title, etc.

The price bid for binding shall be to bind said reports in the best law sheep, and do first-class work, and to be counted by the number of copies actually delivered. In no case will the use of skiver be allowed in the binding of these reports.

Electrotype plates shall be bid for by the single page, to remain the property of the State, boxed and delivered to the Secretary of State, without extra charge. Said plates shall be delivered in first-class shape, and in the kind of boxes seen in the office of Secretary of State.

Reprint or subsequent editions from plates shall be bid for by the single copy, complete, for the actual number printed, using same quality of material bid on in specifications, including the handling of plates and delivering the reports to the Secretary of State. No extra charge on any reprint or subsequent edition will be allowed, unless the same is incurred at the instance or order of the Board, except the wrapping of same, which shall be at the price bid on in specifications.

The wrapping of the reports shall be bid for by the 100 copies, including all handling, paper of the kind and quality mentioned in specifications, and the stamping of the number of volume on wrapper, and shall be for the actual number wrapped.

All bids on these reports shall be to include the furnishing of clearly printed proof of the opinions of the Judges, and the syllabi, for the various corrections to be made therein, without any extra charge to the State, as follows:

(1) Galley proofs of the opinions of the Judges of said courts shall be furnished, and in such quantities as the Reporter may direct and can dispose of.

(2) Proofs of all syllabi shall be furnished in such manner as may be agreed upon between contractor and Reporter.

(3) All corrections and alterations in said proofs shall be made as indicated by the Reporter.

(4) After corrections and alterations in said proofs have been made, then the contractor shall furnish to said Reporter proofs of said corrections and alterations in page form.

(5) All corrections and alterations in said page proofs shall be made as indicated in said pages by the Reporter.

(6) After said page proofs have been returned and the corrections and alterations made as thereon indicated, contractor shall furnish to said Reporter proofs thereof in pages, eight of a kind, to be made into bunches, eight of a kind.

(7) After all corrections and alterations in said pages have been made as indicated by the Reporter and Judges, proof of which is furnished, the contractor shall furnish the Reporter proofs of all plates, and shall make all corrections and alterations therein indicated by said Reporter, and shall furnish proofs thereof.

(8) Proof of all opinions, syllabi, table of cases, index and all corrections shall be furnished by the contractor to the Reporter, and delivered at the office of the Reporter of the Supreme Court.

All charges of time for changes from original copy, after type is set, shall be certified to as having been ordered by the Reporter, and must also be accompanied by an affidavit from the contractor, or his agent or agents, certifying that such charge is just and proper.

No extra charge for alterations and corrections will be allowed unless such alterations or corrections are made at the instance of the Supreme Court Reporter, and by him certified as proper charge to the Bureau of Printing. In no case will charges be allowed for taking out and replacing imperfect type, either before or after same has been plated.

Each bidder, at the time of submitting his bid, shall also submit and deposit with the Board, payable to the order of the Governor of Indiana, a certified check in the sum of $1,000, as required in the general notice and specifications given elsewhere herein.

The contractor, in accepting the work of printing the Supreme and Appellate Court reports, will be required to give a bond in the sum of $15,000, to be approved by the Board.

Any bidder who shall be awarded the contract shall maintain an office in the city of Indianapolis of sufficient capacity for the transaction of all business under said contract, and all work done under said contract shall be performed within the State of Indiana. The contractor shall not assign or sub-let the same, or any portion thereof, to any other person without the written consent of the Board.

As to the quality of the binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports, special attention of bidders is called to the sample report to be seen in office of Secretary of State.

All bids shall be to deliver all reports and plates to the office of Secretary of State without extra charge.

All work on these reports shall be done, as furnished by the Reporter of the Supreme Court, speedily and without unnecessary delay; and should there be such delay, the contractor shall pay to the State, as a penalty therefor, the sum of $20.00 per day; the amounts due the State in such penalties to be subtracted from amount due contractor at any settlement period. Said penalty to be determined and imposed by the Board, if, after a thorough investigation by the Board, said delay has been found to be unnecessary and the fault of the contractor.

Bidders on Supreme and Appellate Court Reports must accompany bid with whole sheet samples of 50 and 60-lb. white paper, as bid on in item one; also sheet of 50-lb. 24x36 manilla paper, as bid on in item six. Paper must be properly labeled, with name of bidder thereon.

In accepting the contract the contractor is required to accept all the conditions set out above in reference to the printing and binding of the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports and the furnishing of proof to the Reporter, as required herein.

SUMMARY.

Number of Item.	Bids for Supreme and Appellate Court Reports.	Basis of Calculation.	Amount.

7	Reprint or subsequent editions from plates, complete, per copy	500 "	85

In the preparation of the above specifications the Board has endeavored to fully explain and classify items in such a way that bids may be made intelligently and with equal fairness to the State and bidders.

WINFIELD T. DURBIN,
DANIEL E. STORMS,
DAVID E. SHERRICK,
Board of Commissioners of Public Printing, Binding and Stationery.

THOS. J. CARTER,
Clerk of Board.

While the present contract for the general printing, binding and stationery is about 25 per cent. higher, and the Supreme and Appellate Court Reports' contract about 10 per cent. higher than the last contracts, they are not unreasonably high, when the advance in the price of labor and material is taken into consideration. With the exception of the last contracts, the present contracts are probably as low as the State has had since the present law governing such contracts has been in force.

These very satisfactory contracts the past few years are due largely to the fact that the Board furnishes bidders with a correct list of articles used the previous two years as a basis for the succeeding two years in extending prices in order to ascertain the lowest bid. By this method it not only leaves no doubt as to the lowest bid, but prevents bidding very high on articles extensively used and very low on others, as the exact quantity used is figured against the prices bid, and would increase the totals in the same proportion.

While it would be difficult to give a correct estimate as to the difference in the cost of the State's printing since the present method of bidding has been in operation, it is safe to say there has been a saving of several thousand dollars.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THOS. J. CARTER,
Clerk of Bureau of Public Printing.

BIENNIAL REPORT

OF

CHARLES W. MILLER,

ATTORNEY-GENERAL OF INDIANA.

JANUARY 1, 1902, TO OCTOBER 31, 1904.

HON. WINFIELD T. DURBIN, Governor of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to herewith submit to you my biennial report of the work of this office, from the first day of January, 1902, to the thirty-first day of October, 1904, each inclusive, pursuant to the provisions of the law.

The increase of population and wealth of the state, the consequent development and improvement of all municipalities, the increased duties and responsibilities of the different departments and multifarious boards of the state, have brought to this office a corresponding increase of labor and responsibility.

The amount of litigation is necessarily increasing, as well as the number of criminal cases in the supreme and appellate courts. In the last two years a great many important cases, both civil and criminal, have been tried and briefed in the different courts, both state and federal. With what success, the records will disclose.

I have appended to this report a list of the cases decided or pending in the supreme and appellate courts, the character of crime, and the reports wherein such decisions may be found, where the same have been decided. This schedule is marked "Exhibit B."

I also append to this report a list of the cases pending in the lower courts, state and federal. This list is marked "Exhibit C."

Some of the civil and criminal cases conducted by my department were of such interest to the public in general that I briefly call attention to the same in the succeeding portion of this report.

I further make a part of this report the opinions rendered in said period to the various state officers on various subjects. These are the official opinions of the department.

Under the law the Attorney-General is only required to render opinions to officers of the state, but, under a system that has grown up, the Attorney-General is required by custom to write a great many opinions, covering almost every phase of our government, in all of the subordinate municipalities. These unofficial opinions, if presented, would make a report entirely too voluminous for any practical purpose.

The official opinions rendered by me are given under a schedule marked "Exhibit A," and those rendered by my predecessor, Hon. W. L. Taylor, between the time of filing his report and the expiration of his term, are given as "Supplement No. 1."

In the period included in this report I have collected and paid over to the state and the county treasuries of Indiana the sum of $53,202.64. A schedule of these collections is appended to this report and marked "Exhibit D."

These collections were from various sources and represent the aggregate of a great number of small amounts, there having been no one collection in excess of $3,000.

IMPORTANT CASES.

During my term, among the most important cases in which I have been interested, were the cases of—

State, ex rel William P. Maxwell, Coroner, v. John S. Dudley, 161 Ind. 431. This was a proceeding under section 2065e, Burns' R. S. 1901, pertaining to the suppression of mob violence, providing that if a prisoner should be taken from the sheriff and lynched, it should be conclusive evidence of failure on the part of such sheriff to do his duty, and his office should thereby be vacated; the coroner should immediately succeed to and perform the duties of sheriff until the successor to such sheriff should have been duly appointed.

This is a case arising out of the lynching of one Dillard, in Sullivan county. A hearing, under proper proceedings, was had before the Governor, at which evidence was taken; at which hearing the Governor determined that the sheriff had not done his full duty; but the sheriff refused to surrender the office and refused to permit Maxwell, who was the coroner, to exercise the duties of sheriff. Maxwell brought proceedings in quo warranto for possession of the office.

Dudley assailed the constitutionality of the act in question. The supreme court, however, did not pass upon this question, but determined that Maxwell had no interest in the office, and hence could not maintain the suit.

In the case of Terry v. Byers et al., 161 Ind. 360, Charles Terry brought a habeas corpus proceeding against Joseph P. Byers, who at that time was superintendent of the Indiana Reformatory at Jeffersonville, alleging that he was entitled to a parole under the indeterminate sentence law before the expiration of the maximum time of his sentence.

On the hearing the supreme court decided that the punishment to be adjudged in the conviction under the indeterminate sentence law is for the maximum time prescribed by the statute; that the discretion of the board of managers of the Indiana Reformatory, under said indeterminate sentence law, to terminate an imprisonment, when the rules and requirements of such reformatory had been obeyed and performed according to the provisions of the act, is not subject to the supervision or control of the court; that the word "may" as used in the last sentence of section 1906b, Burns' R. S. 1901, grants to the board permission, liberty or discretion to terminate an imprisonment when the rules and requirements have been fulfilled, and does not render the provision mandatory.

In the case of Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company v. Town of Whiting, 161 Ind. 228, the question of the constitutionality of the act of the general assembly of February 28, 1901, conferring upon town clerks all the powers of justices of the peace, was assailed.

After a careful consideration, the court held that said act was a constitutional and valid act, and that the same constituted the clerk of such town a court.

In the case of Clark L. Lindsay v. James A. White and John Uhlrich et al. v. William H. O'Brien, the constitutionality of the apportionment act of the general assembly of 1903 was assailed, and the same was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court.

In the case of Harry B. Smith v. State, in the United States Supreme Court, 191 U. S. 38, the validity of the act known as "The Mortgage Deduction Act" was assailed by a writ of error from the decision of the supreme court of the state to the United States Supreme Court.

The United States Supreme Court dismissed the appeal, thus leaving the decision of the state supreme court as final law upon this question.

In the case of Wedding v. Meyler, in the United States Supreme Court, 192 U. S. 573, the right of the state to concurrent jurisdiction with Kentucky over the Ohio river was presented upon a writ of error from a decision of the court of appeals of Kentucky.

The contention of the state in this case was upheld, and the United States Supreme Court decided that the state of Indiana had concurrent jurisdiction for judicial process on the Ohio river.

In the case of Fargo v. Hart, in the United States Supreme Court, 193 U. S. 490, the question of the manner of assessment of certain express companies by the State Board of Tax Commissioners was presented.

The State Board of Tax Commissioners had considered, in their assessment of the American and National Express companies, certain stocks and bonds held by said companies as investments, in making up the total amount of assessable property to be apportioned upon a mileage basis, in the state of Indiana.

The contention of the state in this case was not sustained, the Supreme Court holding that in ascertaining the value per mile of lines and routes of express companies for assessment, only such values could be considered as were created by the unit of use of the various items of the tangible property used in the operation of said company.

While this contention necessarily greatly reduced the valuation of a great many express companies, yet it settled questions that had been vexatious and annoying to the State Board of Tax Commissioners, and clearly defined their powers, in so far as they related to the assessment of express companies.

The case of State v. Angeline Phipps et al. was a suit to quiet the title of the state in the lands held by the Deaf and Dumb Institute. For a number of years the state has been desirous of disposing of the real estate occupied by the Deaf and Dumb Institute in the city of Indianapolis, but has been prevented from doing so on account of the doubt cast upon the right of the state to dispose of these grounds.

To relieve the state from this difficulty, I instituted the above entitled suit to quiet the title, and also began a systematic effort to secure quit claim deeds from all the heirs to said property. This I accomplished, securing forty quit claim deeds to said property from persons living in different parts of the United States, and also obtaining judgment quieting the title in the state.

The state has since sold a portion of this property for $140,000.

The case of State of Indiana, ex rel. Sherrick, Auditor, v. John Bradley et al. was a proceeding to quiet the title to seventy-two lots in Indianapolis that had been forfeited to the state under university loans.

These lots were incumbered by all kinds of liens. There were 114 defendants in this case, and every kind of a lien known to the law was upon some of these lots. A judgment was obtained, quieting the title to all of the lots and clearing them of the liens.

In the Court of Claims, two cases of importance are now pending; one, William B. Hord v. State, is for $80,000 for legal services in the collection of what is known as the "War Claim" of $636,000. A judgment has been obtained in the Court of Claims in favor of the state. It is now pending on appeal.

The case of P. H. McCormick v. State is a claim for extras and changes made in the building of the cell house at the Indiana Reformatory. The amount involved is $65,000.

Eight weeks has been spent in taking the evidence in this case, and it is now pending before a commissioner.

Within the last year I have successfully driven out of business the Old Wayne Mutual Life Insurance Company, a company that for a number of years has been a source of great annoyance to the department, and had caused a vast amount of criticism of our insurance laws. The company is now in the hands of a receiver, and its affairs will be wound up by the courts.

I also closed up the Homestead Building and Loan Association, a fraudulent concern that was operating under the guise of the building and loan laws, and was proceeding to cause a great many citizens to sustain loss. I am pleased to say that it was closed up before a great amount of harm had been done.

I also closed up the affairs of the Commercial Trust Company, a company that had been organized through fraudulent representations to the Auditor of State, as to its paid-up stock.

It is satisfactory to note that every depositor was paid in full through the operations of the receiver.

In escheated estates a decision has been handed down by the supreme court, in the Donaldson case, involving the possession of a valuable tract of land in Lawrence county, sustaining the contention of the state.

The case is now pending on a petition for rehearing.

In the case of the escheated estate of Joachim Kat, involving some sixty acres of land in Lake county, a decision has been obtained, sustaining the contention of the state, and escheating the land to the state.

Suit has been brought against the heirs of one Lehman, involving real estate in the city of Indianapolis of the value of some $14,000. Under the facts in this case I have no doubt the state will be successful in recovering this property.

CRIMINAL CASES INVOLVING QUESTIONS OF GENERAL INTEREST.

In Levy v. State, 161 Ind. 251, the court upheld the transient merchant act of 1901, which made it unlawful for a transient merchant to transact business without first obtaining a license, upon the payment of certain fees, from the county auditor, in the county where the business was to be conducted.

The act was declared to be constitutional in all respects, as a legitimate exercise of the police power of the state, for the protection of the people against the imposition and fraud frequently practiced by irresponsible transient merchants, whose business closely resembles that of hawkers and peddlers, involving the same methods of deceiving the people, and generally practiced by them in disposing of their goods and wares.

In State v. Harrison, 162 Ind. 542, commonly known as the "Alley Saloon Case," the court held that paved alleys, sixteen feet wide, passing through the middle of a block, although designated as streets by the common council of the city, are not streets or highways within the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors, by virtue of a license, in any room, unless it is arranged either with windows or glass doors, or so that the whole of it may be in view from the street or highway.

In Atkinson v. State, 70 N. E. R. 560, the appellant was conducting a saloon in a room containing a partition dividing the room into two parts, the bar-room being in the front part and a pool-room in the rear.

It was contended that the license granted appellant covered only the part wherein the bar was located, and that admitting persons other than members of his family in the part called the pool-room on prohibited days was not a violation of the statute.

Held: That to permit persons not members of the licensee's family to enter on Sunday the part of the room occupied by the pool tables constituted a violation of Burns' Ann. Stat. 1901, section 7283c, making it unlawful for a licensed liquor dealer to permit others than members of his family to enter on days when the sale of liquor is prohibited, the room where liquors are sold.

In the case of State v. Dudley, 71 N. E. R. 975, the question involved was whether a license to sell intoxicating liquor at retail under the statutes of this state would protect an employe of the licensee from liability for sales made by him as such, within the period for which the license was granted, but after the licensee had permanently changed his residence to a county in this state other than that in and for which the license was granted.

Held: That section 7283h, Burns' R. S. 1901, providing that no license shall be granted "to any person other than the actual owner and proprietor," who must be "a continuous resident of the township in which the application for license is made, at least ninety days" prior thereto, contemplates that the licensee shall be a continuous resident there during his enjoyment of the privilege, and, on his permanent removal to another town, the license will not protect an agent employed in carrying on the business.

I am pleased to state that with the aid of an efficient and faithful corps of assistants and clerical help the interests of the state have been carefully protected, litigation has not been permitted to lag, and the work of the office is brought up to date and performed as it accrues.

I have the honor to be, very truly yours,

CHAS. W. MILLER,
Attorney-General.

EXHIBIT A.

PHARMACY LAW—REGISTERED PHARMACIST.

January 21, 1903.

Hon. George W. Sloan, Secretary State Board of Pharmacy, 604 North Meridian Street, City:

Dear Sir—Your letter of January 21st calling my attention to the fact that "a man formerly located at Martinsville, Indiana, now living at Mount Sterling, Kentucky, was registered June 5, 1899, as registered pharmacist under section 3, qualifications paragraph 'First.' He failed to re-register in 1901, and has now applied for the renewal dated to expire July 1, 1903." Your question is: "Has the board of pharmacy the right to refuse the renewal under these circumstances? and would he not be required to re-register by examination?"

I have examined the portions of the law designated by you, and am of the opinion that the party in question would be required to re-register by examination.

VETO POWER—RIGHTS AND POWERS OF GOVERNOR.

February 7, 1903.

To the Governor:

In your communication of the 6th you ask me for information as to your rights and powers in the exercise of the veto power, in the following particulars:

I. How are the "three days" provided for in section 14, art. V, of the constitution (being §140, R. S. 1901), to be computed?

II. Can the Governor return a bill to the house where it originated within the third day, if, at the time such return is endeavored to be made, such house is adjourned until another day?

III. If the Governor should desire to return a bill, with his veto and objections, to the house where it originated on the third day after it is presented to him, and at the time he so desires to return it such house has adjourned to another day, what course should he pursue?

I.

Section 14 of art. V of the constitution of the state provides as follows:

> "Every bill which shall have passed the general assembly shall be presented to the Governor; if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it shall have originated, which house shall enter the objections, at large, upon its journals, and proceed to reconsider the bill. If, after such reconsideration, a majority of all the members elected to that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, with the Governor's objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and, if approved by a majority of all the members elected to that house, it shall be a law. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within three days, Sunday excepted, after it shall have been presented to him, it shall be a law without his signature, unless the general adjournment shall prevent its return, in which case it shall be a law, unless the governor, within five days next after such adjournment, shall file such bill, with his objections thereto, in the office of Secretary of State, who shall lay the same before the general assembly, at its next session, in like manner as if it had been returned by the Governor. But no bill shall be presented to the Governor within two days next previous to the final adjournment of the general assembly."

By the provisions of this act the Governor, if he desires to veto a bill and make his veto effective, must return the bill to the house where it originated, with his objections, within three days (Sunday excepted) after it shall have been presented to him. Section 1304, R. S. 1901, provides as follows:

> "The time within which an act is to be done, as herein provided, shall be computed by excluding the first day and including the last. If the last day be Sunday, it shall be excluded."

This statute is in conformity with practically all the decisions in regard to the computation of time.

In the case of Monroe v. State, ex rel., 157 Ind. 45, "a day," when used in the statute, was held to mean a calendar day of twenty-four hours; so that, under the constitution, you have three days of twenty-four hours, or seventy-two hours (Sunday excepted), in which to return a bill with your veto and objections, to the house where it originated.

II.

The right of the Governor to have three days after a bill is presented to him in which to determine whether he will veto it is a constitutional right, and can not be abridged, either directly or indirectly, by any act of the general assembly.

The case of Harpending v. Haight, 39 Cal. 189, is a case that exactly covers this question. The California constitution, in regard to the veto power, is identical with the constitution of our state, except that ten days are given to the Governor, instead of three, for the return of a bill, with his veto.

In the Harpending case a bill was presented to the Governor and the Governor endeavored to return it to the house where it originated within ten days, but found that house adjourned, and it was not presented until afterward.

In a lengthy and well reasoned opinion the supreme court of California held that the legislature could not curtail the power of the executive, in exercising the veto power, by an adjournment, and, speaking to this point, Justice Wallace says:

> "It was the duty of the messenger to communicate to the Senate the message which he bore from the Executive on that occasion. This was to be done in the most direct manner that circumstances would permit. It was impossible for him to immediately announce it to the Senate, for that body was not in session. It had a right to be in recess, if it desired so to be, and it was not in the power of the Executive or his messenger to recall it to its sittings. But its right to be in recess was no greater or higher than was the right of the Executive to return the bill in question for its reconsideration; nor is there any reason why the free exercise of these admitted rights upon the part of the Senate and Governor, respectively, should bring them into collision. The Senate has the unqualified, constitutional power to adjourn for three consecutive days. (Art. IV, sec. 15, Constitution). It must often happen that these three days will include the last day allowed the Executive for the exercise of the veto power against the passage of a particular Senate bill.

"Now, if the mere fact of the recess of the Senate, thus constitutionally taken, does operate to defeat, in a measure, the exercise of the veto power conferred on the Executive by the constitution, then we have the strange spectacle of an irreconcilable conflict between the several clauses of that instrument itself, by which the Senate, by the mere exercise of its own admitted constitutional authority to adjourn, violates the equally clear constitutional right of the Executive to have it kept in session.

"We are of opinion that the adjournment of the Senate on March 31st did not curtail the veto power of the Executive over the bill in question, nor should it even have embarrassed him in its exercise. The return should have been made in such manner as the circumstances would permit; it should, at all events, have left the bill and message beyond the Executive control, and, if need be, in the immediate custody of some proper person who would be likely to deliver it to the Senate at the first opportunity. The best return that the circumstances would admit, would, in our judgment, be a proper return. The maxim lex non cogit ad impossibilia would be applicable to such a condition of affairs. We know of no other rule upon which the clear right of the Governor to make the return to the Senate can be reconciled with the equally clear right of the Senate to be in recess at the time."

The rule of law above laid down is fully supported by the opinion on the soldiers' voting bill, found in 45 New Hampshire, on page 607, and in the case of Corwin v. Comptroller General, 6 Rich. (S. C.), 390; also, in American and English Encyclopedia of Law, vol. 23, page 188.

III.

As to how the Governor should proceed in a case where he desires to return a bill with his veto and objections, and at the time he so desires to return the bill, the house where the bill originated is not in session, must be governed by the circumstances of each case. As is said in the Harpending case, "The best return that the circumstances would admit would, in our judgment, be a proper return;" and, continuing in the same case, the court further say:

> "We think that there can be no doubt that when the Executive messenger arrived at the Senate chamber, and found that the Senate had adjourned for the day, he might have delivered the bill and message into the hands of the Lieutenant-Governor, President of the Senate, the Secretary, or other officer of the Senate, or to one of the Senators, or to any proper person connected with or engaged in the service of the Senate, to be called to its attention as soon as an opportunity might thereafter offer; and that such a delivery would have been sufficient in law, as though it had been delivered to the presiding officer or Secretary of the Senate, in open session."

Under the decision in the Harpending case, the bill must be returned to the house where it originated, within the time specified in the constitution; that is, it must be presented to the house, if in session, and if not in session, then it must be placed in the hands of some person connected with the house where the bill originated, to be presented to such house at the earliest opportunity. If the Governor, upon finding the house adjourned, retains possession of the bill until the expiration of the constitutional period, then the bill becomes a law.

PHARMACY LAW—TURPENTINE, RESIN AND SULPHUR—SALE BY GENERAL MERCHANT.

February 14, 1903.

Mr. George W. Sloan, Secretary Indiana Board of Pharmacy, City:

Dear Sir—Replying to your inquiry of the 12th, in which you ask—

> "Can a general merchant sell turpentine, resin and sulphur without violating the general pharmacy law?"

By section 8 of the pharmacy law of 1899 (being §8136h, Burns' R. S. 1901), it is made unlawful for any person to sell at retail any chemical, drug or medicine which is poisonous, or which contains poison, etc.

Further, in said act it is provided that nothing in this act shall apply to or in any manner interfere with the business of the general merchant in selling any of the following articles, to wit: Patent or proprietary medicines, which are not poisonous; and then follows a list of staple medicines, which list does not include turpentine, resin and sulphur.

The fact that turpentine, resin and sulphur are not enumerated in this list does not necessarily make them prohibited drugs under this section. The true test is—Are they poisonous chemicals, or do they contain poison?

If neither of said chemicals belongs to the class known in chemistry as poisonous, nor contains any ingredient belonging to such poisonous class, then it is not a violation of the law for any person to sell the same.

The specific enumeration of chemicals that may be sold, provided for in the latter part of section 8, includes a great many medicines that do contain poison, for instance, paregoric.

It was evidently the intention of the legislature that persons could engage in the sale of chemicals that were not poisonous, and did not contain poison, and that further they could engage in the sale of certain chemicals that might be termed poisonous, but which were limited by the specification in the act.

The provision in the latter part of said secton—"and such other articles as may from time to time be allowed by the board of pharmacy"—gives the board the right to specify other medicines, even though they contain poisons, which merchants might sell without violating the law.

INDIANA INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS—POWERS AND DUTIES OF BOARD OF MANAGERS.

February 18, 1903.

Mrs. John B. Elam, President Board of Managers Indiana Industrial School for Girls, 1320 Park Avenue, City:

Dear Madam—I herewith submit to you my opinion on the questions you ask in your letter to me of February 16th, touching the powers and duties of the Board of Managers of the Indiana

Industrial School for Girls, relative to the commitment, age and detention of an inmate of the aforementioned institution.

I.

Section 8276, R. S. 1901, provides (in part) that—

> "All girls who may be now or hereafter committed to said reform school, by virtue of any existing law, or laws which may be hereafter passed, shall be detained in, or committed to such reform school until they respectively attain the age of twenty-one years."

Where, by the use of clear and unequivocal language, capable of only one meaning, anything is enacted by the legislature, it remains the law and must be enforced. Courts can not add to or take from the expressed will of the legislature. It is only their duty to interpret and construe, and, unless legislative acts are contrary to the constitution, they can not in any respect be modified or changed by the courts.

Here the language is clear, and the statute is not open to construction; hence, your action in this matter is bound by the law and not by the judgment of the court contained in the commitment.

II.

The age of the inmate, as contained in the commitment, is the finding and judgment of the court, and can not be disputed, except that its authenticity might possibly be attacked by a showing that it had been altered or forged. The facts therein can not be disputed, neither by the girl herself, nor her father, nor any one in her behalf, and, under the commitment—unless you deem it wise to parole the inmate—it is not only your right, but your duty, to detain her until she attains the age of twenty-one years, as provided by law.

MEDICAL LAW—$5-$10 APPLICATION FEE.

February 23, 1903.

Hon. W. T. Gott, Secretary State Board of Medical Registration and Examination:

Dear Sir—Replying to your inquiry of the 23d: Under the provisions of the act of the general assembly of 1899, an applicant for a certificate to practice medicine and surgery in this state, who desires to secure the same upon a diploma, shall pay to the board the sum of ten dollars at the time of making such application. If he desires to be examined by your board, he pays, at the time of his application, the sum of twenty-five dollars.

It is further provided that the payment of said sum of twenty-five dollars shall entitle him to a re-examination in case of failure at the first or any subsequent examination.

These are all the fees that are provided for to be paid to your board by applicants for certificates. It is further provided, by section 2 of said act, that it is the duty of the treasurer of said board to pay quarterly all moneys received by the board to the treasurer of state. There is no provision in the law for the return of either of these application fees.

Therefore, when a person makes application and pays the ten or twenty-five dollar fee, as the case may be, into the treasury of your board, it becomes the property of the state, and should be turned into the state treasury. You have no authority to divert it from the channel prescribed by the statute, and you have no authority to return any portion of either of said fees after it has been so received.

You have no discretion over this fund, but must turn it into the state treasury, as prescribed by law, and you can not draw it out, except for the purposes prescribed in the statute.

INDIANA REFORM SCHOOL FOR BOYS—RIGHT OF MOTHER TO WAGES OF PAROLED INMATE.

February 24, 1903.

Hon. E. E. York, Superintendent Indiana Reform School for Boys, Plainfield, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In reply to your letter of recent date will say that the question you raise has not been decided by the courts of the state, so far as I can find; hence the matter is in doubt.

From the facts you state, my opinion is that the mother can not collect the wages of the boy now out on parole and in the employ of the glass company at Elwood.

The theory on which parents are entitled to the services and compensation therefor of their minor children is that such parents, being chargeable with their support, are entitled to any income of such minor children. In this case the boy is still under the jurisdiction of your institution, and, as I understand it, subject to recall at any time. The mother is in no way liable for the support of her boy, consequently not entitled to the compensation he may earn while under the jurisdiction of the reform school for boys.

VOTING MACHINE—CONSTRUCTION OF, ETC.

March 14, 1903.

Mr. A. R. Thompson, Secretary Indiana Voting Machine Commission, Aetna Building, City:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 12th you ask an interpretation of the law relating to the construction of a voting machine and the manner of voting for a multicandidate group on an "irregular ballot."

The voting machine act of 1901 (Acts of 1901, p. 591), section 10½, reads as follows:

> * * * "Except for presidential electors, and except in multicandidate groups, where the irregular balloting device requires otherwise, no irregular ballot shall be voted for any person for any office whose name appears on the ballot label on the front of the machine as a candidate for that office; any irregular ballot so voted shall not be counted. Any irregular ballot must be cast in its appropriate place on the machine, or it shall be void and not counted. * * * Such irregular ballot shall be deposited, written or affixed in or upon the receptacle or device provided on the machine for that purpose."

The questions submitted by you are as follows:

> "1. Can the voter, in voting for three members of the township advisory board, write on the roll the names of two candidates who have been regularly nominated and whose names are on the official ballot, and for one who was not nominated and whose name does not appear on the official ballot, and his vote be counted?"

"2. If a machine is so constructed, would it comply with the law?"

"3. Can a voter, in voting for three members of the township advisory board, write the names on paper of two candidates who have been regularly nominated, and whose names are on the official ballot, and for one whose name does not appear on the official ballot, and place the names in a receptacle on the machine, and his vote be counted?"

"4. If a machine is so constructed, would it comply with the law?"

As to the above questions will say that the machine so constructed would comply with the law, provided the receptacle or device on the machine for an irregular ballot would prevent and detect double voting for the multicandidate group.

The object of the law is to furnish a simple, convenient and satisfactory means of voting and of ascertaining the true result with facility and accuracy.

POLICE JUDGE—VACANCY IN JUDGESHIP OF POLICE COURT OF CITY OF INDIANAPOLIS.

March 20, 1903.

To the Governor:

In your communication of the 19th you ask:

"In case of a vacancy in the judgeship of the police court of the city of Indianapolis, how, and by whom, is such vacancy to be filled?"

Section 3894, Burns' Statutes of 1901, applies to the appointment of police judge for the city of Indianapolis. It is provided:

"In case of a vacancy in the office of police judge, the mayor shall appoint a successor, who shall hold the office during the unexpired term of his predecessor."

So that under this enactment of the legislature the power to appoint a police judge to fill a vacancy is vested in the mayor, unless such enactment is in contravention of the constitution of the state. By section 18 of article 5 of the constitution, being section 144 of Burns' Statutes of 1901, it is provided:

"When, during a recess of the general assembly, a vacancy shall happen in any office, the appointment to > which is vested in the general assembly; or when, at any time, a vacancy shall have occurred in any other state office, or in the office of judge of any court, the governor shall fill such vacancy by appointment, which shall expire when a successor shall have been elected and qualified."

If the constitution, by its distinct mandate, has provided how the appointment of the police judge of the court of a city like Indianapolis is to be made, it amounts to a prohibition of all other methods and modes for the same thing. This is a well settled principle of law.

Is the judge of the police court of the city of Indianapolis a "judge of any court?"

Section 3887, Burns' Statutes of 1901, provides for the establishment of a police court in the city of Indianapolis, and is as follows:

> "The judicial power of such city shall be vested in a police court. The officers thereof shall be one judge, a clerk, and a bailiff. The style of such court shall be: 'The police court of the city of ————————,' according to the name of such city. Said court shall be a court of record, and all its judgments, decrees, orders and proceedings shall have the same force and effect as those of the criminal or circuit courts, except that no judgment shall be a lien on the real estate otherwise than is provided by taking transcript, and the same shall be enforced in the same manner as liens by transcript from justices of the peace in similar cases."

Section 3888 provides for the seal of said court. Section 3889 provides for the election of a judge of said court.

By section 1, article 7 of the constitution of the state, being section 161 of Burns Statutes of 1901, it is provided:

> "The judicial power of the state shall be vested in the supreme court, in circuit courts and in such other courts as the general assembly may establish."

Section 3889, Burns Statutes of 1901, provides for the jurisdiction and powers of the judge of the police court of the city of Indianapolis, and, among other things, it is provided:

"He shall have and exercise within such county in which such city is located the powers and jurisdiction now or hereafter conferred upon justices of the peace in all crimes and misdemeanors except as otherwise herein provided. He shall have and exercise within such city the powers and jurisdiction now conferred upon mayors except as herein otherwise provided. He shall have exclusive jurisdiction of all violations of the ordinances of such city. He shall also have original concurrent jurisdiction with the criminal courts in all cases of petit larceny and all other violations of the laws of the state where the penalty provided therefor can not exceed a fine of five hundred dollars and imprisonment not exceeding six months, or either or both: Provided, That such police judge, in all such cases of petit larceny, if he find the prisoner guilty, shall assess his punishment; or, if, in the opinion of such police judge, the punishment he is authorized to assess is not adequate to the offense he may so find, and in such case the police judge shall hold such prisoner to bail for his appearance before the proper court, or commit him to jail in default of such bail."

From these provisions, it will be seen the police court of the city of Indianapolis is a court of record; that it has jurisdiction over offenses committed within the corporate limits of the city against the laws of the state; that it has the power to imprison; that it is known as a court, and that the presiding officer is denominated judge; that its establishment is provided for by section 1, article 7 of the constitution of the state.

It was held in the case of People v. Toal, 85 Cal. 333, that a city court was a "court" within the meaning of the constitutional term "inferior court."

In the case of Commonwealth v. Conyingham, 65 Pa. St. 76, it was held that the judicial officer of the city court of Scranton, who was denominated "recorder," was a judge of a court within the meaning of the constitutional provision providing that judges of courts should be elected by the people. To the same effect is the case of Commonwealth v. Gamble (Pennsylvania) 12 P. F. Smith 343; Groenvelt v. Burwell, I Salk. 200; Respub. v. Dallas, 3 Yeates 314; 1 Bac. Abr. 657.

In the case of Boys' and Girls' Aid Society v. Reis, 71 Cal. 627, it was held that a criminal tribunal presided over by a police judge in the city of San Francisco was "a court."

It has been clearly decided by our court that an officer exercising duties and powers under the laws of the state such as the police judge performs is a state officer under the constitution.

Platt v. Kirk, 44 Ind. 401;
Chambers v. The State, ex rel., 127 Ind. 365;
Howard v. Shoemaker, 35 Ind. 111.

In view of these statutory provisions and the cases cited, it is clear that section 3894 giving the mayor power to appoint a police judge to fill a vacancy in the city of Indianapolis is unconstitutional and void, being in conflict with section 18 of article 5 of the constitution; and that said section 18 vests in the governor the authority to fill such vacancy.

Therefore, in case a vacancy occurs in the office of police judge of the city of Indianapolis, it is my opinion that the authority to fill the vacancy by appointment is vested in the governor and none other.

PHARMACY—INDIANA BOARD OF PHARMACY—ELECTION OF SECRETARY FOR UNEXPIRED TERM.

March 20, 1903.

Mr. C. B. Woodworth, President Indiana Board of Pharmacy, 604 North Meridian Street, City:

Dear Sir—Your letter of March 17th, informing me of the election of Mr. H. E. Glick as secretary of the Indiana Board of Pharmacy, received.

As I understand it, Mr. Glick was elected as secretary for the unexpired term of George W. Sloan, deceased.

The statute does not provide for filling vacancies in the offices of president and secretary, but there can be no doubt that when a vacancy occurs in either office by death or otherwise, the board has the authority to fill the vacancy by election for the unexpired term.

Therefore the election of Mr. Glick as secretary is valid and binding.

WOMAN'S PRISON—INSANE.

March 21, 1903.

To the Governor:

In regard to the case of Marie Albright, an insane person now incarcerated in the Woman's Prison, I have to say that section 3228a of Burns Statutes of 1901 provides that the wardens of the prisons of the state shall report to you the cases of insanity that may occur in said prisons. Section 3228b provides that you shall, upon the receipt of said report, order the warden to convene a lunacy commission, to be composed of the prison physician, one resident physician and two justices of the peace of the township in which such prison is located, who shall investigate and examine into the mental condition of the person alleged to be insane, and shall report in detail in writing the condition of such person to the warden, and such warden shall transmit the same to you. After you have received the report of this commission, it is your duty to determine:

First. If the person shall be transferred to an insane asylum;

Second. To name the asylum to which such person shall be transferred;

Third. To name the conditions upon which the transfer shall be made. And under this head, you are authorized to parole the prisoner and order the transfer made; or you may order the transfer made without a parole, and upon the condition that such prisoner be returned to the prison when cured of the mental disease, provided such return is within the term for which such person was sentenced.

If such person is reported cured of insanity at the time of the expiration of his or her sentence, then he or she shall be discharged from the prison rolls and that fact reported by the warden to the superintendent of the insane hospital.

Upon your determination of the foregoing matters, it is your duty to order the warden or superintendent of the prison to transfer such a person to the insane asylum, naming it, and you also shall set out in such order the conditions upon which the transfer is made, and it is the duty of the warden to obey such instructions.

FISH AND GAME—"WATERFOWL"—CONSTRUCTION OF WORD.

April 15, 1903.

Hon. Z. T. Sweeney, Columbus, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your letter of April 14th, in which you ask whether the word "waterfowl" includes snipe.

It is commonly known that a snipe is a shore bird, or one which frequents places where there is water, such as streams, marshes, and so forth.

"Waterfowl" is defined in Webster's International Dictionary as "any bird that frequents the water, or lives about rivers, lakes, etc., or on or near the sea; an aquatic fowl." "Aquatic" is defined in the same dictionary as follows: "* * * or frequenting the margins of waters."

The Standard Dictionary defines "waterfowl" as "a bird that lives on or about fresh or salt water."

I know of no decisions of the courts upon this question, but from the above authorities it is my opinion that the word "waterfowl," as used in section 5 of the game law of 1901 (Acts 1901, p. 442, being §2211 Burns R. S. 1901) includes snipe and other birds of the same character.

FISH AND GAME—TRAVELING EXPENSES OF COMMISSIONER OF FISHERIES AND GAME.

April 20, 1903.

Hon. Z. T. Sweeney, Commissioner of Fisheries and Game, Columbus, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Your letters of April 14th received. I note that you call my attention to section 7, page 46, of the acts of the general assembly of 1899, and inquire if in my opinion the appropriation for traveling expenses is to be paid in quarterly instalments the same as your salary.

The act seems to read as you indicate—that your expenses are to be paid in quarterly instalments.

But this statute does not settle the matter. The legislature passed a general law in 1897 for the more perfect auditing of moneys disbursed by the different departments of the state government, which requires—"That the disbursements of money for any purpose by the departments of the state government, shall be by vouchers specifically itemizing in every particular the different purposes for which the treasury warrant is authorized. That these vouchers shall not be approved by any officer or officers authorized to approve the same, unless so itemized, giving the minutiae of detail, and when vouchers are presented to the auditor of state for warrants, they shall be accompanied by said itemized accounts and statements."

Under this general statute it will be necessary for you to itemize your account for expenses, which, of course, includes traveling expenses; and under the appropriation act of 1903, $800 is appropriated for traveling expenses.

LIBRARY COMMISSION—LAW CONCERNING.

April 25, 1903.

Hon. Jacob P. Dunn, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Your communication of April 21st received, in which you state:

"I beg to ask your opinion of chapter 92 of the Acts of 1903 (page 179) concerning the commission (referring to the public library commission). It amends sections two and three of the original law, but only section 3 is named in the title."

And you ask:

"1. In your opinion, does this make the first section of the act unconstitutional?

"2. If so, would it be the duty of the commission to assume the power of deciding it unconstitutional, and ignore it altogether, or would it treat it as the law until some competent court decides to the contrary?"

It is very clear that section 2 is not amended. In fact, it is too clear to ask a court to pass upon the constitutionality of said section.

The title of the act simply amends section 3, and the act itself can not be broader than the title. It would undoubtedly be the duty of the commission to assume that section 2 is not amended; the commission could not consistently hold otherwise.

DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTION—INCREASED PAY OF TEACHERS.

April 29, 1903.

Hon. Richard O. Johnson, Superintendent Institution for Education of Deaf, City:

Dear Sir—I have your long communication of April 25th, and in reply desire to state that the law to which you refer must be interpreted as to what it says. That law provides for increasing the salaries of married teachers in your institution who receive less than $1,200 per annum. There is only one meaning to it; all married teachers in your institution, regardless of whether they are deaf or hearing teachers, providing they are receiving less than $1,200 per annum, are entitled to an increase in their salaries. As to the amount of increase, it is a question for your board to determine.

This fund can not be used for any other purpose than that for which it is specified. Widows or widowers would not be included under the term "married teachers."

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—COMMISSION EXTENDED TO PROSECUTOR BY SECRETARY OF STATE.

May 5, 1903.

Hon. Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State:

Dear Sir—You ask regarding issuing a commission to a prosecuting attorney who has already received a commission, but whose term is extended by an act of the legislature, and in reply to the same will say that the constitution (sec. 171) provides:

> "There shall be elected in each judicial circuit, by the voters thereof, a prosecuting attorney, who shall hold his office for two years."

The constitution (sec. 228) also provides that—

> "All commissions shall issue in the name of the state, shall be signed by the Governor, sealed by the state seal and attested by the Secretary of State."

Burns' R. S. 1901, section 7569, provides—

> "All officers except members of the general assembly, specially designated in that constitution, who are elected by the general assembly or appointed by the Governor, and all judges shall be commissioned by the Governor."

You issue a commission on the result of an election for the term for which the officer is elected. In Schuck v. State, ex rel., 136 Ind. 63, the court held that the commission is nothing more than a convenient form of evidence that the title to an elective office has been vested in a person by the votes of the people.

You have issued a commission in this case, which is evidence of the fact that the prosecuting attorney was elected and duly entitled to the office from the time you issued the commission for the two years. The fact that the legislature extended this time by general act affecting all prosecutors in like circumstances does not give you the right to issue him a commission for that period.

The supreme court, in Moses v. Long, 64 Ind. 189, and Hench v. State, ex rel., 72 Ind. 296, held that the term of an office as fixed by law can not be changed or extended by a commission.

May 8, 1903.

Mr. W. E. Henry, State Librarian, Capitol, City:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 8th, in which you ask for a construction of section 5 of an act of the general assembly of 1899 (Acts of 1899, p. 134) and section 2 of an act of the general assembly of 1903 (Acts of 1903, p. 179):

Section 1 of the act of 1899, supra, provides that the state librarian shall be ex officio secretary of the commission. Section 5 of said act is as follows:

> "There is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $500 annually, to be expended under the direction of said commission, for clerical assistance to the state librarian and other expenses of said commission made necessary by this act, including traveling expenses of the members of said commission in the discharge of their duties."

Section 2 of the act of 1903, supra, is as follows:

> "That section 3 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows: Section 3. There is hereby annually appropriated from any funds in the treasury not otherwise specifically appropriated the sum of $7,000 to carry into effect the provisions of this act. All bills incurred by the commission or by its members and assistants under the law, when approved and certified by the president and secretary of the commission shall be presented to the state auditor, who shall issue warrants therefor upon the state treasury, which shall be in lieu of all sums now provided by the law for the carrying into effect the provisions of this act."

Construing these two sections together, as they must be, it appears that section 2 of the act of 1903 appropriating $7,000 "which shall be in lieu of all sums now provided by the law," eliminates the appropriation of any amount in section 5. Section 5 does not specify what amount shall be paid for clerical assistance, but provides that clerical assistants to the librarian shall be paid under the direction of the board. Under this provision the board have absolute power and control of the amount to be expended.

If the duties entailed upon you as secretary by the provisions of the law are of such a character as to require the services of an assistant, you would be entitled to such an assistant under section 5, whose compensation should be paid out of the amount appropriated in section 2 of the act of 1903. What this assistant would receive would be controlled by the commission, as the amount is not fixed in any provision of the act. This is plainly shown by section 2 of the act of 1903, as it is there provided that all bills incurred by the commission or its members and assistants, under the law, must be approved and certified by the president and secretary of the commission before being presented to the state auditor, and no payments could be made out of the $7,000 appropriation that was not thus approved and certified.

FT. WAYNE REAL ESTATE COMPANY AND CO-OPERATIVE HOME SECURING ASSOCIATION OF EVANSVILLE.

May 12, 1903.

Hon. Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State:

Dear Sir—I have examined the articles of association of the Fort Wayne Real Estate Company, submitted to me by you, together with the by-laws of said proposed association accompanying such articles.

The proposed company seeks to be incorporated under section 11 of the voluntary association act of the general assembly of 1901 (being section 4593 of Burns' R. S. 1901).

It is very evident that the legislative intention in enacting the voluntary association statute was to provide for the incorporation of the simpler forms of business enterprises.

There is no provision in this act authorizing the incorporation of any company whch, in the usual course of its business, will manage and control the funds of others, like trust companies, banks, building and loan associations, etc. All of these enterprises are specially provided for by particular enactments, and safeguards are thrown around them for the protection of those who have dealings with such institutions.

None of these safeguards are provided in the voluntary association act, and it is fair to presume that if the legislature had intended by this enactment that any company should be organized for any of the purposes that are usually and ordinarily restricted and guarded in their operations and means and authority given for ascertaining their financial standing and their manner of conducting business, the legislature in enacting the voluntary association act would have provided some of these safeguards and restrictions.

Section 4593, supra, provides for the organization of associations for the purpose of buying, holding and selling real estate, collecting rents and soliciting and writing insurance in the manner to be fully stated in such articles.

In view of the matters above stated I can not believe that the legislature intended by this section of the statute to provide for the organization of a company of the character shown by the articles and by-laws of the proposed company, submitted to me.

I am strengthened in this view by section 4463a, Burns' R. S. 1901, which provides that—

> "Every association heretofore or hereafter incorporated for the purpose of raising money to be loaned or advanced among its membes, shall be known in this act as a building and loan association."

Under this definition of the statute the proposed company is clearly a building and loan association. If it is a building and loan association, it can not be incorporated under the voluntary association laws. The two acts must be construed together, and when we find that it is the legislative will that every company organized for the purpose of raising money to be loaned or advanced among its members, shall be governed by the laws provided for building and loan associations, we must inevitably conclude that the legislature did not intend that a company organized for the same purposes should be organized under the voluntary association act.

If the company proposes to do a business that is within the definition of our statute, of a building and loan business, then it must comply with the provisions of the law for the incorporation of building and loan associations. In no material respect do the articles of association submitted to me do this.

The proposed company proposes to have an expense fund, which is expressly prohibited by our statute, and until it complies with the requirements provided for the incorporaton of building and loan associations, it should not be permitted to be incorporated in this state.

OILS—INSPECTION OF OILS.

May 15, 1903.

Hon. Sid Conger, Supervisor Oil Inspection, City:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 12th:

The act of the general assembly of 1901, providing for the inspection of oils, clearly expresses the intent that all oil held in the state for purposes of sale within the state, for illuminating purposes, should be inspected, and it is made the duty of the inspector to so inspect such oil. The act nowhere provides for, nor does it contemplate the inspection of oils to be sold without the state, but technically speaking, you are entitled to your fees for all oil that you inspect. Especially is this true if the inspection is upon the request of the person owning or possessing the oil.

The statute provides that the inspector shall prepare general regulations and rules for inspection, not inconsistent with the terms and provisions of this act, and such rules and regulations shall be binding on all inspectors in the state.

In the case you present, if the inspection of the tank referred to was had at the request of the Republic Oil Company they should pay for all oil inspected; if, however, only a portion of the tank was to be sold within the state, and no request was made for an inspection of the whole tank, then the inspection should be had upon the portion to be sold within the state, which could only be done when it was placed in barrels or casks; in other words, oil held within the state, but not for sale within the state, is not properly a subject of inspection.

If, however, the inspector is requested to inspect a tank of oil, a part of which is to be sold within the state and a part without the state, the inspector should have the fee for the inspection of all the oil he inspects, and he can not be compelled to inspect a tank, a part of which is to be sold within the state and a part without the state, unless the full fee for the whole tank is paid, or until the portion that is to be sold within the state and the portion that is to be sold without the state are separated.

INSANE HOSPITAL—REMOVAL OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES BY BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

May 20, 1903.

Hon. Amos W. Butler, Secretary Board of State Charities:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 19th you ask: First: Is the statute providing the qualifications necessary for a superintendent of the hospital for the insane directory or mandatory? Second: Does the board of trustees of one of these institutions, under the statutes, have the power to remove all officers and employes of such institution, and do they have the right to do this by resolution without any cause being assigned therefor?

Section 3035, Burns R. S. 1901, provides:

> "As soon as practical after organization, each said board shall meet and appoint a medical superintendent, to have charge and direction of the particular hospital to which each of said board of trustees may belong, and of its appurtenances, and of its insane, and other inmates who shall be reputably skilled by education and experience in the care of insane and their diseases, and in general medicine and surgery to serve while competent, efficient and attentive to duty and of good moral standing, but removable by the proper board of trustees on failure to comply with said requirements or any of them, the vacancy to be filled by said board, according to aforesaid requirements."

Section 3045 provides as follows:

"The medical superintendent shall be the chief medical officer as well as the general director of the institution, and shall give personal attention to the medical care of the inmates, as well as the general management of the hospital, its appurtenances and its entire population, and shall be responsible to the board of trustees for such care and management, and therefore he shall select and employ any such assistant physicians, clerks, attendants, skilled workers and servants as may be in his judgment necessary to enable him to properly perform the work with which he is charged, and make all necessary regulations for their government and direction, and for the administration of the hospital, subject only to the requirements and limitations herein set forth, and by and with the knowledge and consent of the board of trustees. A refusal of confirmation, however, on the part of the board of any such selection shall constitute a vacancy, and thereupon the superintendent shall make other selections until such consent be secured."

Section 3010b provides as follows:

"Said boards of trustees shall in the employment of superintendents, and confirmation of assistants and other employes, take into consideration only the qualifications and fitness of the persons selected to fill such places, and no person shall be selected or employed to fill any of such positions on account of his political belief or affiliations, and no superintendent, assistant or employe shall be dismissed from service on account of his political belief, faith or affiliations, and in the employment or dismissal of such superintendent, assistant or employe, the qualifications, character, merit and fitness shall be the only matters to be considered by such board of trustees in the selection or retention of such employes."

Section 3201 has the following provision:

"The trustees may, at their pleasure, remove from office any officer of said institution, except the superintendent; and they may remove the superintendent for incompetency, wilful neglect, or refusal to discharge any of his duties, or for any misconduct on his part which might render it improper for him to continue longer in his said office."

This statute was passed in 1853. Section 3010b was passed in 1897.

Under the provisions of the statutes as above set out, it is my opinion:

First. That the superintendent of an insane hospital should be a person "skilled by education and experience in the care of insane and their diseases, and in general medicine and surgery." This statute is probably mandatory; but such qualifications are matters of fact to be determined by the board of trustees making the appointment and in control of the institution.

Second. Sections 3201 and 3010b, supra, must be construed together. The former gives the board the right to dismiss employes. The latter provides upon what grounds such dismissal must be made, and recognizes the power given by section 3201 to remove employes. Neither section 3010b nor 3201 requires that any written cause, or any record shall be made of the cause of dismissal, but it does prohibit dismissal on account of political belief, faith or affiliation, and prescribes that such dismissal shall be based upon qualifications, character, merit and fitness only.

The board might have the right by a "sweeping resolution," without any cause being assigned, to remove or request the resignation of all, or any, of such employes, providing it was done on account of unfitness, either in merit, character, or any other deficiency of the person so removed, or requested to so resign.

TRAMPS—HOW CARED FOR.

May 20, 1903.

Hon. Amos W. Butler, Secretary Board State Charities:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 18th you ask how tramps may be legally cared for by sheriffs of counties, and what amount, if anything, may be received by the sheriff therefor; also in what manner and by whom such persons may be put into the jail, and by whom and in what manner they may be released.

Section 8191, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides:

> "There shall be established and kept in every county by authority of the board of county commissioners, and at the expense of the county, a prison for the safekeeping of prisoners lawfully committed."

By section 7945, Burns' R. S. 1901, the sheriff is made a conservator of the peace and shall arrest without process all persons who, within his view, shall commit any crime or misdemeanor, take them before the nearest justice of the peace of the county and detain them in custody until the cause of such arrest has been investigated.

Section 6528, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides for the fees and compensation the sheriff shall receive and, among other things, provides.

> "For boarding each person lawfully in his charge per day forty cents."

Construing these sections together, it would appear that the sheriff is entitled to receive forty cents per day for boarding each prisoner lawfully committed to the jail.

Persons are committed to jail by some process, either upon a warrant from a justice of the peace or other magistrate, or the court. A person picked up on the street by the sheriff, who has committed no crime in the presence of the sheriff, and where there is no charge placed against the prisoner so arrested, and no investigation had as to his having committed any crime, before any magistrate, he can not be said to be lawfully committed to the charge of the sheriff, and the county would have no authority to allow the sheriff for boarding such a prisoner.

The sheriff can only receive tramps when committed to the jail upon some charge before some magistrate. When so committed he is entitled to compensation at the legal rate for boarding such prisoner until he is released by order of the court before whom the charge is preferred.

The sheriff has no right upon his own authority to commit a person to jail and release him upon his own authority, and the county has no authority in law to pay for the board of a person so committed and so released.

The sheriff is entitled to forty cents a day for the board of prisoners, and this has been repeatedly held to mean a full day, and if the prisoner is in the jail for one meal, the sheriff is entitled to pay for only the one meal. If the prisoner is in the jail for one night and receives two meals, supper and breakfast, the sheriff would be entitled to pay for two-thirds of a day, and no more; if the prisoner is in jail one night, and does not receive any meal whatever, the sheriff is entitled to no pay whatever for boarding him.

This has been clearly decided in the cases of—

Presley v. Board of Com'rs, 80 Ind. 45;
City v. Parker, 31 Ind. 230;
Benson v. Indiana, 69 Ind. 353.

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT—ELECTION OF.

May 23, 1903.

Hon. F. A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 22d you ask: Can a county auditor cast the deciding vote in the election of a county superintendent where one-half of the votes of the trustees present are cast for one man and the other half is divided among two or three men?

The law prior to 1899 was to the effect that the trustees should meet and appoint county superintendents for their respective counties.

The legislature of 1899 amended this law so that it read that they should meet at the office of the county auditor and elect by ballot a county superintendent.

Under the prior law it was repeatedly held by our supreme court that a county superintendent could be elected by resolution, and that in case of a tie, a quorum being present, or in case of the vote of one-half of a quorum present for a resolution for the election of a county superintendent, the auditor could cast the deciding vote, but none of these cases are in point under the present law. It is provided by section 5900, Burns' R. S. 1901, that in case of a tie vote the auditor shall cast the deciding vote.

The Standard Dictionary defines a "tie" as—> "An exact equality in number for and against, said of a vote in a deliberative body."

Bouvier's Dictionary defines a "tie" as—

> "When two persons receive an equal number of votes at an election there is said to be a tie. Neither is elected."

Applying these definitions, if, in a county where there were six trustees, and A should receive three votes and B, C and D should each receive one vote, there could not be said to be a tie, as no one has received an equal number of votes with A.

It is, therefore, my opinion that in such a case the auditor would not be entitled to cast the deciding vote, but is only entitled to cast the deciding vote when the votes of the county are equally divided between two candidates.

Of course this opinion is given upon the assumption that the distribution of one-half of the votes among different candidates is bona fide and not for the purpose of defeating an election.

TAXATION—OF LOT OR TRACT OF LAND WITH BUILDING THEREON, BELONGING TO RELIGIOUS, ETC., SOCIETY, WHEN PART OF BUILDING IS RENTED, ETC., FOR HIRE.

June 4, 1903.

To the State Board of Tax Commissioners, City:

Gentlemen—In your communication of the 4th you ask:

I.

In the assessment of real estate consisting of a lot or tract of land with a building thereon, belonging to a religious, literary, scientific, charitable or benevolent association, a part of which building is used by such organization, and a part of which is rented or leased or used by persons other than members of such organization, for hire, how much, if any, of such lot or land, upon which such building is situate, shall be exempt from taxation?

The answer to this question is not made entirely clear by our statutes, or the decisions of our supreme court. The only decision that tends to throw any light upon the question is the case of City of Indianapolis v. Grand Master, etc., of the Grand Lodge of Indiana, 25 Ind. 518.

Upon the examination of this case (as shown by the report of the same and the original papers, which I have taken the trouble to examine), it appears that the city of Indianapolis had levied taxes upon a certain lot and the building erected thereon in the city of Indianapolis by the Grand Lodge of Indiana. The Grand Lodge brought suit to enjoin the collection of this tax, averring that the said Grand Lodge was a charitable institution, and that the property was devoted to charitable purposes, and hence exempt from taxation.

The city of Indianapolis answered in several paragraphs; among others was the second paragraph which averred that "the property, except one-eighth thereof, is leased and used by various persons for vending merchandise and exhibiting performances, such as theaters, concerts, etc. Wherefore, it is insisted that seven-eighths of the property is subject to taxation."

It will be observed that in this answer the term "property" is used. In the original papers the answer describes this property as "the property described in the complaint." The property described in the complaint was both the lot and the building situate thereon.

A demurrer was filed to this paragraph of answer, which questioned its competency as a defense. This demurrer was overruled and the answer held good. Upon this ruling the question was presented to the supreme court and upon this question the court held that, it being the policy of the state to subject all private property to the burden of taxation, it is not fair to assume that any had been intended to be relieved from such taxation, unless the legislature had clearly expressed such a purpose, and that exemption statutes must receive a strict construction; and, continuing, on page 522 the court say:

> "Applying this rule, it can not be held that the use of the building by lessees for theaters, concerts and mercantile purposes, is a use by a charitable institution, within the meaning of the statute, and it follows that the first and second paragraphs of the answer were good on demurrer, being argumentative denials of the essential fact alleged in the first paragraph of the complaint, that the building was used by the plaintiff for charitable purposes."

In the case of County Commissioners of Frederick County v. Sisters of Charity, 48 Md. 34, a question similar to the one here presented was before the court and the court says, on page 43:

> "If the property is indivisible, so that the value of the several parts can not be ascertained, the amount of the net income from the academy or school may be capitalized as the basis of assessment."

This proposition was upheld in the case of Appeal Tax Board of Baltimore City v. Grand Lodge, 50 Md. 427.

In the case of City of Indianapolis v. Grand Lodge, supra, one-eighth of the building was shown to be used for lodge purposes. The listing officers contended that the assessed value of the lot and of the building should be reduced one-eighth, and taxes levied upon the remainder. This met the approval of the court, as shown by its decision.

This seems to me to be the more equitable rule that could be pursued, and warranted by the authorities above cited.

II.

You ask: Is a parsonage belonging to a church and occupied as a parsonage, but not adjacent to the church property, taxable? Prior to 1893, parsonages, to be exempt from taxation, were required to be attached to the church, and, prior to said date, one of my predecessors gave an opinion that a parsonage, to be exempt from taxation, should be adjoining the church property. At the time this opinion was rendered it was correct, but the following legislature amended the act for no other purpose except to permit the parsonage property not adjacent to be exempt, and, as the law now is, such parsonage property is not taxable, and should not be listed.

III.

You also ask for a construction of section 115 of the compilation of the laws concerning the assessment of property, of 1901 (being section 8533, Burns' R. S. 1901), which provides for the duties and powers of boards of review. The particular portion of the section to which you call my attention, and of which you ask an interpretation, is as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of such board at such meeting, to inquire as to the valuation of the various classes of property in their respective townships and divisions of the > county, and to make such changes, whether by way of increase or decrease, in such valuation as may be necessary to equalize the same as between the townships or divisions of townships, and to determine the rate per cent. to be added or deducted in order to make a just and equitable equalization in the respective townships and divisions, so as to conform throughout the county to a just and equitable standard, reference being had to the natural and essential characteistics and surroundings, and other elements of value."

With reference to this section, your question is: What is meant by "divisions of townships?"

The law is not very clear upon this question, but, in interpreting the same, we must call to our aid what is a matter of common knowledge, and that is that assessing officers divide their townships into tracts, districts or localities, and upon each fix a certain sum per acre at which the lands lying in certain districts shall be assessed as a basis of value, and the word "divisions," as used in the statute, has reference, in my opinion, to these divisions so fixed by the listing officers, the boundaries of which are prescribed by the listing officers, and the value of all the lands within such district computed upon a certain fixed basis of value.

Such a division may be great or small, and it may or may not be bound by congressional, township or sectional lines. The appraised value of the lands lying in any one of these divisions may be raised or lowered by a flat per cent. without any notice from the board of review other than the general notice of the sitting of such board.

I am borne out in this opinion by the decision in the case of Hubbard v. Goss, 157 Ind. 485, where the board of review increased the appraised value of lands lying in a certain division of Monroe Township in Morgan county. The division, as shown by the record, the value of which was so increased, was not bound either by congressional, township or sectional lines, but was a somewhat irregular body of land, including the lands of some two hundred and fifty people. The question as to whether this was a division of the township, within the meaning of the above section, was not presented to the court, but the court in its decision approved the act of the board of review in raising such assessment, and, indirectly, at least, sanctioned the procedure. The court did, in that case, decide that no notice was necessary for the increase of the assessment by a level rate on all the lands in such a division.

IV.

You ask: When may the boards of review in the different counties adjourn?

Each board of review of each county should remain in session—that is, should not finally adjourn, but may adjourn from time to time—until the expiration of the time prescribed by law. In computing the time prescribed by law the first and last days of the session should be counted, and also the intervening Sundays.

The act of the legislature of 1903 (p. 49) provides that in counties of less than 20,000 inhabitants, in the years in which real estate is to be assessed, the session of the board of review shall not exceed thirty days. This would mean, for this year, that in counties having less than 20,000 population, the boards of review should remain in session, or should not finally adjourn, until June 30; and, in counties having a population of more than 20,000 and less than 50,000, such board shall be in session for a period not to exceed forty days, and should not finally adjourn until July 10; in counties having a population of more than 50,000, such board shall be in session a period not to exceed forty-five days, and such boards should not adjourn until July 15.

SOLDIERS' HOME—AGE OF WIDOWS OR WIVES ADMITTED.

June 6, 1903.

Col. R. M. Smock, Commandant Indiana State Soldiers' Home, Lafayette, Indiana:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 5th you ask whether the wife of a soldier of the civil war, who is now thirty-five years of age, is admissible to the home.

Under section 10 (Acts 1895, p. 40; being the act providing for the establishment of the home), widows or wives over forty-five years of age, of disabled and destitute soldiers, sailors or marines, who were honorably discharged, and who have served the United States in any of its wars, and who have been residents and citizens of the state of Indiana for one year immediately preceding, are entitled to admission to the home. This act was passed before the Spanish-American war.

The legislature of 1903 passed an act providing that

> "The widows and wives of disabled or destitute soldiers, sailors and marines, who have received an honorable discharge for services during the Spanish-American war or Philippine insurrection, shall be admitted to the Indiana State Soldiers' Home * * * without regard to the age or date of marriage of such widow or wife to such soldier, sailor or marine."

Under these two provisions it is clear that the wife or widow of a soldier, sailor or marine who served in any of the wars of the United States other than the Spanish-American war, in order to be eligible to admission to the home, must be over forty-five years of age, but the wife or widow of a soldier, sailor or marine who served in the Spanish-American or Philippine war, may be admitted without regard to her age. The two sections do not conflict, as section 10 was passed before the conditions arose which necessitated the passage of the act of 1903.

EDUCATION— ELIGIBILITY OF MEMBERS OF STATE BOARD.

June 8, 1903.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor:

My Dear Governor—Your letter of June 6th received, in which you state that you would "be glad to have my opinion as to the eligibility for continuance as members of the State Board of Education of Dr. J. J. Mills, of Richmond, and George W. Worley, of Warsaw."

I note you state that "Dr. Mills was formerly President of Earlham College, but has retired from connection with educational work, unless an occasional public lecture on educational topics will answer this description," and that "Mr. Worley was appointed on the Board as a county superintendent, and has been succeeded by another."

Section 5849, Burns R. S. 1901, designates who shall constitute the Indiana State Board of Education, and provides for "three citizens of prominence, actively engaged in educational work in the state, to be appointed by the Governor, at least one of whom shall be a county superintendent," etc.

This statute on the question of qualifications of members of the State Board of Education has never been construed, and the proper construction of the same is not free from difficulty.

In the case of Smith v. State, 24 Ind. 101, where the statute provides that each county shall be divided into three districts, and that a commissioner shall be elected from each district by the voters of the whole county; held by the court that continuous residence in the district is not necessary, but that the statute is fully satisfied with the qualification attaching to the person selected, at the time his selection becomes effective and he assumes the duties of the office.

In the case of State, ex rel. Hartford, Prosecuting Attorney, v. Craig, 132 Ind. 34, the court held that the removal of a city councilman from his ward did not vacate his office.

In each of these cases proceedings were brought by quo warranto to determine the title to the office..

Neither of these decisions, however, is directly in point. The legislature undoubtedly intended that "the three citizens of prominence, actively engaged in educational work in the state, at least one of whom shall be a county superintendent," should continue to have the qualifications specified, during the term for which they were selected.

As to George W. Worley there is no difficulty as to the facts. He is not now a county superintendent, and it seems fairly clear that it was the intention of the legislature that the county superintendents of the state should have one of their number as a representative on the State Board of Education.

As to Dr. J. J. Mills a more difficult question is presented, because we not only have the question of law to determine in construing the statute, but also must meet the question of fact as to whether he is now "actively engaged in educational work."

In my judgment the reasonable construction of this statute is that "the three citizens" designated must be actively engaged in educational work during the terms for which such persons are selected as members of the State Board of Education, and that, as one of their number must be a county superintendent when selected, it is not proper for him to continue as a member of the State Board of Education when he ceases to be a county superintendent; neither is it proper for a person who ceases to be actively engaged in educational work to so continue as a member of said Board.

As before stated, the question as to whether a person is actively engaged in educational work, is a question of fact, and it might be held by the court that a person who is engaged in delivering public lectures on educational topics, or a person who is writing for educational journals, comes clearly within the meaning of this law.

If Mr. Mills does not tender his resignation as a member of the Board, and claims to be actively engaged in educational work, his office or position can only be declared vacant by a proper proceeding in court; in other words, if the court, upon hearing the evidence, determines that he is not so qualified, the judgment could be so rendered.

As to Mr. Worley, the question of fact, as before stated, would be easy, because there could be no dispute, really, as to his not being a county superintendent; still, this question would have to be determined by the court by proceedings in quo warranto.

JUDGES—PER DIEM OF SPECIAL JUDGES OF SUPERIOR COURTS.

June 10, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Sir—In your communication of the 10th you ask:

> "Is there any law authorizing the state of Indiana to pay the per diem of special judges of the superior court?"

Section 420, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides that when a judge is called upon to preside in the place of the regular judge he shall be allowed the sum of $5.00 a day for the time actually served. It provides that this amount shall be allowed upon proper showing, and paid out of the county treasury for the time being, and that the county shall have credit on settlement with the state; that the auditor shall deduct the amount so paid to such special judge from the salary of the regular judge, except "when such special judge is called to preside in cases on change of venue, or when such regular judge shall have a pecuniary interest in, be a party to, or be related to any party to said suit by blood or marriage, or may have been of counsel in any such cause pending, or may be absent on account of serious illness of himself or family."

This section of the statute is not made applicable to circuit judges alone, and, in my opinion, applies to superior judges as well, as the greater portion of the salary at least of a superior judge is paid out of the state treasury.

TAXATION—COUNTY COMMISSIONERS CAN NOT BIND STATE TO CONTRACT WITH TAX FERRETS.

June 10, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 10th you ask:

> "Has the board of commissioners of a county in Indiana the right to make a contract with a tax ferret to collect taxes on sequestered property, agreeing to take a per cent. of the taxes collected and used, to bind the state of Indiana to pay this per cent. upon the taxes collected and due the state on these various funds?"

The taxing officers of the county, by our statute, are made the agents of the state to collect the taxes due the state and pay them over to the proper officers. Their powers are limited by statute, and they have no general or implied powers. It is the duty of the proper officers of the county to collect all taxes due the state.

If the officers fail in their duty, and the commissioners employ some one to aid them in the performance of their duty, who shall pay their compensation is a question between the commissioners and the officers who are thus assisted. Whether the board of commissioners, in the exercise of their administrative powers in the control of the affairs of a county, can bind the state by such a contract as you suggest has not been determined by any final decision of our courts, and, in the absence of any such construction, it is my opinion they have no such power.

FEES—PAID SECRETARY OF STATE FOR RECORDING RESOLUTION REDUCING CAPITAL STOCK AND INCREASING PREFERRED STOCK.

June 11, 1903.

Hon. Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 10th you ask whether you shall charge a fee for recording a resolution adopted by the board of directors of a corporation, reducing the capital stock $50,000 and increasing the preferred stock $50,000.

Under section 7631, Burns' R. S. 1901, second subdivision, you are required to charge one-tenth of one per cent. for filing a certificate of increase of capital stock, where such increase is over $10,000.

The law does not recognize credits for payments which have previously been paid by an incorporating company, as is shown in subdivision three, in regard to the consolidation of companies.

The fees provided for in said section are presumed to be a proper compensation to the state for the maintenance of the office and the work required in filing and issuing certificates of the articles or resolutions therein provided for, and the fact that the capital stock is decreased as well as increased does not affect the rights of the state to claim the fee for such services.

The seventh subdivision of said section provides that a fee of $5.00 shall be charged for filing with such secretary a certificate of the reduction of the capital stock of any corporation.

It is, therefore, my opinion that in the case you present, you should charge one-tenth of one per cent. on the amount of the preferred stock, and $5.00 for filing the resolution for the reduction of the capital stock.

JUVENILE COURT MAY COMMIT GIRLS UNDER EIGHTEEN YEARS OF AGE TO REFORMATORY.

June 17, 1903.

Mrs. Emma L. Elam, 1320 Park Avenue, City:

Dear Madam—Your letter of June 17th, stating that it is now claimed that the Juvenile Court of Indianapolis, organized under the law approved March 10, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 516), may commit girls to that school under eighteen years of age.

The suggestion made is that the law providing for the Juvenile Court repeals the former law insofar as girls committed by it are concerned.

As I understand your letter you desire to know whether the Indiana Industrial School for Girls should receive a girl under the age of eighteen years by reason of the act of the legislature above mentioned.

As the Juvenile Court has jurisdiction over girls up to their eighteenth birthday, and the statute provides that if the child, for instance, girl, is found guilty of the offense charged, the court may cause her to be sent to the Industrial School for Girls.

I am of the opinion that the only reasonable construction to be placed upon this act, considering it in connection with the laws heretofore enacted, is to the effect that your institution is authorized to receive a girl so committed by the juvenile court up to the age of eighteen years.

NATURAL GAS—RIGHT TO USE TO PROPEL STEAM ENGINES AND PUMPS.

June 18, 1903.

Hon. B. A. Kinney, Marion, Indiana:

My Dear Sir—As I understand your inquiry of yesterday, it goes to the question of using natural gas as a power and not as a fuel and after passing through the cylinder of an engine it is then allowed to escape into the open air unburned. You were particularly desirous of knowing whether or not persons have the right to use natural gas to propel steam engines and pumps. Section 1 of the act of 1893, being section 7510, Burns' R. S. 1901, was intended to prevent the escape of natural gas into the open air. Section 1 of that statute provides, "That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, having possession or control of any natural gas or oil well, whether as a contractor, owner, lessee, agent or manager to allow or permit the flow of gas or oil from any such well to escape into the open air without being confined within such well or proper pipes or other safe receptacle for a longer period than two days next after gas or oil shall have been struck in such well."

Section 1 of the Act of 1891, being section 2316, Burns' 1901 Statutes, prohibits the use of flambeau lights. It would seem that if the gas is burned after it gets through the cylinder of the engine it is a flambeau and would come under the act of 1891 and if the gas is not burned, it would be a waste of gas under the act of 1893 and would be a failure to comply with the statute which requires the gas to be carefully and securely confined in the wells, pipes or other safe and proper receptacles.

It is clear that the gas is entirely wasted except the use of the same in the running of the engine and many times as much gas might go through the cylinder of the engine as is necessary to run the same, and therefore the entire flow of a large gas well could be wasted through the cylinder of an old engine and thus afford a convenient way of disposing of the gas from such well.

Of course it would not be a waste of gas if the gas were used to make steam to run the engine. I understand that it requires very much more gas to run any engine than it would to convert water into steam for the purpose of running the engine and that the amount of gas required to run an engine depends upon the condition of said engine. It would seem that the use of gas through the cylinder of an engine as a power is prohibited by the statute, but so far as I am able to learn, our courts have not passed on this question. The sections of the statute above quoted have been construed by our supreme court and these statutes are constitutional. Our court has also held that an injunction will lie to prohibit the waste of natural gas even if it has been reduced to possession by the owner of the land from which it was taken. (See the State v. Ohio Oil Co., 150 Ind., p. 21.) It would seem that if sufficient evidence can be obtained to show that the real object and purpose in the use of gas in old pumps and old engines is to get rid of the gas and to permit it to escape, that the persons so doing are clearly guilty of violating the statute and that injunction relief would also be granted.

PHARMACY LAW—FEES—TIME, ETC., FOR REGISTERING.

June 19, 1903.

Hon. H. E. Glick, Secretary Indiana Board of Pharmacy, Lafayette, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 18th: Section 3 of the Acts of the Legislature of 1889 (see Acts of 1899, 159) provides that:

> "Upon the payment of such fee or fees as hereinafter provided, said board shall grant and issue a license as Registered Pharmacist, or as Registered Assistant Pharmacist, to any person not less than eighteen years of age, as hereinafter provided, for two years or the unexpired portion thereof prior to the next regular date of re-registration, upon producing evidence satisfactory to said board of one of the following qualifications, to wit:" * * *

Sec. 4. of said act provides:

"The fees for registered pharmacists shall be as follows: For registration and certificate, $2.00; for examination, $3.00; for re-registration, $1.00. * * * All fees shall be paid to the secretary of the board with the application. All certificates or licenses issued under the provisions of this act shall be effective only for the unexpired portion of the two years preceding the next regular date of re-registration. The next regular date for re-registration shall be July 1, 1901. Any person licensed or holding a certificate of registration issued under the provisions of this act shall be required to re-register by application within thirty days after the expiration of such license or certificate, if he desires to continue as a pharmacist or as an assistant pharmacist. Failure to comply with the foregoing provisions of this section shall subject the offender to a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each week which shall elapse thereafter and before such person shall re-register."

Construing these sections of the statute together, as we must, the following facts are deducible therefrom:

First. A person acting as a pharmacist or assistant pharmacist must hold a license.

Second. The maximum term for which a license can be issued by the board is two years, but it can not be issued to extend beyond the next regular time for registration.

Third. The first regular time for registration, as fixed by the statute, is July 1, 1901, and of necessity, from the foregoing provisions of the statute, the second regular time for registration is July 1, 1903.

While the statute does not in terms provide that there shall be a biennial registration, yet it is the clearly expressed intention of the legislature that such should be the case, since it provides that a license can only be issued for a period of two years and that a person holding a license, desiring to continue as a pharmacist, must file his application for re-registration thirty days before the expiration of the period for which his license has been issued or suffer a penalty as provided in section 4.

I can not conceive how a pharmacist could avoid the penalty provided in section 4 if he continued to act as a pharmacist after the term for which his license has been issued has expired, without having made his application and paid the re-registration fees as provided for in said section, and if the board has observed the law, no pharmacist now holds a license that will not expire on July 1, 1903.

LIBRARIES—POWERS AND DUTIES OF LIBRARY COMMISSION—AGENTS, ETC.

June 25, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 23d: The legislature of 1899 passed an act concerning libraries. By section 2 it is provided among other things that the library commission "shall furnish information or advice as to the organization, maintenance or administration of any library in the state when they are requested so to do by the librarian or trustee."

Section 6 provides: "The librarian or trustee of any free public library may apply to said public library commission for advice as to all matters pertaining to the organization, maintenance or administration of their library; and said commission shall give such advice and personal attention as may be necessary." (See Acts 1899, 134.)

The legislature of 1903 attempted to amend section 2 of this act, but by reason of a defective title, section 2 was not amended. The said act of 1903 did, however, amend section 3 of the act of 1899, being the section providing for the appropriation of the funds necessary to carry on the work of the library commission. No other portions of the Act of 1899 were amended by the Act of 1903. Therefore, the powers and duties of the commission are governed by the Act of 1899. The amount of money that may be expended by such commission is governed by section 2 of the act of 1903. Under the provisions of the law of 1899, as above quoted, it is my opinion that the library commission has authority to give such information and instruction as they may see fit in order to fully establish a library system within the state, and if we construe all of the sections of the two acts together, it is my opinion that the commission may also employ agents to do this work for them and pay the necessary expenses incurred thereby out of the appropriation made by the Act of 1903.

SCHOOLS—TERM OF CORPORATION TO WHICH TRANSFER IS MADE GOVERNS.

July 3, 1903.

Hon. Fassett A. Cotton, Superintendent Public Instruction, City:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 3d you ask: "Is a school corporation required by transfer certificates to pay for a longer term of school than the corporation from which the transfers are made maintains? In other words, is a township trustee who has but six months of school required by transfers to pay a city school corporation for nine months of school?"

Section 1 of the Act of March 11, 1901, provides "That the order of transfer, if granted, shall entitle such child to attend the schools of the corporation to which such transfer is made, under the conditions hereinafter provided." It has been rigidly held by the supreme court that a transfer is for the full year. It therefore appears that the right to attend the schools of the corporation to which the transfer is made means a right to attend such schools for the full school year of that corporation. As the tuition for such instruction is by section II provided, "An amount equal to the annual per capita cost of education in the corporation to which said child is transferred; or such a part of it as the term of enrollment of said child in the schools of the creditor corporation may require," the only possible construction is that the tuition means but for the full period for which the child receives instruction and this would be so regardless of whether the period during which schools are maintained in the township from which the child was transferred was shorter or longer than the school year in the township or school corporation to which the transfer was made. The rule must be uniform, and it would be absurd, in case the school year in the township where the child resides was longer than in the corporation to which the child is transferred, to require tuition to be paid for a period during which the child could not receive instruction.

It has been held by the supreme court that the transfer law as it stood prior to 1901 was not in violation of the constitutional requirement of equality and uniformity and the provisions against the grant of special privileges. Kent v. Town of Kentland, 52 Ind. 291; Robinson v. Schenck, 102 Ind. 315.

With a matter of profit or loss to the individual school corporation the courts have nothing to do; nor has the superintendent of public instruction, as stated by the supreme court.

In the case of Freel v. the School City of Crawfordsville, 142 Ind. 27, "School corporations in this state are a part of the educational system of the state, established in compliance with Article VIII of the constitution, which makes it the duty of the legislature to provide by law for a general or uniform system of common schools, where tuition shall be without charge and equally open to all. They are involuntary corporations, organized not for the purpose of profit or gain, but solely for the public benefit, and have only such limited powers as were deemed necessary for that purpose. Such corporations are but the agents of the state, for the sole purpose of administering the state's system of public education."

In the case of Edwards v. the State, 143 Ind. 92, the court says: "It is as much the duty of the appellant to provide and furnish school privileges to pupils transferred to the school city as to those who reside within the city limits. * * * It is not material, therefore, whether or not the school city received as much money or more money, on account of said transfers from Pike Creek Township, than the expenses per capita of the pupils transferred from that township. The question of profit or loss has nothing whatever to do with the question or its determination by the school officers of the courts."

Briefly, the debtor trustee must pay tuition for each transferred pupil, an amount equal to the annual per capita cost of education in the corporation to which said child is transferred, or such part of it as the terms of enrollment of said child in the schools of the creditor corporation may require, regardless of whether schools are maintained in the debtor corporation for a period longer or shorter than the period which the child receives instruction.

SPECIAL POLICE.

July 11, 1903.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Sir—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 11th, in which you request my opinion

> "as to the extent to which the chief of police of Evansville, Indiana, may go in swearing in additional members of his force to meet an emergency, and what authority, if any, there is vested in any officer to compel persons to serve in the capacity of extra or special policemen when thus called upon."

Evansville, being a city of more than 50,000 and less than 100,000 inhabitants, as shown by the last census, is governed by special act.

Section 3996, Burns R. S. 1901, provides for the appointment of a board of public safety, to be governed by three commissioners, to be appointed by the mayor.

Section 4003, Burns R. S. 1901, provides:

> "Said commissioners may, also, upon emergency or apprehension of riot, tumult, mob or insurrection, pestilence or invasion, appoint as many special patrolmen as may be desirable, to be paid the same rate per day and possess the same powers, privileges and duties as members of the regular force, and be subject to the same ordinances, regulations and orders."

Section 3998 provides:

> "In times of peril, danger, riot, extensive conflagration, disorder, or the apprehension thereof, * * * the superintendent of the police force shall, for the time being, be subordinate to the mayor and obey his orders and directions, anything to the contrary in this act, or in the ordinances of such city, or in the regulations or orders of the commissioners of public safety, to the contrary notwithstanding."

Section 4001 provides, in speaking of the powers of police:

> "They shall be conservators of the peace in such city, * * * suppress all breaches of the peace within their knowledge, and authority is hereby given them to call to their aid the power of such city."

Section 2128 provides:

"Whoever, when required by any sheriff or his deputy, or by any coroner, constable, or any conservator of the peace, to assist him in the execution of his office, or in the service of any process, refuses or neglects to render such assistance, without having a valid cause for so refusing or neglecting, shall be fined not more than $100, nor less than $5."

Under the sections above quoted it is clear that the police commissioners of Evansville are the ones upon whom rest the responsibility of increasing the police force in cases of emergency, and it is within their discretion to determine the number necessary. The management of that force in case of disorder, riot, etc., becomes the duty of the mayor, the statute making the superintendent of police subordinate to the mayor and subject to his orders. The police being conservators of the peace have the power to summon citizens of the city to their aid, and, in case of their refusal to respond, they are subject to a penalty of not more than $100, nor less than $5.

I find no law in this state that gives these police commissioners power to compel citizens to serve as special policemen.

A sheriff has special powers conferred upon him by statute. Section 2065f provides:

"If, at any time, the sheriff has reason to believe, and does believe, that any prisoner in his custody is in danger of being lynched, it shall be his duty to at once command all bystanders, and all others with whom he can directly communicate, to aid and assist him in the defense of such prisoner, and to furnish such assistants with such weapons of defense as shall be necessary to protect such prisoner; and if such weapons are not at hand, it shall be the duty of such sheriff to procure and furnish such weapons to such assistants. And if any such bystander, or other persons so communicated with, shall fail or refuse to assist such sheriff in defending, to the utmost of his powers, such prisoner, he shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than $100, nor more than $1,000, and imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding six months."

You will observe that this section only prescribes a penalty. It is my opinion that there is no way to compel citizens to serve, under our statute. All that can be done is to inflict the penalty for refusing to serve as prescribed by statute.

RECORDS OF CHILDRENS' HOMES OR INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

July 14, 1903.

Hon. Amos W. Butler, Secretary, Board of State Charities:

Dear Sir—Answering your question as to the feature of the law of 1889 which provides, in section 6:

> "They shall keep a register, in secret, if deemed advisable, of the time when, and the place where, and the length of time for which, any child may have been placed in any home," etc.,

and section 3 of the law of 1893, which provides:

> "They shall provide themselves with books in which shall be entered the age, parentage, place of residence and present condition of every child received into any such children's home, or industrial school, and they shall also cause to be entered in such book the time when, the place where and the person to whom any of the inmates of such home or industrial school have been placed for suitable homes," etc.,

will say that it is my opinion that these sections should be read together, and as there is no conflict, the latter quoted sentence in no way repeals the first quoted.

The courts have always liberally construed these laws for the protection and benefit of children, and it certainly was not the intention of the legislature to open these records of destination of children who have been placed in good homes, to worthless fathers and mothers, who could thereby injure the system by becoming obnoxious to people who have the children.

The latter law enlarged the duties for the better protection of these dependent children.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION COMMISSION OF INDIANA —POWERS AND DUTIES, ETC.

July 27, 1903.

Hon. Newton W. Gilbert, President, Louisiana Purchase Exposition Commission of Indiana, State House, City:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 24th you ask:

(1) What are the rights and what is the power of this commission to take and convey to St. Louis, for the purpose of exhibiting our natural resources, any or all of the materials or specimens of minerals, clays, building stone, and other earth products of whatever kind, belonging to the state of Indiana, which are now in the Geological museum in the state house, or elsewhere?

(2) What is the duty of the state geologist of Indiana relative to furnishing this commission with such materials and any maps, charts, plats, statistics, or other printed or pictorial matter within his possession, relating to the mining interests of the state?

The object and purpose of the appropriation made by the legislature of 1903 for an exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition is concisely set out in the preamble of the act making such appropriation. It is as follows:

"Whereas, an exhibition is to be held in the city of St. Louis, in the state of Missouri, in 1904, in commemoration of the purchase of the Louisiana Territory by the United States; and

"Whereas, it is of great importance that the resources, industrial and commercial development and general progress of this state should be fully and creditably displayed to the world at said exposition," etc.

Sections 3 and 4 of said act provide as follows:

"Sec. 3. Said commission shall have charge of the interests of this State and its citizens in the preparation and exhibition at such exposition of the manufactures, arts and natural and industrial products of the State, and exhibits of any kind illustrating its history, progress, moral and material welfare, growth, enterprise and development, and all other matters tending to advance the interests, representation and prosperity of this State at said exposition. It shall collect and disseminate throughout the State all necessary information regarding said exposition, and in general have and exercise full authority in relation to the participation of the state of Indiana and its citizens in the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Said commission shall have charge of the plan and construction of an Indiana State building, and of furnishing and maintaining the same.

"Sec. 4. Said commission shall give particular attention to the making of an exhibit of the agricultural and horticultural products of the State of Indiana and to an exhibition of the resources of the State, including its mines, clays, building stone, and other earth products of whatever kind, giving particular attention to the resources and exhibit which it may be possible for the State Geologist of Indiana to furnish. It shall also give particular attention to the stimulation of the making of private exhibits on the part of manufacturers and industrial products of our State, and shall stimulate in every way the public spirit of our citizens in this direction."

It will be seen that by section 3 of this act your commission is given full and complete control and authority over the Indiana exhibit at this exposition, and the act expressly gives you this authority over the exhibit that the state of Indiana shall make.

Section 4 of said act especially directs your commission's attention to the agricultural, horticultural and mineral and earth products of the state. This provision of the act, considered in connection with the provision in section 3, giving you authority, clearly empowers you to use any of the materials belonging to the state, wherever found, in making up an exhibit that your commission deems a proper one to be made at the exposition; unless prohibited by positive law, and, having due regard for the transaction of the general governmental affairs of the state.

The office of state geologist was established by the act of the legislature approved March 5, 1869 (R. S. 1876, p. 851). Section one of this act clearly sets forth the purposes of the creation of this department, and is as follows:

> "Section 1. Be it enacted by the general assembly of the State of Indiana, That a department of geology and natural science is hereby established in connection with and under the control and direction of the Indiana state board of agriculture, for the collection and dissemination of information in relation to geological and other scientific investigations to be made, as hereinafter provided, for the promotion of agriculture, mining, the arts and manufactures."

It will be seen that the purpose of this department is for the collection and dissemination of information in relation to geological and other scientific investigations, for the promotion of agriculture, mining, the arts and manufactures.

Section 4 of this act provides for the establishment of a museum also; it is not so denominated in terms, and is as follows:

> "Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That said state geologist shall, from time to time, make a survey of a portion of the state, in order to be able to complete a thorough geological survey of the whole state, as soon as consistent with his other duties as herein defined, and it shall be his duty also to collect, properly label, and arrange in the agricultural rooms, specimens of the ores, coals, building stones, clays, soils, and organic remains; quadrupeds, birds, reptiles, fishes, crustacea, mollusca, insects and all other objects of natural history peculiar to the state, and as far as practicable, of other states and countries also."

The subsequent legislatures of 1881 and 1889 have made some changes in the state geologist act, in minor detaills, and by the last act, being the act of 1889 (Acts 1889, p. 44), it is provided that the state geologist shall be curator of the geological museum, cabinet, apparatus and library, and shall, from time to time, add specimens to the cabinet of mineral, organic remains, and other objects of natural history peculiar to this state, and other states and countries.

As curator, he has the custody and control of the museum; but nothing in these acts would give him authority to refuse to the commission the rights conferred by the act of 1903, to use the materials of the state in making the state's exhibit at the exposition.

That this is clearly the intention of the legislature is fully expressed in section 4 of the act of 1903, when it provides that the commission shall make exhibition of the resources of the state, giving particular attention to the resources and exhibits which it may be possible for the state geologist of Indiana to furnish. This not only authorizes the commission to use the materials of the state in the museum or elsewhere, but makes it the positive duty of the state geologist to furnish such materials; so that, answering your second question by section 4 of this act, it is made the positive duty of the state geologist to co-operate with your commission and to furnish you whatever materials or information he may have obtained, or may obtain, or be able to obtain, in regard to the agricultural, horticultural, mineral or earth products of the state.

This is a duty imposed upon his office, and is just as binding as if the legislature had seen fit to add another department to his office. This duty is consistent with the very objects of the office of state geologist. As will be seen the objects for which the office of state geologist was established, as expressed in the act of 1869, are substantially the same as the objects for which the appropriation and provision for the creation of the exposition commission were made.

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES—PLACING ILLINOIS CHILDREN IN INDIANA HOMES.

July 28, 1903.

Hon. A. W. Butler, Secretary, Board of State Charities:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 27th you state that the American Home-Finding Association of Chicago, Illinois, has been placing dependent children in homes in the state of Indiana, and you ask that this department take the matter up in a proper way to see if it can be remedied and future violations prevented.

The act of 1899 (Acts 1899, p. 41) makes it unlawful for any person, corporation, association or institution, or any officer or agent thereof, to bring or send, or cause to be brought or sent, into the state of Indiana any dependent children, for the purpose of placing such children in any homes in Indiana, without having given proper bond therefor.

Section 4 of said act provides a penalty for a violation of the act. There are no remedial provisions in this act, other than the penal provision.

The Board of State Charities is given general management and supervision of the matters contained in said act, and this office has no authority whatever to act in the matter. The only remedy that the state has, under this act, is to prosecute persons violating the same. These prosecutions will have to be inaugurated and maintained by the prosecuting attorney of the district where the violations occur.

I would suggest that where you can obtain facts sufficient to show that a violation of the law has been committed, and the name of the person who has committed the offense, you present the matter to the prosecuting attorney of the circuit where it occurs, and have the grand jury return an indictment against the party, and prosecution duly made.

INDIANA STATE PRISON—USE OF APPROPRIATION OF 1899 FOR MACHINERY, ETC., TO ESTABLISH PIECE-PRICE SYSTEM. ETC.

July 28, 1903.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Indiana State Prison, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 28th you ask:

1. Can any portion of the appropriation of $125,000, made by the legislature of 1899, found in section 9 of the act of the general assembly of 1899, page 27, be used in purchasing materials and machinery to establish a piece-price system by the state prison, without establishing a public account system?

2. What is the meaning of the term "trades or industry," as used in section 2 of said act, and would the manufacturing or making of overalls, and the manufacturing or making of shirts be considered the same trade or industry?

The provisions of section 9, Acts 1899, making the sum of $125,000 available for the use of the state prison, is made contingent upon the adoption by the board of control of the public account system, and, hence, in my opinion, no portion of this appropriation can be used unless a public account system is established.

The proviso in section 2 of said act, referred to in your second question is to the effect that "whether said labor of the said prisoner to be employed upon the contract system or upon the piece-price system, the number of convicts employed in any single trade or industry shall not exceed one hundred."

The exact meaning of the words "trade or industry" is not clearly defined, and they must be used in their usual acceptation.

Applying this rule it is my opinion that the making of overalls and the making of shirts are not the same trade, and that, under the law, you could let contracts for the employment of one hundred convicts for the manufacture of overalls, and also contracts for the one hundred convicts for the manufacture of shirts.

PRISONS—INDIANA STATE PRISON—CONVICT MADE GOODS.

August 1, 1903.

Hon. J. G. Reid, Warden Indiana State Prison, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 31st you ask what effect the act of the general assembly of 1901, relating to the sale of convict-made goods (see Acts 1901, p. 618) will have upon the act of the general assembly of 1903 in regard to the letting of contracts for prison labor. (See Acts 1903, p. 27.) By the act of 1901, supra, it is made unlawful for any person or corporation to expose for sale in the state of Indiana convict-made goods without first obtaining from the Secretary of State a license to sell the same. By provision in section 11 of said act the same is made not to apply to existing contracts.

The act of 1903, in regard to prison contracts makes no reference whatever to the former act of 1901 above noted. Under these conditions the act of 1901 would apply to goods manufactured by the Indiana State Prison under the contract let subsequent to said act. You will note, however, that the act only prohibits "exposure for sale" of convict-made goods. If goods were manufactured at the Indiana State Prison but were not exposed for sale by the manufacturers within the state they would not be compelled to comply with the provisions of the act of 1901.

PHARMACY LAW—REVOCATION OF LICENSE WHERE APPLICANT FOR CERTIFICATE IS HABITUAL DRUNKARD.

August 5, 1903.

Hon. H. E. Glick, Secretary, Indiana Board of Pharmacy, Lafayette, Indiana:

Dear Sir—I have your letter of the 4th, in which you ask whether the Indiana Board of Pharmacy, under the pharmacy law, can refuse to reissue a pharmacist's certificate, or, in other words, revoke a registered pharmacist's license upon the ground that he is an habitual drunkard, where his other qualifications are within the law.

The pharmacy law of 1899 specifies three requirements or qualifications, and section 5 of that law provides the board may require each applicant for registration or examination to produce and file with his application such evidence touching his qualifications as may be prescribed by the rules and regulations of the board.

It is my opinion that this latter quoted section allows you to make such rules and regulations as come under section 3 of the act, but it would not give you authority to add additional requirements, other than specified in section 3.

In the case you mention you revoke a license because it is reported to you that the applicant for the certificate is an habitual drunkard. Character and habits are not of the requirements fixed by statute, and I doubt very much if the law gives you authority to revoke a registered pharmacist's license under the circumstances you state.

ENTERPRISE ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY OF AMERICA.

August 10, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—I have examined the articles of association presented to this office by you of The Enterprise Accident Insurance Company of America, and find that the same do not comply with the law in this, to wit:

Section 1 of the act of the general assembly of 1897 (See Acts 1897, p. 318)—being the act under which this company seeks to be incorporated—among other things provides that the articles shall contain a statement of "its plan of doing business, clearly and fully defined."

The fourth subdivision of the articles presented endeavors to comply with this provision of the law. It is as follows:

> "The object of the association is to carry on the business of mutual accident and health indemnity insurance in all its various forms upon an annual and weekly premium basis, under and according to the laws of the state of Indiana for mutual accident and health indemnity insurance companies."

The act above referred to authorizes the incorporation of companies for the purpose of transacting the business of accident and health insurance upon the assessment plan, and does not contemplate the organization of such companies upon a level rate plan.

The plan of the proposed company is evidently a level rate plan; if it is not, then it does not comply with the law, in that its plan is not clearly and definitely set forth.

I must, therefore, decline to recommend said articles to the Secretary of State for incorporation.

FARMERS' MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE COMPANIES ORGANIZED UNDER SECTION 4902, BURNS R. S. 1903, CAN NOT INSURE SCHOOL HOUSES AND CHURCHES.

September 9, 1903.

Hon. D. E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Indianapolis, Ind.:

My Dear Sir—Your letter of September 9th, asking for my opinion as to—

> "Whether farmers' mutual fire insurance companies organized under the farmers' mutual law, Burns (2) page 1058, section 4902, can insure any property other than property on farms as farm property?" "Can they insure such property as school houses and churches?"

The section above mentioned provides:

> "Any number of persons, not less than ten, may form an incorporated company for the purpose of mutual insurance of the property of its members against loss by fire or damage by lightning; which property to be insured shall embrace dwelling houses, barns, accompanying out buildings and their contents, farm implements, hay, grain, wool, and other farm products, live stock, wagons, harness, household goods, wearing apparel, provisions, musical instruments and libraries, such property being upon farms as farm property."

The portion of the statute above quoted describes specifically the kind of property which may be insured by such a company, but school houses and churches are not included in the property described and I am therefore of the opinion that a farmers' mutual fire insurance company, organized under this statute, is not authorized to insure school houses and churches.

INSURANCE—FRATERNAL SOCIETIES, ETC., MAY NOT ISSUE CERTIFICATES OR POLICIES, ETC.

September 24, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

My Dear Sir—Your letter of September 24th received. You state:

"Will you kindly inform me, at your convenience, whether a fraternal society, incorporated under the laws of this state, or a fraternal society of another state admitted to do business in this state (see Acts 1899, pages 177-187), can write certificates or policies in this state under the legal reserve life insurance plan, having their policies valued at the end of the year and setting aside and charging themselves with the amount of the net cash reserve upon their policies as a liability?

"In writing what is known as old line life insurance upon legal reserve plan their policies would provide for loan values, extending insurance, cash surrender values and practically all of the forms of policies or certificates issued by an old line company. The fraternal societies charging the same rates as an old line legal reserve life insurance company. I also refer you to the amendment of the fraternal laws, Acts of 1901, pages 312-318."

The act of 1899, above mentioned, gives the definition of a fraternal beneficiary association as follows:

"A fraternal beneficiary association is hereby declared to be a corporation, society or voluntary association, formed or organized and carried on for the sole benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit."

The act further provides that—

"Such association shall be governed by this act and shall be exempt from the provisions of the insurance laws of this state. No law hereafter passed shall apply to them, unless they be expressly designated therein."

The amendatory act of 1901 does not materially affect the question that you have presented.

In view of the fact that we have a specific law under which legal reserve life insurance companies are organized, and a law governing what is known as old line life insurance upon the legal reserve plan, and when we consider that a fraternal society incorporated under the laws above mentioned is incorporated for the sole benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit, and the further fact that such association shall be governed by the act in question, and shall be exempt from the provisions of the insurance laws of the state, it certainly must follow that a fraternal society so organized has no right to issue certificates or policies in this state under the legal reserve life insurance plan, and must be brought within the terms and provisions of the statute providing for its incorporation, and giving and granting to it all the powers that it possesses.

JUDGES—INABILITY OF JUDGE OF CIRCUIT COURT TO DISCHARGE OFFICIAL DUTIES, ETC.

September 30, 1903.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Dear Sir—Your letter of September 28th, calling my attention to the fact that—

"In the judicial circuit composed of Morgan and Owen counties a condition exists (if I am fully advised) as follows: Judge Parks has been incapacitated from sitting as trial judge for a long time, which has necessitated a special judge or judges to sit, ad interim. Under the law, as conveyed to me, after an absence from the bench of nine months, and upon the certificates of the fact by the clerks of the court of the circuit of the judge incapacitated, a vacancy is created, to be filled by the Governor, etc.

"It appears that the clerk of one of the counties several months ago sent forward a certificate. The term provided for by law, as mentioned, expired before the beginning of the present term, at which time and upon the opening of the court, Judge Parks appeared and has been sitting as trial judge in a few cases. The question raised, or that may be raised in the regular way, is: Will his appearance at the opening of the present term entitle him, under the law, to another period of nine months absence from the bench, or whether, the clerks of the two courts certifying that he is incapacitated, a vacancy shall then exist as though it had occurred within the first period.

"Further, under the law, would it be proper for the Judge to employ, at his own expense, special judges to conduct the business of the court during his absence?"

Burns' R. S., section 1391, provides:

"Whenever the judge of any circuit court in the state of Indiana shall, from sickness, mental incapacity, or otherwise, be rendered incapable of discharging the duties of his said office, for a term of nine consecutive months, the Governor of the state, upon the certificates, under the seal of their office, of the clerks of such court of the several counties composing said circuit, being filed in the office of the Secretary of State, setting forth the fact of the failure and disability of said judge to discharge the duties of his said office, as aforesaid, shall appoint some practicing attorney within said circuit (as) judge pro tem of said circuit court during the continuance of the disability of the judge-elect of said circuit to discharge the duties of his said office, or until the expiration of his term of office, should the disability so long continue."

The law is clear that, upon the filing of the certificates mentioned in the office of the Secretary of State, the Governor shall appoint, as provided in the statute, and it is only upon the filing of certificates by the clerks of the several counties, as set forth in the statute, that any appointment can be made by the Governor.

The question as to whether a period of nine months had elapsed prior to the present term of court, when Judge Parks appeared and acted in a few cases, can not be material so far as the action of the Governor is concerned, if certificates are filed in compliance with this statute; in other words, whenever the clerks of said court of the several counties composing circuit file certificates in the office of the Secretary of State, setting forth the fact of the failure and disability of said judge to discharge the duties of his office, then the Governor shall appoint some practicing attorney within said circuit as judge pro tem of said circuit during the continuance of the disability of the judge-elect of said circuit, to discharge the duties of his said office.

The force and effect of these certificates can not be questioned by the appointing power, and if the clerks of this circuit should now file certificates required by this statute, in the manner required, the question as to whether Judge Parks, by serving in a few cases at the present term of court, can hold his office for another period of nine months, being absent from the bench, would be a question for the courts to decide.

So far as I am able to ascertain, the question has never yet been presented or considered by the courts of this state, but it could not in any way affect the question of making an appointment should the clerks now certify the facts, as required by the statute.

The appointment of a judge, pro tem, under the statute, is for the time of the disability of the judge-elect, and, as the judge has been able to act in his official capacity at the present term of court, the clerks of said court might refuse to certify as to his incapacity; but, as before stated, the Governor has to act upon the information contained in the certificates, and, notwithstanding the fact that the judge has acted in a few cases at the present term of court, if the clerks of the two counties composing this circuit filed certificates as required by the statute, the Governor would then clearly be authorized to make the appointment, and if the appointment should be questioned, it would be for the courts to determine the force and effect of the judge acting in the few cases, as suggested.

However, it is my judgment that, as the period of nine months is a consecutive period, and if no action is taken at the expiration of such period, and the judge-elect is able to act, as Judge Parks has acted, then, if the question were presented to the court, as suggested by you, another nine months must elapse before it would be the duty of the clerks of the circuit to file the certificates set forth in section 1391.

Your further question is "whether it would be proper for the judge to employ at his own expense special judges to conduct the business of the court during his absence."

Section 420 provides for the payment of special judges, and in all cases the compensation shall be deducted from the pay of such regular judge, except when such special judge is called to preside in cases on change of venue, or when such regular judge shall have a pecuniary interest in, be a party to, or be related to any party to said suit, by blood or marriage, or may have been of counsel in any such case pending, or may be absent on account of serious illness of himself or family.

Section 1447, providing for the appointment of a judge pro tem by the clerk, auditor and sheriff, provides the compensation that such a judge shall receive, and that such appointee shall be allowed "four dollars, if not otherwise paid, for every day he shall so serve, and in going to and returning from the place of holding such court, to be paid out of the annual compensation of such circuit judge, upon a certificate of the number of days served, signed and attested by the clerk of such court," etc.

After examining these statutes I see no reason why a judge of a circuit court can not himself pay a special judge, or pro tem judge, where the amount so paid by him would, in any event, be deducted from his salary, and, therefore, indirectly paid by the judge.

DEPUTY COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT.

September 28, 1903.

F. A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 26th inst.: The statute in regard to county superintendents makes no provision for the appointment of a deputy. As the statute requires the county superintendent to have certain qualifications it is evident that unless there is an express authorization by statute no deputy county superintendent can be legally employed.

So that, in my opinion, a county superintendent can not perform his duties by deputy. He might employ persons to do clerical work, but it would have to be done in the name of the officer himself.

INSURANCE—NEW LICENSE MUST BE OBTAINED WHEN THERE IS CHANGE IN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY.

October 14, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Indianapolis, Ind.:

My Dear Sir—Your letter of October 12th, asking:

> "Where a license to a fire insurance company is issued in the name of the firm and one member of the firm buys out the other member or members and continues the business as an individual, should the agent take out a new license in the name of the individual agent?"

The insurance laws of the state provide that when an insurance company has complied with certain provisions of the law it should be the duty of the Auditor of State to issue a certificate thereof, with authority to transact the business of insurance, to the agent or agents applying for the same and the agent or agents obtaining such certificate shall file the same, together with a certified copy of the statement required by law, in the office of the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which such agency is established and the documents so filed shall be preserved for public inspection by the clerk and a notation made by the clerk as required by law, which notation shall show the name of the company, the name of the agent, the file of such documents, etc.

It seems to me clearly to be the intention of the law to have a record made showing the agent or agents of the company and when one member of the firm buys out other members, necessarily there is a change in the agency and whenever there is a change in the agency by reason of one member of a firm retiring, a new license in my judgment should be issued to the members then acting as the agents of the company. In other words, if there are two members of a firm who have been authorized to act for the company and one member retires from the firm, a new license should be obtained by the member who continues to transact the business of the company.

PRISON—REFERRING TO ACT PROVIDING FOR SEPARATION OF INDIANA INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS FROM WOMAN'S PRISON.

October 13, 1903.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Sir—I am in receipt of your communication of October 12th, referring to the act of the last legislature providing for the separation of the Indiana Industrial School for Girls from the Woman's Prison, etc., and calling my attention to the appropriation of $150,000 made by said legislature to carry out the provisions of said act.

From your communication I also note that the commissioners appointed under said act have purchased the ground, and that, in considering the matter of the erection of buildings required by said act, as well as the large increase in the population of said school since the passage of the law, it becomes apparent that the amount appropriated is insufficient to carry out the terms and provisions of said statute.

Your questions, as I understand them, are:

(1) As the statute says the work shall be completed and turned over to the board of managers of the Industrial School for Girls hereinafter provided for, on or before October 31, 1904, in the event it is determined that the appropriation is not sufficient to carry out the provisions of the law, would the commission be authorized to go forward with the work?

(2) What provision, if any, is made by this act for maintenance if the institution is built to the extent of the appropriation, after the transfer is made?

The statute in question undoubtedly contemplates a complete institution "separate and widely apart" from the grounds and buildings now used for the Industrial School for Girls and Woman's Prison. It further contemplates that the work shall be completed and turned over to the board of managers of the Industrial School for Girls on or before the 31st day of October, 1904; that when the transfer is made all of the girls under the control of the board of managers of the Woman's Prison, who may be properly under the control of the Girl's Industrial School, shall be transferred, and that all the property belonging to the Girls' Industrial School shall also be transferred; in other words, a certain number of the girls could not be transferred and maintained at the Girls' Industrial School and a certain number kept at the Woman's Prison.

While the statute provides that the work shall be "completed and turned over to the board of managers for the Industrial School for Girls, hereinafter privided for, on or before October 31, 1904," it contains the further provision that the duties of the commission shall end when this is done and final settlement made with the Auditor of State.

The act further provides that a separate board shall not be appointed until the buildings for such school are ready for occupancy.

We must bear in mind that the statute contemplates the completion of same, and that the buildings will be ready for occupancy on or before the 31st day of October, 1904.

The commissioners are only authorized to spend the amount of said appropriation in the manner and according to the provisions of said act. The commissioners have no legal right to undertake the construction and equipment of the buildings necessary for a complete institution if it is well known that the same can not be completed and paid for according to the terms and provisions of said law. The commissioners have no legal right to erect a portion of the necessary buildings and cause a certain number of the girls from the Woman's Prison to be transferred.

Under the terms of the act in question, no provision whatever is made for the maintenance of the Industrial School for Girls; hence, we must see what the general appropriation act contains. There we find (Acts 1903, p. 374): "For the Industrial School for Girls and Woman's Prison, for maintenance, $38,000, and at the rate of $160 per capita per annum for each person actually present over a daily average number of 235 inmates each month."

At the time this general appropriation act was passed, March 9, 1903, we had no "Industrial School for Girls," but we did have an "Industrial School for Girls and Woman's Prison," the act authorizing the separation of the same becoming a law on the 11th day of March, 1903. Therefore, there is no appropriation in the general appropriation act for the maintenance of the Industrial School for Girls.

There can be no legal division of the amount appropriated for the Industrial School for Girls and Woman's Prison between the Industrial School for Girls and the Woman's Prison, and, even if a legal division could be made, it would be exceedingly difficult to make a division from a practical standpoint.

So that, if buildings could be erected and completed on or before October 31, 1904, there would be no provision and no means of maintaining the institution after the transfer is made, until the general assembly would meet and make a specific appropriation for that purpose, unless it could be maintained out of the emergency contingent fund.

I have, I think, substantially answered your questions, endeavoring to do so strictly from a legal standpoint. Various suggestions might be made for the purpose of devising some plan or means by which, in a general way, the purposes and objects of the law enacted by the last legislature could be carried out.

PRISON—CONSTRUCTION OF "PRISON REFORM BOARD LAW."

October 14, 1903.

Hon. T. N. French, Secretary Prison Commission, Alexandria, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 5th you ask for a construction of the law known as the "Prison Reform Board Law," passed by the general assembly of 1903 (See Acts 1903, p. 529), in so far as it relates to the compensation of the ex officio members of the board, and as to the amount that can be expended by the board.

By section 3 of said act it is provided that the compensation for the services of each member of said commission appointed by the Governor shall not exceed $100.

Since the warden of the State Prison, the superintendent of the Indiana Reformatory, and the secretary of the Board of State Charities, are not appointed members by the Governor, but are made members ex officio, it is clear that they are not entitled to the per diem provided for in the statute, but, under the provision of said section 3, they are entitled to their necessary traveling and other expenses.

Said section 3 provides for the use of a sum not to exceed $800 for defraying necessary expenses, and a sum not to exceed $200 as compensation for the secretary and stenographer. Section 5 provides for an appropriation of $2,000 to pay the expenses of carrying out the work to be performed by said commission.

It seems clear to me that the total expenditures of said commission can not exceed $2,000, as that is the amount, only, that is appropriated.

INDIANA STATE SOLDIERS' HOME—TRUSTEE MAY SUPERVISE CONSTRUCTION OF HEATING PLANT FOR SAID INSTITUTION.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 27th, in which you ask an opinion:

> "If a trustee of the Indiana State Soldiers' Home may legally be employed by the Board of Trustees of said institution, under Section 8373f Burns' R. S. 1901 for the purpose of supervising the construction of a heating plant for said institution, authorized in Section 8373p, but which is being constructed under a subsequent appropriation."

It is my opinion that if the construction of the heating plant was authorized under section 8373p, under section 8373f the said board would have the right to engage the services of a member of the board to supervise the construction of the same even though such work was done under a subsequent appropriation.

FORESTRY USE OF EXPENSE FUND OF BOARD OF FORESTRY FOR CONSTRUCTION OF TELEPHONE TO FOREST RESERVATION.

November 2, 1903.

Hon. W. H. Freeman, Secretary State Board of Forestry, City:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 2d, in which you ask whether you would be authorized to pay for the construction of a telephone line from the headquarters on the forest reservation to the town of Henryville, and thus make telephonic communication with your office in the state house, and pay the same out of the thousand dollar appropriation made for the office and traveling expenses for your department, will say that as this telephone would be used for the purpose of saving expense of trips to the reservation, in my opinion you would be authorized to construct such line and pay the same out of this fund.

FOREIGN INVESTMENT COMPANIES.

November 12, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 11th, in which you ask for a construction of the acts approved March 11, 1901, one of which is found on page 487, Acts 1901, and the other on page 549 of said acts. You ask:

1. Does the act approved March 11th, found on page 487, conflict with the act approved on the same day, found on page 549, Acts 1901, and if so, do they annul each other?

The act found on page 487 is Senate Bill 415, the title of which is as folows:

> "An act regulating foreign corporations issuing stocks, bonds, contracts and agreements upon which payments are to be made in instalments or receiving deposits of money for any purpose, prescribing conditions upon which they can do business in this state, prescribing the duties of the Auditor of State with reference to such corporations, providing penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act, and declaring an emergency."

The first section of said act provides—

> "That it shall be unlawful for any corporation, association or society organized under the laws of any state (other than the state of Indiana), or of any government foreign to the government of the United States to conduct or engage in the business of a trust or investment company for the purpose of issuing its stocks, bonds, contracts or agreements to its members, or other persons, upon which payments are to be made in installments, or for the purpose of receiving deposits or payments of money for any purpose without first procuring a certificate of authority from the Auditor of State, which certificate shall be renewed annually."

It will be observed that this act is made applicable to a corporation or quasi corporation, organized under the laws of some state or government foreign to the state of Indiana, which are organized for the purpose of engaging in the business of a trust or investment company, for the purpose of issuing its stocks and bonds, contracts or agreements to its members, or other persons, or for the purpose of receiving deposits or payments of money for any purpose.

That this act is to apply only to corporations organized for the foregoing purposes, is shown by section 2, which provides that "before the Auditor of State issues such certificates to any such corporation, association or society, it shall file in his office a statement, under oath, of its president and secretary, showing the date of its incorporation, the names of its officers and the amount of its capital stock."

The term "trust or investment company" has a definite meaning in a business sense.

The act found on page 549 is House Bill 521, and is entitled:

> "An act regulating foreign investment companies."

Section 1 of said act provides:

> "It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, joint stock company or corporation organized under the laws of any state, territory or the District of Columbia, other than the state of Indiana, or any government foreign to the government of the United States, to conduct or engage, directly or indirectly, in the business of selling its stocks, bonds, contracts, shares, memberships or agreements of any kind, receiving therefor payment on the instalment plan, without first procuring from the Auditor of State a certificate of authority."

It will be seen that this act applies to persons, firms, joint stock companies or corporations, who shall directly or indirectly engage in the business therein set out.

These acts having been passed by the same legislature, and approved on the same day, although going into effect at different times, must, under the rules of statutory construction, be construed together, so as to give effect to each, if this can be done without doing violence to the language in either.

With this rule before us, it seems that there should be no difficulty in construing the acts to mean that the act found on page 487 should be held to apply to such foreign corporations as are properly designated "trust or investment companies," and the act found on page 549 should be held to apply to all other persons, firms, companies or corporations, foreign to the state of Indiana.

Being so construed, they would not be construed one to have annulled the other, and, under this construction, it would be the duty of the Auditor to apply the rules for admission found in the act on page 487 to all companies that he determines to be trust or investment companies. Those that could not properly be denominated such should be admitted under the rules prescribed by the act found on page 549.

2. You ask if the Auditor can accept as security, as provided in section 3 of the act found on page 487, the notes given for loans made to the holders of the debenture bonds of the company, and pledged to the company for the security of the loan.

Section 3 was evidently enacted for the purpose of securing to the creditors within this state protection for their investments. A note of a person unknown, secured by a bond of the company, would be of little more protection than the company would give of itself.

Certainly the legislature did not intend that a company could comply with this section of the act by putting up its own bonds as security.

Therefore, in my opinion, a note given by a person to the company, secured only by a bond of the company, would not be the kind of security intended by said section 3, and should not be accepted by the Auditor.

3. You ask: Can the $25,000 deposit provided for in said section 3 of said act, be withdrawn at the end of the first year the company does business in the state, and be replaced with securities in an amount equal to the liability of the company to the citizens of this state?

So much of said section 3 as relates to this question provides:

> "Which amount shall remain in possession of said Auditor for and during the first year that said corporation, association or society shall do business. At the end of said first year said corporation, association or society shall deposit with said Auditor of State, stocks or bonds approved by said Auditor, equal to the amount of its liabilities to citizens of this state, and shall keep such deposits at all times equal to such liabilities."

Under this provision of the section, a trust or investment company which made the deposit of $25,000 as required would be entitled to withdraw the same at the end of the first year of its doing business in this state, upon its placing in the hands of the Auditor approved stocks or bonds equal to the liabilities of the citizens within the state, if such liabilities were less than $25,000; if such liabilities were in excess of $25,000, then said company would be compelled to increase the deposit to the full amount of such liabilities.

PRISON—GOOD TIME—NO MONEY TO BE GIVEN PAROLED PRISONERS.

November 16, 1903.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 14th:

It was decided by our supreme court in the case of Davis v. State, 51 N. E. 928, that the indeterminate sentence law did not repeal the good time law, and by former constructions of this office it has been held that a person sentenced before the indeterminate sentence law went into effect was entitled to the good time prescribed by the statute, and that he was entitled to have this good time calculated the same as though the indeterminate sentence law had not been passed.

The law is not clear on this subject, and it seems to me this would be the only safe construction. So, in my opinion, you should compute the good time up to the expiration of the sentence.

Replying to your second question, I find that the law provides that where a person is discharged, you shall, in addition to providing him with proper clothing, furnish him ten dollars in money; but, by an express provision, where a prisoner is paroled you are only authorized to furnish him with the clothing, and are not authorized by such statute to furnish such paroled prisoner any money.

The reason for this is that the parole law provides that no person shall be paroled who has not a place, and it is presumed that where he has employment before being paroled, money will not be necessary; therefore, it is my opinion that you would not be authorized to furnish such prisoner money, although I have no doubt in many cases it would be altogether beneficial so to do.

INSURANCE—FRATERNAL BENEFICIARY ASSOCIATIONS SURRENDER VALUE TO RETIRING MEMBER—LEVEL RATE —WHEN ONE ASSESSMENT DOES NOT EQUAL LARGEST LIABILITY TO ONE MEMBER.

November 17, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 16th, in which you ask the following questions:

ONE.

> Does the fraternal law in stating that each association must make provision for payment of benefits in the event of death, and may make provision for payment of benefits in event of sickness or disability, thereby prohibit an association from paying any sum to retiring members? Would an association of another state promising to pay to a retiring member a certain portion of the reserve fund as a surrender value, be entitled to admission to the state?

A fraternal association is defined, and its organization provided for, in the act of 1899 (See Acts 1899, p. 177; being section 5050a, Burns' R. S. 1901). A portion of this act is as follows:

> "That a fraternal beneficiary association is hereby declared to be a corporation, society or voluntary association, formed or organized and carried on for the sole benefit of its members and their beneficiaries, and not for profit. Each association shall have a lodge system, with ritualistic form of work and representative form of government, and shall make provision for the payment of benefits in case of death, and may make provision for the payment of benefits in case of sickness, temporary or permanent physical disability, either as the result of disease, accident or old age, > provided the period of life at which the payment of physical disability benefits on account of old age commences shall not be under seventy (70) years."

By this definition and these provisions, a fraternal beneficiary association has the powers therein given, and no other. The powers so expressed are: to provide for the payment of benefits in case of death; benefits in case of sickness, and temporary or permanent physical disability either by accident or old age; but disability from old age can only be provided for where such disability commences after the age of seventy years.

A fraternal association can not enlarge these powers, The legislature clearly expressed the intention, by these provisions, that a fraternal association shall not be organized for profit, and shall not be permitted to do a general life or accident insurance business, and if such fraternal association endeavors to benefit any others than those mentioned in the act, it should not be permitted to do business in this state. Under the provisions of this act, the society is not permitted to pay claims except in the cases therein expressed.

There being no provision in the law that the society may pay any portion of its funds as a surrender value to a retired member, such payment would not be authorized by the act, and such society proposing to make such payments should not be permitted to do business in this state.

TWO

You ask:

> "If an association, while reserving the right to make assessment in addition to the regular stated assessments, yet purports to give a level rate throughout life, should the minimum rate provided by law be the level rate for a whole life insurance calculated upon the mortality table set forth in the law? If so, what rate of interest should be used in the calculation?"

Section 3 of the act of 1899, supra (being section 5050c, Burns' R. S. 1901), provides as follows:

"Such fraternal beneficiary association shall show that the mortuary assessment rates, provided for in whatever plan of business it has adopted are not lower than is indicated as necessary by the following mortality table:" (Then follows a mortality table).

This provision is to the effect that the rates shall not be less than shown by this table. The law does not contemplate a level rate; fraternal societies are not organized upon the basis of a level rate premium; they are assessment societies, and the effect of such provision is that the assessments shall not be at a lower rate than that prescribed in said section.

THREE.

"Is an association of another state entitled to admission to Indiana when one assessment upon its members will not yield an amount sufficient to pay in full the largest death loss the association might be called upon to pay, when the certificates and by-laws give to the association the right to pay in annual instalments until such time as one regular assessment will equal the largest amount which the association might be called upon to pay?"

Section 5050c, supra, provides:

"Any such fraternal association * * * shall be admitted to do business within this state, when it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Auditor of State that its charter or articles of association, and its by-laws provide for the conduct of its business in accordance with the provisions of this act; that it has at the time it applies for admission to do business within this state a sufficient number of members so that one assessment, or other stated payments in lieu of such assessment, upon such members, the amount of which assessment or other stated payment shall not exceed the amount previously provided by the laws of the order, shall be sufficient to pay in full the largest death loss the association might be called upon, under its laws to pay," etc.

This act is clear, and any association that does not have a membership sufficiently large so that one assessment, or other stated payments, shall not exceed the amount previously provided by the laws of the order, shall be sufficient to pay in full the largest claim the association might be called upon to pay, would not meet the requirements of this act, and should not be admitted to do business within the state.

That these acts must be strictly complied with is shown by the last clause in said section 5050c, which is as follows:

> "Every provision of this section shall be considered a condition precedent for such association doing business within this state."

INSURANCE—CENTRAL MUTUAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

November 20, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—I have examined the articles of association of the Central Mutual Benefit Association and find that said articles do not comply with the law of the state of Indiana providing for the incorporation of mutual life or life and accident insurance companies in the following respects, to wit: The object of said association as set out in the articles, is to transact "a general life and accident insurance business and for the payment of partial and permanent disability claims to living members," etc.

The act of 1897, under which this company seeks to be incorporated, provides, among other things, that the articles of incorporation or association shall show, "in case of life corporations, associations or societies, the limit as to the age of applicants for membership shall not exceed sixty-five years and that medical examinations are required, * * * and that bona fide applications have been secured for $200,000, by not less than 200 persons who have each made application for membership in such proposed corporation, association or society and have each been examined and recommended by a reliable physician."

The articles before us do not provide for medical examination and there is no showing that they have received the required number of bona fide applications for life insurance and that such applicants have each been examined by a reliable physician.

These facts are necessary to be shown to the Auditor before such company is entitled to be licensed to do a life insurance business. The fact that a showing has been made that might entitle the company to be authorized to do an accident insurance business does not alter the case as they are seeking a license to do both a life and accident as well as a disability business. It is unquestionably necessary that a company that seeks to do both a life and accident business should show that it had complied with all of the requirements necessary to entitle it to be authorized to engage in either life or accident insurance. For this reason I must decline to recommend said articles of association to the Secretary of State.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY—INSANE—VACANCY IN OFFICE.

November 27, 1903.

Hon. W. T. Durbin, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communicoation of the 17th relative to the case of Simeon Hudson, Prosecuting Attorney for the Forty-second Judicial Circuit: By the facts set out in said communication it appears that Hudson was elected prosecuting attorney for said circuit which term would expire on January 1, 1904, and at the election of 1902 he was re-elected as his own successor for second term to begin on said January 1, 1904. Afterwards in May, 1903, said Hudson became insane and still continues insane and is unable to perform the duties of said prosecuting attorney.

Your communication also contains a letter from George F. Edenharter, Superintendent of the Central Indiana Hospital for the Insane, to the effect that said Hudson in his opinion is incurably insane. The question presented is whether you have the right to appoint a successor to said Hudson under this showing.

The statutes of our state have not provided for a case of this character. The statute does provide that whenever any vacancy occurs in any circuit or district office commissioned by the governor he may fill such vacancy until filled by a qualified successor. The only question then to be determined is whether there is a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney for the Forty-second Judicial Circuit and this question is not free from doubt. The rule seems to be that such a vacancy in an office in existence as will authorize the place to be filled by appointment can only be caused by the expiration of the term of service and the right to hold as fixed by law or by the death, resignation or removal of the person elected or appointed or by the happening of some other event by which the duties of the office are no longer discharged at all.

Under this latter specification it would seem that when a person became insane and was incapable of performing the duties of the office, such office would thereby become vacant.

In the case of State v. Pidgeon, 8 Blackstone 132, it was held that temporary insanity for a period of three weeks did not create such a vacancy as authorized the permanent appointment of a party to the office of treasurer but that decision seems to indicate that if the insanity had have been incurable then the right to have appointed might have existed.

It is my opinion that if said Hudson is not incurably insane at the time of the beginning of his second term of office in January, so that he would be incapable of taking such office and entering upon his said second term, then there would be such a vacancy as would warrant you in filling it by appointment. But before you are warranted in so doing you should be advised of such facts as provided in section 7576, Burns' R. S. 1901, which provides as follows:

> "All vacancies occasioned, except by resignation, in which it is the duty of the governor to issue a writ of election to make an appointment to fill such vacancy, shall be certified to him by the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which such officer was elected; and, if elected by more than one county, then by the clerk of the county where such officer resided."

The papers submitted do not comply with this section of the statute for the reason that no certificate is made to you by the clerk of the county where said Hudson resides of the facts set out in said statement. I would advise that you return the papers with the suggestion that they be prepared under the said provisions of the said section 7576.

INDETERMINATE SENTENCE LAW—POWER OF JUDGE TO LIMIT TERM OF IMPRISONMENT.

November 30, 1903.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your inquiry of the 26th, in regard to the mittimus of W. H. Smith, No. 2703: From the judgment as recited in said mittimus and the letter from Hon. J. W. Macy, presiding judge, it appears that said Smith was convicted and sentenced under an act of the legislature of 1903, for obtaining money by aid of false check (See Acts 1903, p. 358). The penalty provisions of said act are that such person > "Shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than one hundred ($100.00) dollars, and not more than five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars; to which may be added imprisonment in the State's prison not exceeding five (5) years."

By the act of 1897 (being section 1906a, Burns' R. S. 1901), known as the Indeterminate Sentence Law, it is provided that—

> "Whenever any male person, thirty years of age or over, shall be on trial for any felony, which is punishable by imprisonment in the state's prison, except treason, and murder in the first or second degrees, the court or jury trying said cause shall ascertain only whether or not the person is guilty of the offense charged; if more than one offense is charged, then it shall be found by such court or jury trying such person as to which of such offenses such person is guilty, if of either, and of which such person is not guilty, if of either. Instead of pronouncing upon such person a definite time of imprisonment in the state prison for a fixed term, after such finding or verdict, the court trying said cause shall pronounce upon such person an indeterminate sentence of imprisonment in a state's prison for a term, stating in such sentence the minimum and maximum limits thereof, fixing as the minimum time of such imprisonment and the term now or hereafter prescribed as the minimum imprisonment for the punishment of such offense, and as the maximum time, the maximum time now or hereafter prescribed as a penalty for the commission of such offense."

It will be seen by the provisions of this section that in case a person is convicted of felony, the judge shall pronounce sentence for the minimum and maximum time; which minimum and maximum time shall be governed by the statute fixing the penalty for such offense.

The statute under which Smith was convicted and sentenced, in terms does not provide a minimum time; but does provide a maximum time; so that his sentence, under the section in question, would be from one minute to five years .

The court can not, by his decree, change the minimum or maximum time fixed by the statute; neither does it appear that it was the intention of the legislature in enacting the statute of 1903 in question, to repeal the indeterminate sentence law enacted in 1897, and it must be construed to come within the provisions of the earlier act rather than to repeal it, since repeals by implication are not favored.

Therefore, it is my opinion that Smith is eligible to parole at any time, but does not have to be discharged until the expiration of the five years, notwithstanding the time fixed by the mittimus.

ANATOMICAL BOARD—UNCLAIMED BODY, ETC.

December 2, 1903.

Hon. Amos W. Butler, Secretary Board of State Charities:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 1st, enclosing a letter from Lewis Schirmeyer, trustee of Wayne township, Allen county, in which you ask

> "Do the provisions of the law providing for the promotion of anatomical science, and to prevent the desecration of graves, passed by the legislature of 1903 (See Acts 1903, p. 84), prohibit the township trustee from aiding a poor family in the burial of its dead?"

Section 2 of said act provides:

> "It shall be the duty of every public officer, agent and servant, and every officer, agent and servant of any and every county, township, city, town, village, or other municipality, * * * having in his or their possession, charge or control the dead body of any person not claimed by any relatives or legal representative, as hereinafter provided, and which may be required to be buried at public expense * * * are hereby required to notify said anatomical board of such persons as may be designated by the said board or its duly authorized officer or agent, whenever any such body or bodies come to his or their possession, charge or control for burial at public expense, or the expense of any one of such institutions. And every such officer, agent and servant shall, upon application by said anatomical board or its agent, without fee or reward, deliver such body to said board * * *. But no such body shall be delivered if within the time specified above and before actual delivery any person claiming to be and satisfying the officer in charge of such body that he is a relative to the deceased or a duly authorized representative thereof shall claim the said body for burial, but it shall be surrendered for interment."

By the provisions of this section it will be observed that before such officer is required to deliver such body to said anatomical board, two conditions must exist: First, he must be in possession of the body; two, it must be a body unclaimed by either relatives or personal representatives, for a period of twenty-four hours. If either of said conditions is absent, such officer is not authorized to deliver such body to said anatomical board.

The fact that a body belongs to a poor family, and must be buried at public expense, is not sufficient to authorize the officer to deliver such body to the anatomical board, or refuse to aid in the burial thereof.

I can not believe that it was the intention of the legislature that the body of every poor person should be given up to the dissecting table. Common humanity demands that the tender sentiments of our poor for their dead should be respected, notwithstanding that their unfortunate circumstances require the expense of the burial of their dead to be borne by the more favored members of the community.

SCHOOLS—REVISION OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

December 4, 1903.

Hon. Fassett A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 30th ult. you submit copies of the minutes of the Board of School Book Commissioners, in relation to the revision of certain text books; from which it appears that said Board of School Book Commissioners undertook to order a revision, under the act of the legislature passed March 1, 1893 (being sections 5890 and 5891, Burns' R. S. 1901). You ask that I examine these proceedings and determine whether, in my opinion, such proceedings as are herein shown, meet the requirements of said sections, and whether the revision made thereunder is a legal revision, conferring all of the rights and privileges to the contractors, as is contemplated by said sections.

It appears from the copies of the minutes submitted that the board met to consider the question of the revision of arithmetics, geographies and readers, and to ascertain whether the publishers of such books would consent to such revision as the board might think proper to order.

At this meeting the board appointed a committee to investigate the question of the revision of each of said books; that, at a subsequent meeting each of these committees made a report to the board upon each of said books. In each case the committee reported that the contractors were willing to submit to a revision of the books, and in each case recommended that each of said books be revised, and recommended that the responsibility of the revision should rest upon the publishers, and not upon the board, but that such revision should be such as to be satisfactory to the board; that such revised book should be submitted to the board not later than January 1, 1904, for its acceptance or rejection by the board.

After these reports were submitted a resolution was passed by said board, of the following tenor:

> "Moved, That a revision of Frye's Geographies be ordered, and that an advisory committee of three be appointed by the Chair for consultation with the publishers: Provided, That neither the committee nor the board of education be committed to the adoption of the revised books unless they shall be made satisfactory to the board on or before January 1, 1904: And provided, further, That satisfactory exchange conditions be made in case the revised books can not be used in classes with the old books."

A similar resolution was passed as to the revision of the Cook-Cropsey arithmetic, and the Indiana series of readers and of the New Era copy book. Upon these resolutions, committees were appointed, letters were addressed to the publishers submitting to them the resolutions and asking for letters accepting the conditions of such resolutions. In each case the publishers accepted the conditions.

At subsequent meetings reports of the different committees on the progress that was being made in the revision were submitted to the board; all of which reports are to the effect that the committee was acting in an advisory capacity with the publishers, and not in a directory manner.

The committee appointed to superintend the revision of the First and Second Readers made a report to the board, in which it recommended that Miss Klingensmith, of Ft. Wayne, be selected to revise such First and Second Readers; but there is no showing by the minutes of the board that she was so selected; in fact, there seems to have been nothing done on this report.

The committee appointed to superintend the revision of arithmetics recommended to the publishers the names of O. L. Kelso and Dr. Robert J. Aley as excellent persons to make the revision; but in making such recommendation the committee, as shown by the correspondence, specifically calls the publishers' attention to the fact that such committee is only advisory, and that the recommendation of these parties was merely a suggestion of the committee and in no sense binding upon the publishers, as the committee specifically state to the publishers that such publishers were at entire liberty to employ other persons for the work.

The foregoing is a statement of the substantial acts of the board in regard to this revision.

The law as to the revision is not clear, but it appears that in case a revision of a school book now in use in the public schools, when adopted by the board, would operate as a continuance of the contract under which it was published, for another period of five years; in other words, when a revision is properly ordered by the board, it, in effect, extends the existing contract for its publication for a period of five years, without any competition or bidding.

So, in this respect, the statute authorizing a revision confers a valuable right upon the contracting publisher. The statute providing for a revision (being section 63 of the Codified School Laws, and section 5890 Burns' R. S. 1901), is as follows:

> "Whenever the contractors for furnishing books for use in the common schools, under the provisions of existing laws hereinbefore specified, shall have filed with the state superintendent of public instruction, their consent in writing to the revision, or the introduction of an intermediate book, as hereinafter provided, duly executed by them, and the state board of school book commissioners shall determine that a revision is needed of any or all of the books in use in the common schools under contract made pursuant to law, or that an intermediate grammar or language lessons is needed, then it shall be lawful for the state board of school book commissioners to order a revision to be made of any or all of such books as in their judgment may be found necessary for the welfare of the common schools of the state, in the manner and under the conditions following: The said board of school book commissioners shall select a competent author or authors to perform the work of revision of the subject-matter of such book or books so ordered to be revised. The entire cost of such revision, including the manuscript, illustrations, engravings, maps and plates therefore, shall be paid for by the contractor or contractors, who may, at the time of such revision, be required to furnish such book, or books, under their contract with the state. The cost and expense, however, of such revision shall first be agreed upon by the state board of school book commissioners and the contractor or contractors, before such work of revision is commenced."

It will be observed that to comply with this statute, first, the consent of the contractor to the revision must be obtained; second, an order of revision must be made; third, the revision must be made "in the manner and under the conditions following;" the conditions are (1) that the board shall select a competent author or authors to perform the work of revision; (2) the cost of the revision must be paid by the contractor, or contractors, furnishing the book; (3) the cost and expense of such revision shall first be agreed upon by the state board and the contractor, before the revision is commenced.

The minutes show that the board met the first and second general requirements of the statute and obtained the consent of the contractors and ordered the revision to be made; but the board did not comply with the first condition prescribed by the statute under which the revision should be made, and select the author to make the revision. It did comply with the second condition in so far as it demanded that the cost should be borne by the contractor, but it did not comply with the third condition and agree and fix with the contractors the cost of such revision before such revision was made.

If the first and second conditions that were not complied with are directory merely, then the revision in this case is a legal one. If, however, those conditions are mandatory, the revision in question is illegal and not binding.

It is evident from all of the enactments made by the legislature, known as the school book law, that it was the intention of the legislature to furnish the school children and patrons of the schools in the state the best school book obtainable at the lowest price.

The Board of School Book Commissioners act in a representative capacity, representing the patrons and the school children, and those provisions of the law prescribing how they shall perform any act which gives to the contractor a right, and affects the interests of the real parties, the patrons and school children, must be considered to be mandatory and strictly followed.

The rule is laid down in Endlich on Interpretation of Statutes, section 433, as follows:

> "Where powers or rights are granted with a direction that certain regulations or formalities shall be complied with, it seems neither unjust nor inconvenient to exact a rigorous observance of them, as essential to the acquisition of the right or authority conferred."

In the case of Ryan v. Vanlandingham, 7 Ind. 416, on page 422, the court say:

> "The rules of construction applicable to legislation on subjects in which the public at large are interested, are essentially different from those which apply to private grants to individuals or artificial persons, of powers and privileges conferred to be exercised with special reference to their own advantage. The former are to be expounded liberally and beneficially to effectuate the purposes for which they were enacted; the latter are to be construed strictly as against the grantees."

The same principle is laid down in the case of Board of Commissioners of Vigo County v. Davis et al., 136 Ind. 503. On page 511 the court say:

> "Rules of construction applicable to legislation, in which the public at large are interested, require liberality, while, with reference to legislation granting powers or privileges to individuals, for their own advantage, require strict construction as against such individuals."

The revision of a school book is a matter of vital importance to the school children and patrons of the schools throughout the state. It means that such children shall be compelled to use, and such patrons shall be compelled to buy, a certain text book for a period of five years.

It would seem that it would be unjust to the legislators to say that they intended to give the state board powers to perform an act so vital to the interests of the schools, and prescribe the method by which the power should be exercised, and yet not intend that the manner prescribed should be strictly followed, but that the power could be exercised in any manner the board might deem best.

There are potent reasons why the conditions prescribed for the exercise of this power, and which were not complied with by the board, should be strictly followed. The law contemplates that the best book obtainable shall be used. To insure this quality, the best author obtainable should be selected to prepare it, and the Board of School Book Commissioners are presumed to be the best judges of such author; hence, they should select the author.

As the revision of the book means the granting of a valuable franchise to the contractor, it is nothing but just that he should pay the expense of this revision; but the board is entitled to the best effort of the author in making the revision, and the author should not be under obligations to the contractor who is to pay his fee; hence, the provision that the price of the author's services must be determined and settled before the revision begins.

These very important requirements were omitted by the board in ordering the revision in question.

Again, the power to order a revision was not given in the general law concerning the adoption and contracting for school books, but is a supplemental act, engrafted upon the general law. This being true, it is in the nature of specific direction, and must be strictly followed.

This rule is laid down in Sutherland on Statutory Construction, section 454:

> "When a statute is passed authorizing a proceeding, which was not allowed by the general law before, and directing the mode in which an act shall be done, the mode pointed out must be strictly pursued. It is the condition on which alone a party can entitle himself to the benefit of the statute, that its direction shall be strictly complied with; otherwise, the steps taken will be void. * * * Where a statute, in granting a new power, prescribes how it shall be exercised, it can lawfully be exercised in no other way."

For the foregoing reasons I am compelled to hold that the revision in question does not meet the requirements of the law provided in the sections above quoted, and is not a legal revision under the laws of this state, and can not be so considered by the State Board of School Book Commissioners.

SCHOOLS—ADOPTION OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

December 7, 1903.

Hon. Fassett A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 7th, in which you ask—in view of the fact that the attempted revision of the school books by the Board of School Book Commissioners has been held illegal—"Can the board advertise for new books to take the place of those for which contracts expire in April, May and June, 1904?" And if so, "Can the new books, when contracted for, be introduced into the schools of the state September 1st, 1904, the appended notice having been given to the school officials of the state as provided by law?"

Under the school book law there are two ways provided for introducing new books:

(1) By revision, under the provisions of sections 63 and 64 of the codified school laws;

(2) By the adoption of an entirely new book.

There having been no legal revision, and the contracts for certain books now in use being about to expire, your board has the right to advertise for bids and to adopt and enter into a contract for the publication of the new book so adopted by the board.

In advertising for bids for such new book you will be governed by sections 27 and 28 of the codified school laws of the state. Such new book so adopted and contracted for shall be introduced in the school after the expiration of the existing contracts.

The law provides that no new book shall be introduced until one year's notice of such change shall have been given by the State Board of School Book Commissioners to county superintendents and the different school officers of the state.

The section providing for this notice clearly indicates the purpose thereof, it being to enable the publishers and school officers to reduce their stock to a minimum, so as not to suffer loss by the change.

The notice attached to your communication, and which you state has been given to the school officers of the state, is a notice that geographies, arithmetics, first, second and third readers and copy books will be revised, and the revised book introduced in 1904.

While this notice speaks of the book being a revised book, it serves all the purposes required by the statute, in giving notice to the handlers of the book that they must scale their stock to a minimum, and answers all of the purposes required, and is a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute. In my opinion it is a sufficient notice and would authorize you to introduce new books in the place of the old, on all the subjects enumerated in such notice, in 1904.

MEYLER v. WEDDING—APPROPRIATION.

December 8, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—The appropriation act of 1901 (Acts 1901, p. 379) contains the following language, making a specific appropriation:

> "Specific. For printing records and other expenses in the suit of Meyler v. Wedding, to be appealed to the supreme court of the United States, and such other suit or suits as may arise therefrom, the sum of two thousand ($2,000.00) dollars, or so much thereof as may be required, to be immediately available."

At that time the case of Meyler v. Wedding had been recently decided by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, and had not yet been taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and could not be taken to that court until the mandate of the Court of Appeals had been carried out by the Warren Circuit Court of Kentucky, where the case originated.

It was a matter of common knowledge that cases in the Supreme Court of the United States are not commonly disposed of within two years from the time an appeal or writ of error is taken, and, by law, two years time is given for the taking of an appeal or writ of error in cases which go from a state court to the Supreme Court of the United States.

From a reading of this section it was the evident purpose of the general assembly to appropriate money for the purpose of paying the expenses of this litigation while it continued.

This case was pending in the supreme court during the legislative session of 1903, and no further or additional appropriation was made.

You ask whether the two thousand dollars appropriated for this fund by the general assembly of 1901 remained in the fund as available for the purposes for which it was appropriated, or returned to the general fund at the expiration of the period for which appropriations were made—October 31, 1903.

In my opinion this appropriation was made with the intention of paying the expenses and costs of that litigation, however long it might continue, provided such costs and expenses did not exceed the amount appropriated, and, consequently, whatever portion of the appropriation has not been expended was not returned to the general fund, but remains in the hands of the Treasurer, available for the general purposes of the litigation in the case named.

BANKS—SAVINGS BANK BUSINESS.

December 9, 1903.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 8th, in which you ask:

> "Can banks of discount and deposit in this state, organized under the State Bank Act, Section 2921, and the following sections, Burns' R. S. 1901, do the business of a savings bank in connection with their banking business? Are not such banks prohibited from doing a savings bank business under Section 2992, Revised Statute of 1901?"

Section 2921, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides that any number of persons not less than five, may form themselves into a corporation as a bank of discount and deposit with such rights and powers as are named in this act, etc.

The rights and powers conferred on such corporations are found in section 2924 and among other things provides that they may have:

> "All the powers incidental and proper or which may be necessary and usual in carrying on the business of banking as a bank of discount and deposit."

Nowhere in this connection is it provided or is it indicated that it was the intention of the legislature that a bank of discount and deposit should also be a savings bank.

Section 2940, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides:

> "Any number of persons being voters of this state, not less than seven nor more than twenty-one, who shall have been citizens of the county where they then reside for at least five years then next preceding, and who shall severally own unencumbered real estate therein worth at least $5,000, exclusive of perishable improvements, may associate themselves together for the purpose of organizing and managing a savings bank in such county."

Subsequent provisions of the act make it necessary that subsequent trustees shall have the same qualifications as the original trustees. It will be observed that the requirements and qualifications of a trustee of the savings bank is quite different from that of a trustee of a bank of discount and deposit. It will also be observed upon the reading of the law in regard to savings banks that these institutions have a great many safeguards and restrictions that are not thrown around the ordinary bank but section 2992 expressly prohibits any bank, banking association, private banker or individual to advertise or put forth a sign as a savings bank or in any way to solicit or receive deposits as a savings bank.

From these provisions it is very clear that a bank organized as a bank of discount and deposit has no power or authority to do a savings bank business, and in addition to its having no power to engage in such business it is expressly prohibited by said section 2992 from engaging in such business.

SCHOOLS—REVISION OF SCHOOL BOOKS.

December 9, 1903.

Hon. Fassett A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 9th: The law providing for a revision of school books does not make any provision as to the time when the same shall be made; therefore, the State Board of School Book Commissioners would have the right to employ authors to make the revision and fix the compensation as provided for in section 64 of the school book law.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL—REPORT.

December 11, 1903.

Hon. John R. Ward, Adjutant General:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 11th, in which you ask when you should make the report to the Governor required by section 7424-k, Burns' R. S. 1901. Said section is as follows:

"The adjutant-general shall, within one month after the close of the fiscal year, report to the governor the amount of the military fund drawn, the amount expended and the items of expenditure, and in such report shall publish copies of all general orders together with such other matters as may be deemed necessary or important to the military service."

The fiscal year for the state, as generally recognized, is the year beginning on the first day of November and ending on the thirty-first day of the succeeding October; but there is no statute fixing this as a fiscal year, and it is recognized as the fiscal year for the reason that all general appropriations are made for said time.

The last law providing for the militia is section 1 of an act of the legislature of 1903 (See Acts 1903, p. 583), and, in part, is as follows:

> "That there is hereby, and shall be, appropriated annually, on the first day of January, out of the revenue of the state not otherwise appropriated by law, the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars, which shall be set aside and constitute a fund for military purposes."

This provision is identical with the provision of the act of 1895, except that the amount is changed from forty-five thousand dollars to seventy-five thousand dollars, and the legislature of 1895, in the same act, passed section 7424-k, above quoted.

Construing these two enactments together, it would seem that the fiscal year for the militia would be from January to January, and that your report should be made within thirty days from the 31st day of December of each year, as, to report otherwise would necessitate the making of a financial report in the middle of a fiscal year.

(1) SECRETARY AND STENOGRAPHER, ETC.; (2) AUDITING CLAIMS OF BOARD.

January 6, 1904.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden Indiana State Prison, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 5th, in which you ask for a construction of the act of the legislature of 1903 creating a Board of Prison Reform (See Acts 1903, page 529), as to the following propositions:

First. Can the office of secretary and stenographer, provided for in said act be embodied in one person?

Second. Can a member of the board be also secretary and stenographer and draw compensation for both positions?

Third. How shall the claims of such board be audited?

Answering the first question will say in my opinion the secretary and stenographer provided for in said act, can be embodied in one person and such person receive the full pay provided for such secretary and stenographer.

In my opinion it was not the intention of the legislature that a member of the commission should be the secretary and stenographer and draw compensation both as a member of the board and as such secretary and stenographer. Section 3 of said act provides that the compensation for the services of each member of such commission, appointed by the Governor, shall not exceed $100 each year, based upon the rate of $5 per day for each day of actual services rendered. It would be competent for the Board to appoint one of its members as secretary or as secretary and stenographer but he could not receive pay for services as such secretary and stenographer.

Section 4 provides that the acts of such commission shall be approved as it may determine. The manner of auditing and approving the claims may be fixed by the Board. This should be done by a resolution entered upon the minutes of the Board and the Auditor of State should be advised of such resolution.

PRINTING—BINDING OF MANUSCRIPTS OF DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, TO BE USED AT LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION, SHOULD BE DONE BY PUBLIC PRINTER, UNDER DIRECTION OF STATE PRINTING BOARD.

January 12, 1904.

Hon. F. A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 11th you ask: "Does the binding of books to be used by your department in the exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and which is to be paid for out of the funds of the State, appropriated by the last legislature for that purpose, legally belong to the public printer or can you or your committee advertise for bids for such binding and let the same to the lowest bidder?"

The question you present has been passed upon in different phases by my predecessors, the Hon. Alonzo G. Smith and Hon. William A. Ketcham.

The section of the statute providing for the work contemplated under the provisions for a public printer is 7599 Burns' R. S. 1901 and is as follows:

> "That all the printing, binding and stationery authorized by law, at the expense of the state and chargeable to the state, shall be executed through the commissioners and clerk in this act before named, and all laws authorizing printing, binding or stationery by any officer or institution, to be chargeable to the state, shall be construed to mean that the printing, binding and stationery of such officers or institutions shall be done through such commissioners."

Section 7603 provides how payment for printing shall be made and provides what printing and binding and what reports shall be paid for out of the general printing fund. Said section then further provides that:

> "All other reports required to be printed and published under the provisions of this act shall be paid for out of the funds appropriated for such institutions and all stationery and expenses so incurred shall be done under the contract and supervision of the Board of Public Printing and Binding and Stationery."

Under the general appropriations act of the legislature of 1903, (See Acts of the Legislature of 1903, p. 380), under item 21 it is provided:

> "No vouchers for printing, stationery or supplies, furnished under contract by the public printer shall be paid, if payable, to any other than the public printer."

In a letter to Hon. J. O. Henderson, where the question came up of what stationery and binding and printing should be done by the Public Printer, the Hon. Alonzo G. Smith, on page 149 of his report for 1893, uses this language:

> "It is further provided in the latter part of section 10 of the same act that 'All other reports required to be printed and published under the provisions of this act, shall be paid for out of the funds appropriated for such institutions, and all stationery and expenses so incurred shall be done under the contract and supervision of the Board of Public Printing and Binding and Stationery.'
> "Explanation of the foregoing provisions of the contract held by the Public Printer, and of the act of 1885, would seem almost superfluous. The language used is express and unambiguous. All reports, blanks, stationery and similar supplies, as stipulated in said contract, must be procured from the Public Printer, and it is not within the power of any of the State officers or boards of trustees having control of the public institutions of the State to enter into any contract for the furnishing of such supplies that may be charged to the State. The making of such an agreement is absolutely precluded both by the law and the action of the Board of Commissioners of Public Printing and Binding and Stationery, taken on the first day of November, 1891."

In a letter to Hon. A. W. Butler, Secretary, found on page 217 of Mr. Ketcham's report for 1897-8, in regard to binding magazines in the State Library, the Hon. William A. Ketcham, construing the different sections herein above quoted, uses this language:

> "As it seems to me, under the law and the proposals by the Bureau of Public Printing, etc., any person bidding for the contract, would have the right to presume that in the event he made such a bid as to justify the Board in giving him the contract he could rely on doing all the work that is to be paid for by public funds out of the public treasury, and that would include, of course, the work you refer to in your inquiry. Doubtless there will be articles furnished, or work done, under the contract, where it might be obtained, in individual instances, at a lesser rate; but, if so, that is a benefit to which the public printer is entitled. When the contract is awarded him, it is on the theory that, on the whole, his contract is the best, and, undoubtedly, his bid is made on the proposition that he will get the whole. It is also quite likely that there may come up work for which no specific amount is named in the call for bids, or in the bids; but that would not be, I think, a sufficient reason for saying that the public printer was not entitled to the benefit of it. I think he would still be entitled to do the work, and the question as to the amount to be paid therefor would be an open question. If no specific sum was named, and the public printer asked a larger sum than, to the particular office or Board of Public Printing, seemed proper, it would be for them to resist the unjust demand."

I see no reason for overruling these opinions and they seem to me to be directly in point. Under the constructions of my predecessors and under the law it seems to me that all binding and printing done by an officer or commissioner of the State, that is to be paid for out of the State fund, should be done by the public printer, under the direction of the Printing Board, although paid for out of a specific fund appropriated by the legislature and in the case before you, it is my opinion that the binding of the manuscripts you describe, should be done and can only legally be done by the public printer under the direction of the State Printing Board.

INDIANA WOMAN'S PRISON AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS—JUVENILE COURT LAW.

January 14, 1904.

Emily E. Rhoades, Superintendent Indiana Women's Prison and Industrial School for Girls, city:

Dear Madam—Replying to your letter of the 13th, in relation to the case of Mary Lumbrick:

From the records in this case, it appears that this girl has not reached the seventeenth birthday. Under the provisions of the statute prior to the enactment of the Juvenile Court Law, she would not be eligible to your institution; but by the provisions of the Juvenile Court Law it appears that the Judge of the Juvenile Court was given jurisdiction over the girl up to her eighteenth birthday, and by that act such Judge is authorized to commit all girls over which he has jurisdiction to the Industrial School for Girls, or to any penal or reformatory institution.

While the intention of the legislature by this last legislation is not clear, yet the power to commit would necessarily imply the power to receive, and in my opinion, since the Judge has the power to commit such girl to your institution, it necessarily implies that you should receive her under such commitment.

Therefore, in the case of Mary Lumbrick, it is my opinion that you should receive her in your institution under the commitment, since the papers show that such commitment is made by the Judge of the Circuit Court of Laporte county, sitting as a Juvenile Court.

PRISON—TERM OF CONVICT MUST BEGIN ON DAY OF SENTENCE—FLUR O'NEAL.

January 16, 1904.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 14th, in relation to the case of Flur O'Neal, No. 2732:

From the papers and letters enclosed it appears that O'Neal was tried and convicted on the 24th day of November, 1903, but was not sentenced until the 2d day of January, 1904; that the Judge in sentencing him, entered of record that his sentence was to date from the 24th day of November, 1903.

There is no pretense or claim that sentence was passed on said 24th day of November, but that it was simply intended to be made retroactive. I can find no provision in the law authorizing this procedure, and, in my opinion, the court has no authority to make his sentence retroactive. If this were true, he could as well stipulate that the sentence should be dated at the time of the indictment, and, in many cases, this would enable him to permit a person convicted of a felony to escape imprisonment entirely.

Section 8214, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides, among other things:

> "The term of service and imprisonment of every convict shall commence from the day of his conviction and sentence."

For the term to begin, it is as important to have the sentence passed, as it is to have conviction. The happenings of either event is not sufficient; they must both have transpired before the term begins.

Therefore, in my opinion, O'Neal's term would begin on the second day of January, 1904.

INSURANCE—STOCK AND MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES INVESTMENT OF FUNDS IN BONDS.

January 22, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 21st, in which you ask:

> "Does section 22 of the act regarding stock and mutual life insurance companies, passed February 10th, 1899, authorize the investment of funds in the following securities:
> (1) Ditch bonds, as per copy enclosed.
> (2) Gravel road bonds issued under authority of act of 1877.
> (3) Gravel road bonds issued under authority of acts subsequent to 1877.
> (4) Street improvement bonds."

The section of the statute to which you refer (being section 22 of the act of 1899, approved February 10), provides that such funds shall be invested among other securities, "in bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, bearing interest of any county, incorporated city, town or school district within this state * * * where such bonds or other evidences of indebtedness are issued by authority of law, and upon which interest has never been defaulted."

Our supreme court has held, in numerous decisions, that gravel road bonds, street improvement bonds and the like, are not bonds of the county or municipality issuing them, but that such county or municipality is simply the agent for the parties interested in the improvement, and the county is in no way liable for their payment.

Under these decisions, in my opinion, such bonds would not comply with such section 22, and should not be received by you as a compliance with said section. The same is true as applied to the law in regard to domestic surety companies.

INSURANCE—MUTUAL FIRE COMPANY—PREMIUM NOTES.

January 21, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 19th, in which you ask:

> One. In the case of a mutual fire company, organized under the laws of 1852, is there any difference between the liability of those who give their premium notes before organization to make up the original $100,000 required by law and those who subsequently insure in the company, giving their promissory notes as premium notes, as provided in section 4883, R. S. 1894?

Under the statute providing for the organization of the class of companies referred to above, in my opinion there is no difference between those that give their premium notes and receive policies before organization, and those who give their premium notes and receive policies after such organization.

> Two. Have either the directors or officers of such a company the right to cancel and surrender at any time any of the original $100,000 worth of premium notes given before the company is authorized to issue policies?

The evident intention and purpose of the act under which these companies are organized is that the company shall have as capital at least $100,000 in premium notes, in order to be authorized to begin business. It would be absurd to suppose that the legislature intended that such company should be required to have $100,000 in premium notes to begin business and yet be permitted to surrender such premium notes at will, after they had begun business.

There is no question in my mind but that officers and directors of such companies have the right to sell and surrender premium notes received by such company, whether such notes were received before or after the organization of the company; but, in no event are such officers or directors authorized to surrender such notes when such surrender would reduce the total amount of premium notes in the hands of the company below $100,000.

The capital of $100,000, either in notes or cash, or approved securities, must be maintained by such companies.

Three. Has such a company a right immediately after securing its certificate of authority to credit the original notes of $100,000 with the $20,000 cash paid in to the company prior to the securing of its certificate of authority?

In my opinion a mutual company, organized under the laws referred to above, has no right and is not authorized to credit the premium notes received as above indicated, with the cash payment required by the statute, to authorize such company to do business. Such a procedure would clearly amount to an evasion of the law and a depreciation of the required assets of such company.

OIL INSPECTOR—INSPECTION OF COAL OIL USED FOR MECHANICAL PURPOSES.

January 22, 1904.

Hon. Sid Conger, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your letter of January 21st, in which you state that certain manufacturing establishments within the state are using coal oil for what might be termed mechanical purposes—that is, certain brick manufacturers mix it with lard oil or like substances and use it for lubricating their moulds. The question is, when thus used, not for illuminating purposes, should it be subject to inspection?

As to this proposition will say that the act of the general assembly of 1903 expressly states that all oil held in the state for purpose of sale within the state for iluminating purposes shall be inspected. It would be my opinion that this oil would not be subject to inspection if your department is positive that it is only used for the mechanical purposes mentioned.

If there should be any question about it in that it may be placed on sale for illuminating purposes within the state, then it would be necessary to have it inspected.

REQUISITION—JOHN COFFEY—PULASKI COUNTY, KENTUCKY—APPLICATION SHOULD BE ACCOMPANIED BY CERTIFIED COPY OF INDICTMENT.

February 1, 1904.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Sir—I have examined the papers in the matter of the request for requisition of John Coffey, on an indictment for false swearing, in Pulaski County, state of Kentucky.

First. A certified copy of the affidavit should be with the requisition, so that you will have the proper information upon which to act.

Second. The copy of the indictment filed with the papers is not certified to by the clerk; nor is the clerk's official seal attached to the copy which he attests.

Rule 129 of Executive Practice provides that—

"The application should be accompanied by a duly certified copy of the indictment, if one has been found against the offender."

For these reasons it is my opinion the requisition should not be honored until the above conditions have been complied with.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, STATE BOARD OF—PER DIEM AND MILEAGE OF MEMBERS.

February 5, 1904.

Hon. F. A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 5th you ask:

"Is there any authority in law for the payment of the per diem and mileage of the members of the state board of education, other than the Governor and state superintendent of public instruction, after the amount appropriated by the general appropriation act has been exhausted?"

The act of the legislature providing for the compensation to the state board is section 156 of the act of 1873, found on page 68 of said Acts (being section 25 of the Compiled School Laws of the state). It is as follows:

"The members of said Board, other than the Governor and State Superintendent of Public Instruction, shall be entitled to receive for their services, while actually engaged in the duties of their office, five dollars per day and five cents per mile necessarily traveled while so engaged; which amount shall be certified by the Board to the Auditor of the State, who shall draw his warrant therefor, payable out of the general fund, which sum shall be reimbursed to the general fund by the Treasurer of the Board paying into it that amount out of the money received by him as fees for certificates; and if there be any residue of money received as such fees, it shall be expended by the Superintendent of Public Instruction in the purchase of suitable books for an office library. Said Board shall be allowed the necessary expenses incurred in the discharge of the duties required of the same, for clerk hire, postage, etc.; which expenses shall be paid as the expenses of the members of the Board are paid."

This act in itself is a specific appropriation of the amount necessary to pay the per diem and mileage of the members of said Board, without regard to any other appropriation made by a subsequent legislature.

Under the rules of construction of similar acts laid down by our Supreme Court, an act in the language of the above act, amounts to an appropriation, and no other appropriation is necessary.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the per diem and mileage of the members of the State Board of Education may be paid out of the general fund, when properly certified, as provided, notwithstanding the appropriation made by the legislature for such purpose is exhausted.

PRISON—TERRY CASE.

February 6, 1904.

Hon. William H. Whittaker, Superintendent Indiana Reformatory, Jeffersonville, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication in regard to the case of Charles Terry, I have to say: It appears that on the 11th day of January, 1904, an affidavit was filed before the Hon. Edward O'Rourke, Judge of the Allen Circuit Court, verified by one William Robbins, attorney, and Willey Terry, mother of Charles Terry, setting out that Charles Terry had plead guilty to a charge of grand larceny when in truth and in fact he was only guilty of petit larceny.

An affidavit was filed by the owner of the property taken and he was also examined under oath before the court. Upon this proceeding the court made an order changing the judgment rendered on January 19, 1901, from grand to petit larceny and adjudging that said Terry was guilty of petit larceny and that he be committed to the Indiana Reformatory for a period not less than one nor more than three years, said sentence beginning January 19, 1901, and terminating on or before January 19, 1904.

As I am informed, under this judgment a command has been made for the release of said Terry, his term under said reformed judgment having expired.

The proceeding had before Judge O'Rourke is a very unusual one and can be defended only upon the ground that it is in the nature of a writ coram nobis. Such a writ has been recognized in this state in the case of Sanders v. the State, 85 Ind. 318, but the authority seems to be settled that such a writ is in the nature of a writ of error and can only operate to reverse or set aside the judgment of the court to which the writ is addressed and grant a new trial upon the issues. This was not done in the Terry case.

I know of no authority under our statutes or under the common law for a court to reform and redate its judgment three years after it has been entered and such a system if inaugurated would be open to very grave abuses. The writ of coram nobis can only be invoked to correct an error of fact existing at the time of the trial which without any fault or negligence of the party, was not presented to the court.

In the case of Sanders v. the State, above cited, on page 329 the court say:

> "Under our system, all matters of fact reviewable by appeal, or upon motion, must be presented by motion for new trial, and can not be made the grounds of an application for the writ coram nobis. Within this rule must fall the defense of insanity as well as all other defenses existing at the time of the commission of the crime. Within this rule, too, must fall all cases of accident and surprise, of verdicts against evidence, of newly discovered evidence, and all like matters."

The facts presented in the petition at most would only amount to newly discovered evidence. There is no charge of fraud or duress.

Under these authorities and the foregoing facts it is my opinion that the attempted reformation of said judgment was an absolute nullity, and such reformed judgment is void and should be so regarded by you.

ASSESSOR OF COUNTY—NEXT ELECTION IN 1906.

February 12, 1904.

To the State Board of Tax Commissioners:

Gentlemen—In your communication of the 12th you ask:

> "Are county assessors to be elected at the coming election?"

The office of county assessor is a legislative office, and the time for electing incumbents thereof is absolutely within the control of the legislature. By the independent act of the legislature of 1903 it is provided that the next election of county assessors shall be held in 1906.

There is now no law for the election of county assessors prior to that time, and, hence, none should be elected this fall.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION COMMISSION—DISPOSAL OF PROCEEDS OF SALVAGE.

February 17, 1904.

Hon. Newton W. Gilbert, President Louisiana Purchase Exposition Commission, Ft. Wayne, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 15th:

Under the act of the general assembly of the state of Indiana of 1903, approved March 9, 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 352), it is provided that $150,000, or so much thereof as may be needed by such commission, is appropriated for the uses of such commission.

By section 5 of said act it is provided that when the exposition shall have been closed said commission is authorized to sell the buildings and property belonging to the state, and deposit the money received therefor, in the state treasury.

It is clear from the language of this act that it was the intention of the legislature that a sum not exceeding $150,000 should be expended by such commission in making such exhibit, and, again, it is a well settled rule of law in this state that no money can be drawn out of the state treasury except by an appropriation of the legislature. After this fund had once been deposited in the treasury no one would have authority to draw a warrant, or to pay the same out, unless there was an appropriation made by the legislature therefor, and no such appropriation has been made by the legislature.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the fund derived from the sale of this property can not be used by the commission unless directed to do so by a subsequent legislature.

INSURANCE—GUARANTY FUND—MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY.

February 17, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of February 16th asking me to give you my opinion on the following points:

1. Have mutual companies, under the law of 1899, the right to establish a guaranty fund?

2. If it is legal for guaranty funds to be established, does such a guaranty fund become a liability against the corporation so far as policy holders are concerned?

Answering your questions in their order:

1. I am clearly of the opinion that a mutual life insurance company has the right to establish a "Guaranty Fund" for the reason that such a fund is necessarily for the benefit and protection of its policy holders.

The power to establish such a fund is incidental to the general power to issue policies of insurance.

2. It is equally clear that such a fund does not become a liability against the corporation so far as its policy holders are concerned.

PRISON—CONTRACT CONVICTS TO J. G. MOTT COMPANY TO MANUFACTURE MONUMENTAL WORK.

February 20, 1904.

Mr. W. H. Whittaker, Superintendent Indiana Reformatory, Jeffersonville, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 16th, in which you ask, substantially:

"Can the Board of Managers of the Indiana Reformatory enter into an agreement with the J. G. Mott Co. for the manufacture of granite monumental work under a contract with said company, such company to take the manufactured article at a specified rate or at a specified amount for each convict so employed under the provisions of the act of the legislature of 1897 providing for the establishment of trade schools?"

The act of the legislature of 1897 creating the reformatory and providing for the establishment of trade schools is section 8252g, Burns' R. S. 1901. This section is very general and indefinite and makes no provisions for any contracts to be entered into by the board in relation thereto. The board has no authority to enter into any contracts connected with the institution except as is expressly provided by law.

The only statute providing for contracts for hiring convicts or the labor of convicts is found in the acts of 1857 page 103, (see Burns' R. S. 1894, Sec. 8311) which provides that all contracts for the hiring of convicts shall be let to the highest bidder.

Under these statutes it is my opinion that the Board of Managers of the Indiana Reformatory are not authorized to enter into a contract such as is indicated, with the Mott Granite Company either for said company to take the product turned out by the convicts at a stipulated price or for said contractors to pay a stipulated price for the labor of such convicts.

From the language of the act providing for trade schools and for the reason that the legislature made no provision as to what should be done with any manufactured article turned out by these trade schools, would indicate that the legislature did not contemplate that these trade schools should turn out any manufactured article in sufficient quantity to warrant any contracts in relation therewith, that these trade schools should be more in the nature of manual training, than for the state to engage in the manufacture of some specified articles.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION—BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES' EXHIBIT.

February 20, 1904.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 16th, in which you ask:

> "Can the Board of State Charities expend out of its appropriation a sum not to exceed $300 to be used for the purpose of making an exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition?"

The act providing for the creation of the Board of State Charities, passed by the legislature of 1889, (see Acts 1889, p. 51), clearly and definitely sets out the purposes and duties of such Board, it being of a general supervisory character of all penal and benevolent institutions and having a general supervision of the poor laws of the State.

Nowhere is it provided generally that they may expend any portion of the money appropriated by the legislature for any other purpose than those set out in the act. No provision is made in said act for the expenditure of any money in exhibiting or collecting for an exhibit, any of the work of said Board.

The act of 1903 providing for the appropriation for said Board, merely appropriates a specified amount for the purpose of carrying out the operations of said Board.

Construing these two acts together it is clear to my mind that no portion of said appropriation can be used in preparing and making an exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition. Of course such Board could use the force in the office for the purpose of preparing this exhibit and turn the same over to the commission appointed for the purpose of making an exhibit at the Exposition at St. Louis, but the cost of caring for the same or any specific expenditure of money in preparing such exhibit would have to be borne by the commission.

The act creating the commission for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition clearly indicates that it was the intention of the legislature that the amount therein appropriated, in the minds of the legislature was all that the state should expend in making such an exhibit.

SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE-MINDED YOUTH—AGE LIMIT FOR ADMISSION.

March 10, 1904.

Mr. A. E. Carroll, Acting Superintendent, School for Feeble-minded Youth, Ft. Wayne, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 7th, and in reply will say that section 2 of the Act of 1891, which was as follows:

> "Hereafter no pupils shall be received into said school who are over the age of sixteen at the time that the application for admission is presented"

Had reference to section 9 of the Act of 1887 as amended in 1889, which made eighteen years the limit of feeble-minded children to be received into your school.

The act of 1901 (Acts of 1901, p. 158) repeals the law of 1891 above quoted, but by section 9 on page 156 of the same act, provides for the age limit as "under sixteen years of age."

Under the present law, it is my opinion that female adults over the age of sixteen and under forty-five years of age, by complying with section 9 of the amended Act of 1901, and male adults, by complying with section 13 of the Act of 1887 under the rules adopted by your Board of Trustees can be admitted to your institution.

SCHOOLS—STATE BOARD OF SCHOOL BOOK COMMISSIONERS—RIGHT TO CONTRACT FOR SERIES OF WRITING BOOKS, ETC.

March 18, 1904.

To the State Board of School Book Commissioners, city:

Gentlemen—Replying to your inquiry of the 17th, in which you ask whether you are authorized by law to contract for a series of writing books, consisting of more than six numbers, including a writing speller:

From the statements in your letter it appears that at a recent meeting of your board a contract was awarded to Eaton & Co. to furnish the New Era System of Semi-slant Writing Books A B, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and writing speller.

The law providing for the selection of text books for use in the schools authorizes you to adopt "a graded series of writing books;"

and it is also provided in the same act that "the writing books (to be) equal to the eclectic copy books."

From these provisions of the statute, you are authorized to adopt a graded system of writing, and the only thing that is required of you is that the system shall be equal to the eclectic copy books. This does not mean that you are limited to any number of books, or character or name of such books, except that whatever is adopted must, in the opinion of the board, be equal to the eclectic copy books.

Of what this graded system shall consist is a matter left entirely with the board, subject to the above restriction, and, in my opinion, you would be authorized to make a contract including a contract for a writing speller, if, in the opinion of the board, this was a proper book to be used as a part of the series.

PUBLIC LIBRARY COMMISSION—ESTABLISHMENT OF PUBLIC LIBRARIES IN INCORPORATED CITIES AND TOWNS WHICH HAVE ABOLISHED THEIR SCHOOL BOARDS.

March 18, 1904.

Miss Merica Hoagland, Public Library Commission, city:

Dear Madam—In your communication of the 18th you ask whether the law providing for the organization of library boards and the establishment of libraries in incorporated cities and towns, passed by the legislature of 1901, and amended by the act of the legislature of 1903 (See Acts 1903, p. 301), can be applied to incorporated towns within the state, where such towns have transferred their school property to the township trustee under the statute providing therefor, and thereby discontinued and abolished their school boards.

The library act above referred to was passed by the legislature for the purpose of enabling all incorporated towns to establish and maintain public libraries for the use of their inhabitants. The first sentence of the act is as follows: "That the common council of any city, or the town board of any incorporated town," etc.

It is a beneficent act, for the benefit of the people coming within its provisions, and, hence, should be liberally construed, with a view to effectuate the purpose of the legislature that enacted it.

Under the provisions of this act, after the preliminary steps have been taken, a library board composed of three members appointed by the judge of the circuit court, residents of such city or town. two members to be appointed by the common council or the town board, and two members by the board of school trustees, shall be appointed.

This library board shall have charge and control of the library but does not possess power to make any contract binding upon the municipality, except that it has the power to make an estimate and fix the amount of tax necessary for the maintenance of such library, which tax shall not exceed one mill on each dollar of the taxable property of such town.

All of the provisions of this act can be complied with by the class of towns mentioned in your inquiry, except that the two members for the library board, to be appointed by the school board, can not be appointed, since there is no school board to make the same; but, in view of the fact that a sufficient number of the members of such board can be appointed to constitute a quorum and majority thereof, it is my opinion that the class of towns referred to can not be deprived of the benefits of this law on account of the fact that such members can not be appointed.

A sufficient and efficient board can be secured, and all the benefits granted by the act to any town, acquired, and all of the rights of the people as fully protected, as if the full complement of the board could be secured.

It is, therefore, my opinion that towns of the class indicated can proceed under the law, and when they meet all the requirements of the law possible for them to observe, their acts will, in all particulars, be valid and binding.

PRINTING—INDIANA UNIVERSITY HAS NO AUTHORITY TO HAVE PRINTING DONE BY OTHER THAN STATE PRINTER.

March 18, 1904.

Hon. William L. Bryan, President, Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your letter of the 18th, in which you ask whether the State University is obliged by law to have all its printing done by the state printer. In this connection, you further state that you have no controversy, but that you have a booklet which you wish to have printed in the shortest possible time, and that the state printer is crowded with work, and that it would be advantageous to you to be able to place the work with some one who could rush it.

Answering the above, will say that section 7599, Burns' R. S. 1901 (being section 6 of an act passed April 13, 1885, and found in the Acts of 1885, on page 215), provides that > "All the printing, binding and stationery authorized by law, at the expense of the state and chargeable to the state, shall be executed through the commissioners and clerk in this act before named, and all laws authorizing printing, binding or stationery by any officer or institution, to be chargeable to the state, shall be construed to mean that the printing, binding and stationery of such officers or institutions shall be done through such commissioners."

Under this section, it is my opinion that the State University must have all its printing done by the State Printer.

PRISONS—CONTRACTS WITH LAKESIDE KNITTING COMPANY AND FORD-JOHNSTON COMPANY.

March 19, 1904.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir.—I have your communication of the 18th, in which you ask my opinion, under the conditions in the contracts with the Lakeside Knitting Company and the Ford-Johnston Company, as to—

> (1) Whether they have a right to manufacture their goods up to the first of October, 1904;
> (2) Whether they should pay for the hundred men, even though they could not use near that number;
> (3) The time, if any, the contractor would be allowed after the expiration of the contract, for removal.

Answering your questions in their order, will say that it is my opinion—

One. Under the conditions in the contracts, the above named companies have the right to manufacture their goods up to October 1st, 1904, inclusive.

Two. They should pay for all the men contracted for, subject to the exceptions and limitations on the contracts, as long as the contracts are in existence, as provided therein.

Three. The contractors should be allowed a reasonable time within which to remove their machinery, tools, etc., after the expiration of the contracts. As to what is a reasonable time must depend upon the circumstances of the case. It would be impossible to lay down any definite time in such a matter. I herewith return contracts and papers left with me.

FISH AND GAME—"WILD GAME" DOES NOT APPLY TO MUSKRAT OR MINK.

March 21, 1904.

Hon. Z. T. Sweeney, Commissioner of Fisheries and Game, Columbus, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 19th, in which you ask whether or not muskrats and mink, being fur-bearing animals, are classified as game.

Replying to the above, will say that we have no decisions in this state of this practical question nor does our statute definitely define the word "game." The Standard Dictionary defines game as—

> "Wild animals collectively, or any wild animal hunted or taken for sport or for its meat or fur; the edible or prepared flesh of such an animal."

The Law Dictionaries define it as follows:

Bouvier's, Black & Shumaker, and Longsdorf:

> "Birds and beasts of a wild nature, obtained by fowling or hunting."

Anderson—

> "Wild animals pursued for amusement or profit in its most comprehensive sense includes beasts, birds and fowl and fishes."

Sweet's—

> "Game consists of certain wild animals, the hunting or taking of which is a recognized sport or pastime."

Abbott's—

> "The general term for animals of a wild nature, usually pursued or sought by sportsmen for amusement."

English—

> "Animals usually hunted for food or sport, generally specified by statute."

Wharton—

"All sorts of birds and beasts that are objects of chase."

American & English Encyclopedia of Law—

"Birds and beasts of a wild nature, obtained by fowling and hunting."

In the case of Gunn v. State, 89 Ga. 341, the court held that "the word game without statutory definition, is sufficiently certain. The word is to be understood in its ordinary signification."

Anderson, in his Law Dictionary, says:

> "Game laws are designed to preserve insectivorous birds and the breeds of fowl and quadrupeds valuable to man for food and sport."

As above indicated by the various legal dictionaries, it appears that "game" applies to animals that are hunted for food or amusement.

Mink and muskrats are secured as a matter of business for the value of their fur. In view of the above definitions and the decision of the Georgia court, it would be my opinion that "wild game" understood in its ordinary signification would not apply to the muskrat or mink.

LUCRATIVE OFFICES—SURGEON ON STAFF OF CENTRAL INDIANA HOSPITAL FOR INSANE IS ELIGIBLE FOR APPOINTMENT ON BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES.

March 31, 1904.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Dear Sir—I have yours of the 29th, in which you ask—

> "Whether Dr. Sarah Stockton, a surgeon on the staff of the Central Indiana Hospital for the Insane is eligible for appointment as a member of the Board of State Charities."

The position now held by Dr. Stockton is purely an employment and is not an office in any sense. It is therefore my opinion that she is eligible for appointment on the Board of State Charities.

LIBRARY COMMISSION—PAY FOR PARTITION OR SCREEN.

April 7, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

My Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of March 29th, 1904, submitting to me the following question:

> "The Public Library Commission, organized under the provisions of section one of the Act of February 24th, 1889 (Acts 1899, p. 134), and acting and operating under section two of said Act, and section three thereof as amended by section two of the Act of March 7th, 1903, p. 179 of the Acts of 1903, are asking for the payment by the state of Indiana of a bill incurred by said Commission in the erection of a temporary partition or screen in one of the offices in the state house, and which bill I have refused to allow and pay, for the reason that the same will not be an expenditure of money for which an appropriation was made, and that it was not the intention of the legislature that the appropriation be so used. I desire your opinion upon the correctness of my position."

The legislature of 1903 attempted to amend section 2 of the act of 1899, but, by reason of a defective title, section 2 was not amended.

The act of 1903 did amend section 3 of the act of 1899, being the section providing for the appropriation of the funds necessary to carry on the work of the library commission.

No other portions of the act of 1899 were amended by the act of 1903; therefore the powers and duties of the library commission are governed by the act of 1899.

The amount of money that may be expended by such commission is governed by section 2 of the act of 1903.

The powers and duties of the library commisson are all set forth in section 2 of the act of 1899, which reads as follows:

> "Said Public Library Commission shall have the control and management of the traveling libraries hereinafter provided for, shall purchase the books and collection of books therefor and equipment for the same; shall adopt rules and regulations for loaning such books and collection of books to library associations and to the persons entitled to borrow the same, and shall provide for and require such security or guaranty for the safe return of such books or collection of books as may be deemed advisable; shall prepare lists of books suitable for public libraries and obtain prices for the same and furnish such lists whenever required; shall furnish information or advice as to the organization, maintenance or administration of any library in the state whenever requested so to do by the librarian or trustees."

After carefully considering the various provisions of said section above quoted, I am of the opinion that the library commission has no authority to incur any expense "in the erection of a temporary partition or screen in one of the offices in the state house," and that your position is correct in refusing to allow and pay the same out of the appropriation that was made by the legislature in connection with said library commission.

INSANE—HOSPITAL—APPROPRIATION FOR CONSTRUCTION OF WAGON BRIDGE.

April 18, 1904.

Dr. S. E. Smith, Easthaven, Richmond, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 16th, in which you ask whether the appropriation made by the Legislature in 1903 on behalf of your Hospital for the construction of a bridge may be used for the construction of a grade crossing in place of such bridge.

The language of the appropriation referred to is "For wagon bridge, $2,500."

This is a specific appropriation for a specific purpose, and in my opinion you would have no authority to expend it for any other purpose.

PRISONERS—PRISONS—PAYMENT OF INHERITANCE TO PAROLED PRISONER.

April 18, 1904.

Hon. W. H. Whittaker, Jeffersonville, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to yours of the 16th in regard to the case of Charles Shearer, in which you state that Shearer was an inmate of the Reformatory, was transferred to the Indiana State Prison and was paroled under the law by the Board; that while in prison he received an inheritance which was placed to his credit and is now on deposit at 2 per cent interest; that since his parole he has asked that this money be turned over to him.

You also state that it is a rule of your Board, founded on experience, that when a man is out on parole and has money to his credit, it is not delivered to him until he gets his final discharge, for the reason that if the money is turned over to him, it is an inducement for him to fall into evil ways or leave the State.

You ask if this rule can be enforced in the case presented. By the provisions of the statute, it is provided that the Board of Managers shall adopt such rules concerning all prisoners committed to their custody as shall prevent them from returning to criminal courses and thus secure their self-support and accomplish their reformation. It is also provided that the Board of Managers shall have the power to establish rules and regulations by which prisoners may go upon parole, but while on parole remain in the legal custody and control of the Board.

Under these provisions of the statute, your Board is authorized to make and enforce any reasonable rule looking to the bettering of the condition of the convicts while on parole.

The rule above referred to appears to me to be a reasonable one and being so is one that the Board may enforce upon paroled prisoners.

INDIANA INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS—TRANSFER OF INFANT FROM—TO INDIANA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' ORPHANS' HOME.

April 23, 1904.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 21st, containing the statement that a little girl named Mamie Huddleston is now in the Industrial School for Girls on the charge of truancy; that at your suggestion steps have been taken to transfer Mamie Huddleston from this institution to the Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home; that the mother has complied with the requirements of the Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home, and relinquished all claims of guardianship or maternal jurisdiction over the child; that you desire an opinion as to the necessary procedure to transfer the girl from the industrial school to the Orphans' Home.

As the mother has applied for the child's admission to the Orphans' Home, and relinquished all claims of guardianship or maternal jurisdiction over her, the Home, in fact, becomes the guardian of said child.

Section 8290, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides, in reference to the discharge of infants committed to the reformatory department of said Girls' Industrial School, as follows:

> "If a parent or guardian of any infant committed to the reformatory department of said institution, or any person occupying the position of parent or guardian in fact * * * shall feel aggrieved by the commitment of such infant to said institution, he may make written application to the board of managers of said institution for the discharge of said infant; which application shall be filed with the superintendent, who shall inform the managers thereof; and the same shall be heard and determined by said managers at such time as they shall appoint for that purpose, not later than the next regular meeting of the board. Such application shall state the grounds of the applicant's claim to the custody of the infant, and the reason for claiming such custody. Within ten days after the hearing of such application, the board of managers shall make and announce their decision thereon; and if they shall be of the opinion that the welfare of such infant would be promoted by granting the application, they shall make an order to that effect; otherwise they shall deny the application."

In view of the action of the mother, and the section above quoted, it is my opinion that the said section plainly sets out the necessary procedure to transfer the girl from the Industrial School to the Orphans' Home; but this section does not deprive you of the right to exercise your discretion in the matter of pardon, as given you by the constitution.

PRISON—LABOR OF CONVICTS, ETC.

April 22, 1904.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your several communications of April 21st you ask:

> (1) Can the board of control of the state prison enter into a contract with John G. Mott, agreeing to furnish said Mott with certain convicts for the purpose of piling staves in dry kilns and loading same upon cars; said Mott having contracted with said board for the labor of 100 convicts in the manufacture of cooperage goods.

Under the provisions of section 8220, Burns' R. S. 1901, providing for the letting of contracts for the labor of convicts in the state prison, it is provided that contracts for such convicts are limited to 400 men, except when the number of inmates is in excess of 800, and then, in addition to the 400, fifty per cent of such excess may be contracted for. It is provided in said act that the number of convicts employed in any single trade or industry shall not exceed 100.

In my opinion, the board would be authorized to contract with said Mott for the labor of convicts for the purposes herein mentioned, provided you had in your institution unemployed convicts in excess of the statutory number.

The employment of convicts in the manufacture of cooperage is not necessarily the same trade and industry as the handling and drying of staves and heading, and, if you had the unemployed convicts, the fact that Mott had a contract for 100 convicts to be used in the manufacture of barrels, and other articles of like nature, would not be a bar to his contracting for the additional service of additional men for the purpose of handling staves.

> (2) In your further communication you ask whether the board of control has authority to close up a road running across one corner of the prison grounds, which road has been used by the public for a period of about fifteen years, but was not so used before the state acquired title to the property.

In my opinion, the board of control would have authority to order such road closed.

(3) In your further communication you ask for an interpretation of the law enacted by the last general assembly creating the board of prison reform, in reference to the money that can be drawn as salary by any one member as per diem, and if so, the amount that can be used by any one person per year as traveling expense, etc.

Under the act referred to the members of said board, other than the ex-officio members, are entitled to draw an amount not to exceed $100 per year as per diem. The amount each member may draw as expenses is not limited, except that the total expense of all the members of said board shall not exceed $800 per year.

(4) You further state that the Reliance Manufacturing Company have a contract with the state of Indiana for the employment of 100 men at 40 cents per day; that they have also entered into contract with the board for the employment of 100 men on the piece price plan, the same to take effect October 1, 1904; that the board is anxious to start the piece price plan as soon as possible, and the manufacturing company is agreed, except that it desires to be permitted to pay for 20 men by the day, to do cutting, etc., for their outside factory, permitting the balance of the 100 men to work on the piece price plan. You further state that said company will pay a greater per diem for the 20 men than is now provided for in their contract, and that the remaining convicts working upon the piece price plan will be able to earn much more than 40 cents a day, and that such a change as herein indicated will be of financial benefit to the state; and upon this state of facts you ask whether the board would be authorized to change the contract and permit a portion of such convicts to be placed on a piece price basis, and a portion on a per diem basis.

If the board is fully advised and confident that such a change will be of financial benefit to the state, and a desirable change, from reasons of expediency, I can see no objections to their making such change, suggesting, however, that they should have their records fully explain the reasons for such change, the advantages to be derived therefrom, and the desirability of such change being made.

FISH AND GAME—FINES AND LICENSE FEES WHICH GO TO "FISH AND GAME PROTECTIVE FUND."

May 2, 1904.

Mr. Z. T. Sweeney, Commissioner of Fisheries and Game, Columbus, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 30th, in which you ask whether the fines and license fees which go into the "Fish and Game Protective" fund is a permanent fund and remains to your credit from year to year.

In answer to the same will say that the Act of 1901, found on page 447 of said Acts, provides, that > "The Auditor of State shall keep a record of the amounts so received and shall upon the receipt of such amounts turn the same over to the Treasurer of State. The moneys so paid to such Treasurer of State, together with such other sums constitute a fund known as the fish and game protective fund, and shall only be used for the purpose of protecting the game and fish of the State, and paying such legitimate expenses as may be incurred by and through the office of the Commissioner of Fisheries and Game of the State, and shall only be drawn on the warrant of the Auditor of State."

It is my opinion that these fees can only be used for the purpose of protecting the game and fish, etc., as set forth in the above quotation and is a permanent fund which is to your credit to be used from time to time.

VANDALIA CASE—EXPENSES OF ADDITIONAL COUNSEL TO BE PAID OUT OF GENERAL FUND.

May 16, 1904.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In answer to your communication of the 16th, in which you ask whether there is any authority for the payment of the expenses of attorneys in the Vandalia case and out of what fund such expenses should be paid, I beg to call your attention to an Act passed by the Legislature, 1897, in reference to collecting from the Terre Haute & Indianapolis R. R. Company the money due under the charter it obtained from the Terre Haute & Richmond R. R. Company, for the benefit of the Common School fund. In this act the Attorney-General is authorized to bring suit and empowered to employ additional legal counsel as is, in his judgment, necessary.

Section 5 of the act names the Governor, Secretary of State, and Auditor of State as a Board for the purpose of auditing and authorizing the payment of the expenses arising in the performance of the duties imposed upon the Attorney-General and his assistants, and it further provides that this Board shall, upon the recommendation of the Attorney-General, from time to time, allow to the assistants so employed, such sums as in the opinion of the Board shall be justly due for the services rendered, and also all of the expenses actually incurred.

It further provides that the Auditor of State shall draw his warrant for such sums upon the Treasurer of State, and the same shall be paid out of any funds not otherwise appropriated, and that the amounts to be paid the additional counsel and other persons employed shall be determined by the Board of Audit.

The act further provides that the Attorney-General in office at the time of bringing the suit, continue in the employment as special counsel for the State until said litigation has been fully and finally determined.

In view of these sections, it is my opinion that the Board of Audit, composed of the Governor, Scretary of State and Auditor of State have full power to authorize the payment of the amounts due for services rendered and expenses actually incurred by the additional counsel upon the recommendation of the special counsel for the State, out of the general fund.

SCHOOLS—SIGNING OF TEACHERS' CONTRACTS.

May 17, 1904.

Hon. F. A. Cotton, Superintendent of Public Instruction:

Dear Sir—In your letter of the 14th you ask:

(1) Can a school board legally empower the president, or some other member of the board to employ the teachers and sign the uniform teacher's contract in behalf of a school city or town, and is such contract when so signed valid and binding upon the school city?

(2) In case the person so empowered to employ and sign teachers' contracts should refuse or neglect to sign any or all of such contracts, would the teacher or teachers be thereby debarred from maintaining a suit under the contract or contracts against the school city, in case the employment had been made at a regular meeting of the school board and notice of appointment given to teachers and accepted in writing by said teacher or teachers and a contract signed by the teacher?

Section 5915, Burns R. S. 1901, provides:

> "The common council of each city and the board of trustees of each incorporated town of the state, shall, at their first regular meeting in the month of June, elect three school trustees, who shall hold their office one, two and three years respectively. * * * Said trustees shall constitute the school board of the city or town."

Section 5920, of the same statutes, provides that the school trustees "shall take charge of the educational affairs of their respective counties, towns and cities. They shall employ teachers."

The statute makes it the duty of the board of school trustees to employ teachers and I find no statute giving this board power to transfer this duty to some individual member of said board.

In the case of School Town of Milford v. Ziegler, 1 Ind. Ap. 138, the court held that if the board in session hired a teacher, the contract may be signed at different times, and a signing by a majority of the trustees is sufficient; and, in the case of School Town of Milford v. Bowner, 126 Ind. 528, the court held that the board must act as a body, not as individuals, the majority ruling, and that where one of the school trustees of a town signed a contract of employment with a teacher in one of the schools of the town, and at a called meeting a contract was adopted by the board and signed by another member, it becomes binding upon the town.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the contract must be made by the school trustees on behalf of the school city or town.

As to your second question, will cite you to Section 5989a, Burns' R. S. 1901, which provides as follows:

> "That all contracts hereafter made by and between teachers and school corporations of the state of Indiana shall be in writing, signed by the parties to be charged thereby, and no action shall be brought upon any contract not made in conformity to the provisions of this act."

Under this statute, a contract to teach school to be binding upon the parties must be in writing and signed by the parties. Failure or neglect to sign on the part of either party would render a contract invalid.

HEALTH—STATE BOARD OF VITAL STATISTICS.

May 25, 1904.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, Secretary State Board of Health:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 23d, in which you ask:

> (1) "Has the State Board of Health the power to make a rule that vital statistics shall be collected for the calendar year?
> (2) Does the law give a specific time within which the report on vital statistics shall be made?"

Answering your questions in their order will say, that section 3 of the Act of 1891, naming the duties of the Secretary of your Board provides:

> "He shall collect information concerning vital statistics, knowledge respecting diseases, and all useful information on the subject of hygiene, and through an annual report and otherwise as the Board may direct shall disseminate such information among the people."

This is the only provision in said law as to collecting information in reference to vital statistics. This law does not specifically name when this annual report shall be made, but as our statute defines a year to mean a calendar year, unless otherwise expressed, I take it that this annual report concerning vital statistics should be made for the close of the calendar year. It is my opinion that in view of the wording of the act that it is within the discretion of the State Board of Health to designate the time for the Secretary to collect vital statistics.

As to the time within which this report is to be made, the statute is also silent. Being silent, the law contemplates you should have "reasonable time." As to what constitutes reasonable time depends on the nature and character of work and is a matter of fact, which your Board should determine.

AMERICAN SHEET AND TIN PLATE COMPANY.

June 15, 1904.

Hon. Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State:

My Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your esteemed favor of June 13, 1904, in which you say:

> "I submit herewith the correspondence had with the representative of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, which seems to be a company resulting from the purchase of the American Tin Plate Company by the American Sheet Steel Company. The question is whether or not there was a consolidation or merger of the two corporations."

From an examination of the papers and correspondence submitted to me, I understand that

(1) Prior to the change of name from the American Sheet Steel Company to the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, the American Sheet Steel Company purchased the plants and all the property of the American Tin Plate Company;

(2) That the American Sheet Steel Company, after such purchase, changed its name to the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, and made certain amendments to its original articles of incorporation;

(3) The most important amendment, so far as your question is concerned, consisted in enlarging the objects and purposes of the corporation, so that the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company could exercise all the rights and powers of the American Sheet Steel Company and the American Tin Plate Company.

I find further, that it is stated by counsel for the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company, in reference to the question of consolidation:

> "In our case, neither of the old corporations has been dissolved, but both retain their corporate organizations and distinct identity. The American Tin Plate Cmpany is the identical corporation heretofore known as the American Sheet Steel Company. The American Tin Plate Company continues to exist, pays taxes in the state of its incorporation, and its stockholders continue as such and have not become stockholders of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company."

From the facts stated, it can not be said that the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company is the identical corporation heretofore known as the American Sheet Steel Company, for the following reasons:

(1) The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company owns and controls all the property heretofore owned and controlled by the American Sheet Steel Company and the American Tin Plate Company;

(2) In changing the name from the American Sheet Steel Company to the American Steel and Tin Plate Company, the powers and objects of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company covered all the powers and objects of the American Sheet Steel Company and the American Tin Plate Company;

(3) It is apparent that it was not simply a change of name from the American Sheet Steel Company to the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company; but the real purpose and object to be accomplished was to give the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company the control and management of all of the property of both corporations, without taking the necessary steps to make a regular legal merger or consolidation;

(4) The stockholders of the American Tin Plate Company continue as such, and hold their certificates of stock, which represent no property except the bare franchise of a corporation.

In my judgment, under the facts as set forth above and appearing in correspondence and papers submitted to me—which I herewith return to you—the effect of what has been done by the corporations named above is a "consolidation," and the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company should pay "on the proportion of the capital stock of the corporation which is represented by its property located and business transacted in the state of Indiana."

ADJUTANT-GENERAL—PAY OF INDIANA MILITIA FOR ATTENDANCE AT ANNUAL CAMP OF INSTRUCTION.

June 27, 1904.

Hon John R. Ward, Adjutant-General, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your request for an opinion as to the pay to which the members of the Indiana Militia would be entitled to for attendance at the Annual Camp of Instruction, to be held July 26 to August 5, in which you state that,

> "Under the National Law, officers and men are entitled to pay from the Government at the same rate as the Army is paid; that under our State law officers and men are entitled to a dollar a day. What I desire to know is, are they entitled to pay from both State and United States?"

Answering the above, will say that section 56 of the Militia Law of this State provides:

> "When any regiment, or the entire militia of the State shall be ordered into camp by the Governor, or with his approval, each officer and enlisted man shall be entitled to one dollar and subsistence, for each day in camp."

The law passed by Congress, January 12, 1903, commonly known as the "Dick Bill," authorizes the Secretary of War, on the requisition of the Governor, to pay the Quartermaster-General or such officers of the Militia as the Governor may designate and appoint for the purpose, so much of its allotment out of the annual appropriation of Congress as shall be necessary for the payment, subsistence and transportation of the Militia as shall engage in actual field or camp service for instruction. These officers and enlisted men are entitled to pay at the same rate as the Army is paid.

The question of issuing the requisition is discretionary with the Governor and the intention of the act passed was for the purpose of aiding the State to promote the efficiency of the Militia.

It would be my opinion that if the Governor issued this requisition then the State would have to make up the difference between the amount received from the Government for the pay of the men, so that the men and officers would receive a dollar per day as they are entitled to as provided in section 56.

CODIFICATION COMMISSION—PRINTING OF CERTAIN CODIFIED LAWS.

July 2, 1904.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Dear Sir—In reply to your letter of the 1st, asking for an opinion in reference to a communication from the Codification Commission, which is as follows:

Indianapolis, June 29, 1904.

Sir—In the act creating this Commission and defining its duties it is provided that it shall codify certain laws therein designated, and

* * * "submit the same in the form of a bill or bills, accompanied by a report to the next regular session of the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, hereinafter to convene; said work of said Commission shall be completed on or before the first Monday in December of the year 1904."

It also makes an appropriation for salaries,

* * * "as well as all other necessary and incidental expenses of said Commission, approved by the Governor."

We respectfully inquire whether, in your judgment, it is the duty of the Commission to have the bills printed, and whether you regard the expenses of so doing as "necessary and incidental expenses of the Commission."

We are, very respectfully yours,

MARCELLUS A. CHIPMAN,
TIMOTHY E. HOWARD,
DANIEL E. STORMS.

To the Governor.

It is my opininon that if the bills are printed, it is a necessary and incidental expense of the Commission.

The question of printing the bills would, therefore, be for you to determine, owing to the fact that you, as Governor, must approve "all other necessary and incidental expenses of said Commission."

Section 2 of the act simply provides: "To submit the same in the form of a bill, or bills, accompanied by a report, to the next regular session of the General Assembly," etc.

They can be submitted in typewritten or printed form, and, purely as a suggestion, it would appear to me to be more practicable to have them printed, rather than in typewritten form, for the reason that the Codification Commission, understanding thoroughly their work, would obviate the errors and mistakes that could arise were they submitted in typewritten form and turned over to a committee who had not had the opportunity to thoroughly familiarize themselves with these important bills.

Also, it would then be on each member's desk at the beginning of the session, and, while the Legislature would order them reprinted, the legislators themselves would have the advantage of the time pending the printing of the bills by the Legislature, to thoroughly study and familiarize themselves with them.

STATE BOARD OF TAX COMMISSIONERS—POWERS AND DUTIES.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 25th:

The powers and duties of the State Board of Tax Commissioners, as defined by the act of the General Assembly of 1891, are very broad. The duties are defined in section 120 of said act (being section 8538 Burns' R. S. 1901). Briefly summarized, they are:

(1) To prescribe forms and blanks for assessment and collection of taxes;

(2) To construe the tax and revenue laws, and to inform the taxing officers with reference to such laws, when requested;

(3) To see that assessments of property are made according to law;

(4) Especially of railroads and other corporations;

(5) To see that all taxes due the state are collected;

(6) To enforce the penalties prescribed by any revenue law of the state;

(7) To determine whenever necessary, the amount required to be levied upon property in the several counties to cover any deficiency in the state revenue, not otherwise provided for;

(8) To examine books, papers and accounts, and make examinations of persons necessary to enable the board to obtain information that would in any manner aid in securing a compliance with the tax laws of the state.

(9) To make such rules and regulations as the board shall deem proper to effectually carry out the purposes for which the board is constituted;

(10) To report to the General Assembly of each session the whole amount of revenue collected in the state, for all purposes, classifying as to state, county, township and municipal purposes, with the sources thereof, the amount lost and the causes of the loss, the proceedings of the board, and such other matters of information concerning the public revenues as they may deem of public interest;

(11) To make diligent investigation and inquiry concerning the revenue laws and systems of other countries, so far as they may be ascertained by published reports or statistics, or correspondence with officers, and with the aid of the information thus obtained, together with their experience and observation, to recommend to the General Assembly, at each session, such amendments or modifications of our revenue laws as seem proper or necessary to remedy injustice or irregularity in taxation, or to facilitate the assessment and collection of public revenues;

(12) To see that each county in the state is visited by at least one member of the board as often as once each year, to hear complaints, gather information of the workings of the law, see that taxing officers obey the law and that violations are punished, and that proper suggestions as to amendments are made.

Section 129 of said act provides for meetings, confers power to subpoena and examine witnesses and contains the provision:

> "All necessary costs and expenses of said board shall be paid out of the state treasury upon warrants drawn by the > Auditor of State, when the same shall have been allowed by the board."

Under this provision it is the duty of the board to perform all the functions hereinbefore laid down, and the board is empowered, under the last quotation, to pay all necessary expenses in the performance of these functions.

The duties prescribed, and the power of disbursement for expenses in the discharge of such duties, are so general that it would be impossible for me to specify more particularly than I have already done, in what cases allowances may be made. This is left to the discretion of the board.

There is no provision in the law as to clerical help, except that it is provided, in section 121 of said act (being section 8539 Burns' R. S. 1901), that a record of the proceedings of such board shall be kept at the capital, open to the inspection of the public, and, by section 129 of said act (being section 8547 Burns' R. S. 1901, as amended by the Acts of 1895), which provides, among other things:

> "Said board shall organize, with the Governor as chairman, and whenever the Governor is absent from a session of the board, they shall elect a member of the board to act as chairman in his absence, and the deputy auditor of state, or, in his absence one of the clerks in the office of the auditor of state, to be designated by him, shall act as secretary of the board."

Also, in section 131 (being section 8549 Burns' R. S. 1901):

> "The secretary shall take and subscribe an oath for the faithful performance of his duties as said secretary, and shall keep a record of the proceedings of the board, which shall be certified by the chairman and secretary and filed in the office of the auditor of state."

The compensation of the secretary and of any other clerical assistance that the board may deem necessary, is left with the board.

PRINTING BOARD—POWERS AS TO SUPERVISION OF PRINTING OF INDIANA UNIVERSITY.

August 2, 1904.

Mr. Thomas J. Carter, Secrtary Board of Printing, City:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 1st you state:

> "The question has arisen as to the powers of the Printing Board as to the supervision of printing of matters pertaining to the Indiana University.
> "The university has had printed, by the public printer certain reports or catalogues for distribution and use at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Has the State Printing Board any power to audit these claims for printing and determine whether they have been contracted for pursuant to law or does Sections 7599 and 7603, Burns' R. S. 1901, merely give the Board the authority to examine the bills for such printing and see that they have been rendered in accordance with the contract made with the public printer?
> "The interpretation of said sections defining the duties and powers of the Board is desired."

Section 7599, Burns' R. S. 1901, referred to in your letter, is as follows:

> "That all the printing, binding and stationery authorized by law, at the expense of the state and chargeable to the state, shall be executed through the commissioners and clerk in this act before named, and all laws authorizing printing, binding or stationery by any officer or institution to be chargeable to the state, shall be construed to mean that the printing, binding and stationery of such officers or institutions shall be done through such commissioners."

That portion of section 7603 that applies to your communication beginning with the proviso is as follows:

> "That the board of public printing, binding and stationery may determine the weight and quality of paper upon which such reports shall be printed, and may eliminate from any report such matters as they may deem unnecessary to be published."

The question that you present is new, not having been heretofore referred to my predecessors, and while numerous opinions have been given by them, they are upon other matters, but it seems to have been the opinion of several of my predecessors that the State Board of Printing Commissioners should have charge of all of the printing that is chargeable to the state.

W. L. Taylor's report, 1900-1901, page 116.

Section 7599, above quoted, provides that all printing of the class designated shall be executed through the commissioners and clerk and shall be done through the commissioners.

To be executed by the Board and through the Board, can only mean that the Board must have charge of such printing, and if the board is to have charge it must have authority to say whether the printing asked for is for the purposes authorized by the statute.

It is therefore my opinion that the State Board of Commissioners of Public Printing have full authority to say what printing, binding and stationery for the different institutions shall be paid for out of the State funds appropriated for such institutions unless specific direction is made by statute.

I am aware that Attorney-General Smith gave an opinion that would indicate a different interpretation (See report of Attorney-General Smith, 1892-1893, page 148), but examination of that opinion shows that the portion of it that indicates the proceeding to be had in such cases was not in answer to any question submitted and evidently the phase of the question now under consideration was not presented.

INSURANCE—INDEMNIFYING PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS FROM SUITS FOR MALPRACTICE.

August 5, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 3d you state:

"The Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York City is doing business in this state, having fully complied with the laws regulating the admission of insurance companies incorporated under the laws of other states.

"The charter of this company gives it the right to 'make insurance upon the health of individuals, and against personal injury, disablement or death resulting from traveling or general accident by land or water, and guaranteeing the fidelity of persons holding places of public or private trust, and upon the lives of horses, cattle and other live stock; and also against loss, damage or liability arising from any unknown or contingent event whatever, which may be the subject of legal insurance, excepting the perils and risks included with the departments of fire, marine and life insurance.' * * *

"Will you kindly inform me whether the charter above named is broad enough to permit this company to issue policies to physicians and surgeons to indemnify said physicians and surgeons against malpractice suits, the company either agreeing to pay whatever judgment may be rendered against said physician or surgeon on account of said malpractice suits or agreeing to pay the expenses of the suit."

The class of insurance known as "Guaranty Insurance" is, in a measure, in its infancy. As was said in the case of People v. Rose, 174 Ill. 310:

> "This branch of insurance is so much more modern in origin and development than fire, marine, life, and accident insurance, that there are few decisions upon the subject; but the business is gradually increasing and is doubtless destined to take an important place in the commercial world."

The authorities hold that the same rules are applicable to this class of insurance as to other classes. It is a well known fact that physicians, no matter how skillful or careful they may be, are frequently asked to respond in damages for alleged malpractice by some poor unfortunate, who feels that he has suffered at the physician's hands. This is an ever-present liability to the physician, and is a liability arising from an unknown and contingent event, and, in my opinion, is the subject of legal insurance, if not against public policy.

In the case of Shakman v. United States Credit System Company, 92 Wis. 366, it was held that a contract to indemnify a merchant against loss from insolvency of customers, was a contract of insurance, and it was said:

> "We regard the contract before us as unquestionably a contract of insurance. An insurance contract is a contract whereby one party agrees to wholly or partially indemnify another for loss or damage which he may suffer from a specified peril. The peril of loss by the insolvency of customers is just as definite and real a peril to a merchant or manufacturer as the peril of loss by accident, fire, lightning or tornado, and is, in fact, much more frequent. No reason is perceived why a contract of indemnification against this ever-present peril is not just as legitimately a contract of insurance as a contract which indemnifies against the more familiar, but less frequent, peril by fire."

The peril of judgments for malpractice is an ever-present peril to the physician.

Neither, in my opinion, is such insurance invalid as being against public policy.

Guaranty insurance has long been upheld as insuring honesty, diligence and faithfulness in employes where the duty of the employer was to furnish honest, faithful and diligent agents.

In the case of Fidelity and Casualty Company v. William Eickhoff, 63 Minn. 170, the contract insured the honesty of the employes of a grain elevator company, and, among other things, it was argued that such a policy was void as being against public policy in that it was the duty of all employers dealing with the general public to employ honest agents, and the court held that there was no virtue in such a contingent.

It is, therefore, my opinion that the charter of the company is broad enough to warrant the issuance of the character of policy prescribed, and that such insurance is not void as being against public policy.

PRISON—MAXIMUM AND MINIMUM TERM.

August 15, 1904.

Hon. James D. Reid, Warden, Michigan City, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your inquiry of the 12th, in regard to the mittimus of Gabriel Moffatt, No. 2059: From the judgment, as recited in said mittimus, it appears said Moffatt was convicted and sentenced under an act of the legislature of 1881, for obtaining money under false pretense. The penalty provisions of said act are that such persons

> "Shall be imprisoned in the state prison not more than seven years nor less than one year, and fined in any sum not more than $1,000 nor less than $10."

By the reformatory act of 1897, it is provided that in case of conviction of a felony, other than treason and murder, the court shall find him guilty of the crime found in such finding or verdict, and that he be confined in prison for a term not less than the minimum time prescribed by the statutes of the state, for such offense, and not more than the maximum time prescribed by such statutes therefor.

Under these statutes it is my opinion that where the court enters a judgment of guilty of a felony except treason and murder, the maximum and minimum terms prescribed as punishment for such a crime, must be affixed. If the court fails to do this the statute nevertheless steps in and becomes a part of such judgment.

Therefore, in the case of Gabriel Moffatt, his term is from one to seven years, notwithstanding the erroneous judgment pronounced by the court, affixing the maximum term for a greater time.

QUARTERMASTER-GENERAL—BOND TO PROTECT STATE AGAINST LOSS OF ORDNANCE AND ORDNANCE STORES.

August 18, 1904.

Hon. Oran Perry, Quartermaster-General:

Dear Sir—With your communication of August 16th you submitted a form of bond filed with your department by the commanding officer of the various organizations of the Indiana National Guard, and you ask the following question:

"Where this form of bond is executed with a surety company, at an annual rate, and no limit of time is mentioned in the body of the bond, does the bond expire with the expiration of the time covered by the cash payment, or is it a continued surety until notice has been served upon this department by the surety company?"

In reply thereto will say the bond, according to its terms, is drawn to protect the state against any loss of ordnance and ordnance stores during the entire term of office of the commanding officer in charge of or receiving such ordnance or ordnance stores, and such funds as his company is entitled to under the law of the state of Indiana, without reference to the time covered by the cash payment, commonly called the premium.

It has been held by the courts that the doctrine that a surety is a favorite of the law, largely disappears in the construction of corporate surety contracts, and this contract must be construed according to the rules of construction common to all written contracts.

The payment of a premium as a consideration in a suretyship contract is not the whole consideration, and the surety can not evade the liability to the creditor because the principal fails to pay the premium; neither can the contract be revoked on that account. However, such surety company can, by making proper application to the courts, be relieved from further liability upon making a showing in conformity with the statutes upon this question.

Therefore, it is my opinion that the bond does not expire with the expiration of the time covered by the cash payment until your department receives some notice of some proceeding or intention of the surety company to relieve itself from further liability.

LIBRARY COMMISSION—"TAXPAYER;" SUBSCRIPTIONS; APPOINTMENTS; TAX, ETC.

August 24, 1904.

Miss Merica Hoagland, Secretary Public Library Commission:

Dear Madam—In your communication of the 23d you ask the following questions:

(1) "Does the term 'tax payer' used in section 1 of the act of 1901, page 81, as amended by the act of 1903, page 301, apply to those paying poll tax?"

One who pays poll tax is a tax payer, and hence the term would apply to him.

(2) "May a subscription one written and filed with the clerk of the circuit court be withdrawn?"

Since it is held by the courts that the consideration for the contract embodied in a subscription to a public enterprise is the mutual agreement of all to pay such subscription, therefore, in my opinion, after a subscription has been filed with the clerk of the circuit court it has become such a contract that persons whose names are on such subscription list can not withdraw their names.

(3) "What is a solvent subscription?"

This is left to the determination of the judge who examines the list; but, technically, it is a subscription that can be collected.

(4) "If the judge finds that certain subscriptions are insolvent, may additional solvent subscriptions be filed, to make good the amount required by law?"

This also is a question for the determination of the judge passing upon the list. I can see no reason why additional subscriptions may not be filed.

(5) "After the judge of the circuit court has made his appointments, should the council or school board fail to make its appointments, how shall the committee appointed to secure library organization, proceed?"

Since, under section 5 of the act of 1901, the board can not organize until all members of such board shall have been appointed and qualified, the board can not organize and can do nothing until the requirements of this section have been met—that is, until all the members have been appointed and have qualified.

(6) "What effect would the expiration of the time in which appointments should be made have upon the organization?"

If either of the persons or bodies empowered by the act to make appointments within the prescribed time, they could lawfully make them after the expiration of such time.

(7) "What would be the effect of an appointee's failure to either qualify or decline appointment within the prescribed time?"

If the present appointee to the library board should fail to qualify, or decline to qualify, then the person or board making the appointment should make another appointment.

(8) "Should the common council or town board fail to include the library tax fixed and certified by the library board in the tax levy, how shall the library board proceed?"

It is the duty of the common council or town board to include the tax certified by the library board in their levy. If they fail to do this until the time has passed for such act to be performed, the board can not proceed; that is, they can not collect anything. If the common council or town board should refuse to make the levy, they could be mandated to do so, if such steps were taken in time.

(9) "When a board transfers a library, what becomes of the fund derived from the library tax levy?"

If the transfer is made under section 5, Acts 1903, and if the transfer includes the funds on hand, it becomes the property of the library board to which it is transferred.

LIBRARY COMMISSION—APPOINTMENTS.

August 24, 1904.

Miss Merica Hoagland, Secretary Public Library Commission:

Dear Madam—In your communication of the 24th you ask:

"Under section 5 of the library law of 1901-3, after the judge of the circuit court has made his appointments, should the council or school board refuse to make its appointments, how shall such appointments be secured?"

By section 2 of the act of 1901 it is provided that after the subscription list shall have been filed with the clerk of the circuit court of the county, the clerk of the court shall immediately thereafter notify the judge of the circuit court, and likewise the common council or town board and the board of trustees of such city or town that such subscription has been filed.

By section 2 of the act of 1903 it is provided that within ten days after the common council or the town board and the board of school trustees shall have been notified, as provided by section 2, each body shall appoint two persons residents of such city or town, not otherwise appointed, as members of such board.

The provisions of these sections are mandatory and if either of said bodies should refuse to comply with such provisions, they could be mandated so to do by proper legal proceedings.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE—ELECTION, TIME OF.

August 26, 1904.

Hon. Daniel E. Storms, Secretary of State:

Dear Sir—I have your letter of the 25th, in which you ask:

> "Can a justice of the peace be elected in any of the townships of the state of Indiana at the general election to be held in November, 1904, where there is a vacancy existing in said office through death, resignation or otherwise, or where the affairs of the office are being administered by one previously elected and qualified, but who is serving beyond the actual period for which he was elected?"

The act of May 18, 1893 (Burns' R. S. 1901, section 6290), expressly provides that every four years justices of the peace shall be elected, namely: In 1894, 1898, 1902, 1906 and so on. There is no other statutory provision touching their election, unless it is the provision as to holding general elections, which I believe does not apply.

Our constitution expressly recognizes two kinds of elections —general elections and township elections. Section 14, Art. II, of the constitution, provides the day of the month on which general elections shall be held, but also provides that—

> "Township elections (note the plural) may be held at such time as may be provided by law."

This gives the legislature the power to fix township elections at such times as it deems wise.

By the act of 1893, referred to above, it expressly provides when justices of the peace shall be elected. This act recognizes that a township election is a different election from a general election, for it says that such elections (that is, the township election) shall be governed by the provisions of the law governing general elections.

Subsequently, on April 14, 1897 (Burns' R. S. 1901, section 6290a), the legislature passed an act providing that township trustees and township assessors shall be elected in 1900, and every four years thereafter. Under this act it has been held that a township assessor appointed to fill a vacancy holds for the full unexpired term of his predecessor. State v. Burke, 154 Ind. 645.

In that case the language of the statute under which the vacancy was filled is that > "The appointee shall hold until the next township election, and until his successor is elected and qualified."

The court, in construing this act, used this language:

> "The language of this statute must be held to relate to the next ensuing township election, at which township assessors may be lawfully elected."

The court held that the township elections for assessors were thus held in the four year periods. In the case referred to, there was a "general election," at which an assessor might have been elected two years before the regular period, and there was also a township election at which justices of the peace were elected, at which assessors might have been elected, yet the court held that the election of an assessor could not be held at either of such elections, but only at the regular prescribed election, namely: at the four year periods.

So here, the only township elections at which justices of the peace can be elected, are those which occur at the regular four year periods, namely: 1894, 1898, 1902, 1906, and so on.

Section 6190, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides that a "general election" shall be held every two years (November), at which certain officers and "existing vacancies" shall be filled, "unless otherwise provided by law."

This section would not require justices of the peace to be elected this year, even if it should be conceded that the election at which they were elected is a "general election," and not a "township election," for "it is otherwise provided by law" how and when justices shall be elected, namely: 1906, and so on.

In addition, the acts fixing the time for electing justices of the peace was passed in 1903, later than the section providing for general elections, which was passed in 1881, and the later act would probably govern if there was any conflict.

For these reasons it is my opinion that justices of the peace should not be elected this year in cases where vacancies have occurred, but that the appointees hold until the next regular township election for such officers, which occurs in 1906.

PRISONS—CONTRACTS CAN BE MADE IN ONE FISCAL YEAR TO BE FULFILLED AND PAID FOR IN ANOTHER.

September 7, 1904.

Hon. W. H. Whittaker, Superintendent Indiana Reformatory, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 6th you state that it is necessary for your institution to have 5,000 yards of canton flannel to be used in making underwear for the inmates of your institution; that it is absolutely necessary for you to have these goods at an early date in order that the tailor shop may be enabled to make up the goods into garments ready for use at the time they will be needed, which will be about the 15th or 20th of November. That if the purchase is delayed until after November or the beginning of the next fiscal year that it will be impossible for these garments to be ready by the time that the winter would demand that they should be used. That these garments are to be used wholly in the next fiscal year and none of them will be used in this fiscal year; that the payment for the same will not be due until the first of November and you ask if the Board, under this state of facts, will be warranted in letting the contract and receiving the goods between now and the 1st of November and properly charge the same to the expenditure of the fiscal year beginning November 1st next.

Your question involves the construction of the act of the legislature approved March 4, 1901 (see Acts 1901, p. 93), the first section of which provides as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That the Auditor of State shall not draw any warrant in favor of any State institution, nor in favor of any officer thereof for the fiscal year beginning November 1, in any year, until he has received a sworn statement from and made by the Superintendent, Warden, Commandant or President, of such State institution, that the books of the institution have been properly audited; that all bills of whatsoever kind, which have been presented have been vouchered to be paid, and that there is no outstanding indebtedness for the fiscal year just ended, other than shown by the schedule for the month ending October 31, which shall be filed with the Auditor by such Superintendent, Warden, Commandant, or President."

The purpose of this act was to prevent an institution anticipating the revenues appropriated for it and was to prevent such institution from getting into debt, but it must have a reasonable construction, and it was evidently not the intention of the Legislature to hamper such institution in its administration and in providing for necessary supplies at the proper time.

As the purchase of the supplies described is for the fiscal year beginning November 1st and to be used in that year and not in the present fiscal year, I see no reason why such purchase could not be made in the manner above set out and paid for out of the revenues of the ensuing fiscal year or the fiscal year for which such supplies have been purchased.

This is not an anticipation of the coming revenue, but a provident preparation for the ensuing winter.

It will be observed that the above section quoted provides that the affidavit shall contain the statement

> "That there is no outstanding indebtedness for the fiscal year just ended."

The construction we here place upon this section is in accord with this language, as the debt contracted is for the fiscal year beginning November 1st next.

FEEBLE-MINDED YOUTH—SCHOOL FOR—WATER MAIN.

September 17, 1904.

Mr. Albert E. Carroll, Superintendent School for Feeble-Minded Youth, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 14th, in which you ask for a construction of certain agreements entered into by your institution with the Water Works Trustees of the City of Fort Wayne and with F. J. and Eliza Hayden:

In the agreement with the Water Works Trustees, occurs this proviso, "however, if in the future, the territory through which said water main or any part thereof extends is taken into the city and the said water mains is used by said first party (Water Works Trustees), then in that event party of the first part hereby covenants and agrees to refund to said second party (School for Feeble-Minded Youth), the actual cost of said water main or as much thereof as is taken into the city."

You state that the Water Works Trustees have granted the right to one Frederick Hayden to tap the main that was constructed and is maintained exclusively by the State of Indiana for said institution, and you ask whether this grant amounts to a violation of your agreement with the Water Works Trustees and renders said city liable under the proviso just quoted, to pay said institution the amount of the cost of laying said main.

In the agreement made with F. J. and Eliza Hayden, which is an agreement for an easement over their lands for the purpose of laying and maintaining this water main in perpetuity, is found this stipulation:

> "It is further stipulated that said water pipes shall not be tapped or used by any person or corporation except with the consent or by the authority of the Board of Water Works Trustees of the city of Fort Wayne, first had and obtained, but shall be and remain, together with said license and grant the exclusive property of the said School, and the title thereto shall be and remain vested in perpetuity in the Trustees thereof, and their successors in office and assigns."

As to the first proposition in the proviso, first above quoted, it will be observed that the city shall be liable to pay the amount of the cost of the construction of said main upon the happening of a certain contingency, which is:

> "When the territory through which said water main or any port thereof extends, is taken into the city and the water mains is used by said first party."

This language seems to me clear and should be construed that to render the city liable the territory must be taken into the city and also the mains used by the said Water Works Trustees. Until the happening of both of these events, the city does not become liable to pay for the main, but there is nothing in either of the contracts that gives the Water Works Trustees the right to permit this main to be tapped as long as it remains the exclusive property of the State.

The stipulation quoted from the contract with Hayden is evidently for the protection of the Water Works Trustees and Hayden has no right to tap the main without the procurement of a license to do so from both the Water Works Trustees and your institution, as it is expressly provided that this main shall be the property of the School, and notwithstanding he had permission from the Water Works Trustees to tap the main he could not rightfully do so until he had procured permission from the school, and if he undertakes to tap the main without this permission, he could be enjoined or prevented in any other legal manner.

Permission from the trustees alone gives him no right whatever to tap this main.

FISH AND GAME—"WILD DOVES."

September 27, 1904.

Hon. Z. T. Sweeney, Commissioner of Fisheries and Game, Columbus, Ind.:

Dear Sir—I have your communication of the 26th, in which you ask an opinion as to whether a dove is now considered a wild bird.

The law of 1891 (Acts 1891, p. 113) provides:

> "It shall be unlawful for any person to kill any wild bird, other than a game bird," etc.

That act designated what should be considered "game birds," and made the dove a wild bird.

In 1901 (Acts 1901, p. 442) an act was passed for the better protection and preservation of the game of the state, in which the killing of wild doves at certain seasons of the year was permitted.

An amendment to this act was passed in 1903 (Acts 1903, p. 395) in which this section in reference to the killing of wild doves was repealed; so that, we are now governed by the law of 1891, so far as it applies to the wild dove.

It would, therefore, be my opinion that the wild dove should be included among the wild birds, and that it would be unlawful to kill them at any time of the year, pursuant to the act of 1891.

TAXES—INTEREST ON DELINQUENT TAXES.

October 3, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—Replying to your communication of the 3d, in which you ask for an interpretation of the act of the general assembly of the state of Indiana, approved February 26, 1903, providing for interest on delinquent taxes: Section 1 of said act is as follows:

> "Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That any and all taxes levied on behalf of the state, or of any county, township, town or city in the state, which were unpaid, and delinquent, on the first day of January, 1903, or which shall hereafter be unpaid on the first day of January of any year, after two years from the beginning of such delinquency, shall bear interest at the rate of six per centum per annum from the first day of January of any such year, until paid, and that such interest shall be collected by the treasurer and covered into the treasury of the respective counties, and of the respective towns and cities of the state, in addition to the penalties upon delinquent taxes now provided by law."

Under the provisions of this act it is clear that in no case is interest to be charged until after the expiration of two years after the taxes become delinquent.

All taxes which had been delinquent two years or more, on January 1, 1903, should bear six per cent. interest from said January 1, 1903, until paid.

Interest on delinquent taxes for succeeding years should be attached on and computed from the first day of January next succeeding the date of the expiration of two years from the date of the delinquency.

In some cases this will leave a few months after the expiration of the two years of such delinquency in which said taxes will bear no interest.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION—EXPENDITURE OF APPROPRIATION.

October 8, 1904.

Hon. David E. Sherrick, Auditor of State, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Dear Sir—In your communication of the 8th you ask with reference to the expenditure of the appropriations made for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition:

> First. Must payments for the vouchers for the expenditures be made in accordance with what is known as the "Mull Law," requiring the filing of itemized statements of accounts, with receipts for moneys paid out, or does the act creating the Commission and making the appropriation govern the auditing and payment of the accounts, and if so must the accounts be itemized and be accompanied by receipts?
> Second. Has said Commission full authority to make the expenditures and when so made and the accounts audited by the Commission, are the same conclusive, and has the Auditor of State any other duty with reference to the same than the issuance of warrants in payment thereof?

The law known as the "Mull Law," being sections 6654 a, b, c and d, Burns' R. S. 1901, provides specifically how vouchers shall be made out in the disbursement of money for any purpose by any department of the State Government.

The act creating the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Commission, approved March 9, 1903 (See Acts 1903, p. 352), provides among other things,

> "Such commission shall have full power * * * to disburse the appropriation herein made."

Section 2 of said Act provides that

> "The appropriation of $150,000 or so much thereof as may be needed for the purposes stated in section 1 thereof, said appropriation to be paid by warrants issued on the order of the President and Secretary of the said Commission by the Auditor of State from time to time.
> "All payments must be made upon authenticated vouchers approved by the President and Secretary and no warrants shall be executed except such as have been duly presented to the Commission and audited and allowed."

These statutes must be construed together. The Mull Law was a valid enactment at the time of the passage of the Purchase Exposition Commission Act and it must be presumed that the legislature was fully aware of this act and the Purchase Exposition Commission Act was enacted with this knowledge.

From the wording of the latter act it is evident that the legislature intended that the Commission should determine the purposes for which the appropriation should be expended, but also from said Act it is apparent that the legislature intended that such expenditure should be made upon vouchers in the same manner as other departments expend money under the laws of the State.

It is therefore my opinion that before the Auditor is authorized to draw a warrant for the payment of any money out of said appropriation, an itemized voucher, together with the receipts, in full compliance with the Mull Law, audited, authenticated and approved by the President and Secretary of said Commission must be presented, and when presented to the auditor it is his duty, under the law, to draw a warrant on the Treasury for the payment of the same.

SUPPLEMENT No. 1.

INDIANA SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE-MINDED YOUTH—INSANE OR PREGNANT WOMEN.

December 6, 1902.

Alexander Johnson, Esq., Superintendent Indiana School for Feeble-Minded Youth, Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Dear Sir—You ask what shall be done in case it becomes apparent that women committed to the school, under the act of R. S. 1901, section 3113, are insane or pregnant, or are not feeble-minded nor idiotic.

The act of 1901 provides for an adjudication in a court of justice before any woman shall be committed. As to the facts on which a commitment is made, it is the rule of law that where there has been adjudication it must stand until it is set aside by a subsequent adjudication. Taking then the three cases which you suggest, I shall discuss them in the order named.

(1) Insanity.—Where a woman committed to the institution is discovered to be insane, the remedy is very simple, all that is necessary being that some officer of the institution institute insanity proceedings under the law, as required by section 3209, R. S. 1901.

The only difficulty about such a proceeding is that as applied to persons who have not been committed from Allen county, or who have not been in the institution for a year so as to acquire a settlement, under R. S. 1901, section 8146, the insanity proceedings must be instituted before some Justice of the Peace in the county from which such person came.

(2) Pregnancy.—It is true that the law requires that the woman committed be not pregnant at the time of her admission. The courts are by no means infallible, and such questions as this cannot always in the nature of things be correctly settled by the courts, but such an adjudication must stand as final.

The practical question is, what is to be done with pregnant women who are committed to your school. They are unquestionably the wards of the state and their condition appeals more strongly to public sympathy even than that of the ordinary inmate.

The state must take care of them, and it is your duty, as their custodian, to see that proper care is given; whether this can best be done in your institution or elsewhere is a matter which the legislature has not considered, and as to which it has made no provision. Your board has a general authority to make reasonable rules and regulations until positive legislative provision is made; therefore such rules should be adopted by your board as may be necessary to provide proper, decent and reasonable care and attention, such as pregnant women require, whether it be given in your institution or some other public institution.

The fact that the court has been deceived as to the condition of the woman in this respect would not be a sufficient reason for her final discharge, but the woman so committed must be reasonably and properly provided for somewhere until the condition ceases, when she must be returned to the institution, and in the theory of the law, she will be and remain in your charge as well during her confinement as subsequently.

(3) Women who are not Feeble-Minded.—No provision is made by law giving the board authority to discharge the prisoner committed as feeble-minded, because in the judgment of the board the finding of the court was erroneous. As well might it be contended that the prison board could discharge a prisoner upon its belief that he was not guilty of the offense of which he had been convicted. The law makes the court the judge of the woman's mental condition and not the board.

However, a condition of feeble-mindedness is sometimes produced by an enfeebled physical condition, and will yield to proper treatment and diet. In such case, where the mental condition of the subject so improves after treatment as to be a proper subject to be released from confinement, a rule should be provided under which persons committed whose mental condition has so improved as to render confinement unnecessary or improper may be discharged.

INSURANCE—MEDICAL ALLIANCE OF AMERICA.

December 12, 1902.

Hon. W. H. Hart, Auditor of State:

Dear Sir—I am in receipt of your favor of today, accompanying a copy of a certificate issued by the Medical Alliance of America, for an opinion respecting the same.

This is an unusual form of certificate. It provides that in case of illness or accident, after ninety days from date of issuance of certificate, that the member shall be entitled free of charge to the professional services of any of the physicians or surgeons members of the medical branch of the company, residing in the same place, together with certain discounts on the weekly payment of all remedies prescribed.

This is a sick benefit certificate. It provides for the payment of a certain stipulated sum per week or month; provides for forfeitures of all sums paid in, provided subscribers are thirty days in arrears.

I advise that it be required to submit to examination and file a report before it be allowed to proceed doing business. I return the certificate herewith.

COMMUTATION—POWER OF GOVERNOR.

December 18, 1902.

Hon. Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana:

Dear Sir—In answer to your inquiry respecting your authority to commute the sentence pronounced against minors in the proper courts of this state from imprisonment in the Indiana Reformatory at Jeffersonville, to the Indiana Reform School for Boys, at Plainfield:

Section 15 of the act of February 23, 1883 (being section 8322 R. S. 1901) and section 23 of the act of March 8, 1867 (being section 8327, R. S. 1901) are the statutory provisions covering your authority to commute sentences. The former section was passed sixteen years after the latter section, and, in effect, is an amendment thereto.

Under this section you have authority, either before the boy is committed to the reformatory at Jeffersonville, or afterwards, to commute his sentence and cause him to be transferred to the Reform School for Boys at Plainfield.

PRINTING—REPORTS OF STATE OFFICERS.

December 22, 1902.

Hon. Thomas J. Carter, Clerk Board of Public Printing:

Dear Sir—Answering yours of the 18th, respecting the matter of public printing:

It is my opinion that the copies of reports to be assembled in the documentary journal do not include the number of reports of state officers that are specified in the law for the several officers respectively.

LUCRATIVE OFFICES—RIGHT TO SERVE AS DEPUTY OIL INSPECTOR, HAVING BEEN SENATOR DURING DECEMBER 27, 1902, SESSION OF LEGISLATURE WHICH ENACTED PRESENT OIL INSEPCTION LAW.

December 27, 1902.

Mr. T. Halleck Johnson, Indianapolis:

Dear Sir—In answer to your inquiry respecting your right to serve as deputy oil inspector, you having been a senator during the last session of the legislature, which enacted the present oil inspection law:

Section 30 of article 4 of the Indiana Constitution eliminating the clause respecting election of officers by the general assembly, reads as follows:

> "No senator or representative shall during the term for which he may have been elected * * * be appointed to any civil office of profit, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such term."

A similar provision is found in section 6 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States. It is likewise found in the constitutions of many of the states of the union.

The Supreme Court of Indiana has not construed this section with reference to the particular question you ask. Mr. Justice Story has construed, in his Commentaries, this provision in the Federal Constitution in these words:

"His appointment is restricted only during the time for which he was elected."

You were elected as senator for four years, and under section 2 of article 4, your successor went in office on the day succeeding the November election. This provision is peculiar to the senators and the representatives.

I am of the opinion that during your four years' term as Senator, you were not eligible to any office created during your term, or the emoluments of which have been increased—this covers the entire four years. But your inquiry presents a different question: Does such disqualification extend beyond the term of four years? If it does, then any member of the senate or house who votes for a general salary law that in the slightest degree increases the salaries of officers of Indiana, would be barred from holding any office of trust or profit thereafter during life. This is not only an unreasonable, but an unwarranted construction.

The same question has been presented to the Supreme Courts of other states having a like provision as ours in their Constitutions, and in each case they have held that the disqualification relates only to the term of office, and not after the expiration of the term. See:

State v. Sutton, 63 Minn. 147;
State v. Boyd, 21 Wis. 210.

I am therefore very clear that

First—A senator or representative under our Constitution is not eligible to election or appointment to an office during the entire term of such officer, where such senator or representative was a member of the general assembly which created such office or increases its emoluments.

Second—That such disqualification extends only during the four years' term of such senator, or the two years' term of such representative.

TAXATION—SCHOOL BOOKS.

December 31, 1902.

Hon. Frank L. Jones, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Indianapolis:

Dear Sir—You ask whether school books, furnished to school officers by contractors, for sale, under the law, are taxable in the jurisdiction where they are found on the first day of April:

The law provides—R. S. 1901, section 5868—that upon requisition from the school officers, school book contractors shall ship to the school officers such books as may be needed during the coming year. These books are compelled to be furnished by the contractors, upon proper requisitions, and are in the possession and control of school officers of the state while they remain in the state, if they are not sold by such officers. They may be paid for by the school officers outright, or at their pleasure, and the law further provides that they may be returned by the school officers to the contractor, at their pleasure, and when returned the contractor must give credit for all books so returned.

The constitution of the state provides for a just valuation for taxation of all property, both real and personal, excepting such only for municipal, educational, literary, scientific, religious or charitable purposes, as may be especially exempted by law.

Section 5 of the tax law—R. S. 1901, section 8412—under clause fifth, provides for the exemption of every building set aside for educational, literary, scientific or charitable purposes, etc., "Also the personal property, endowment funds and interest thereon belonging to any institution, town, township, city or county and connected with, used, or set apart for any purposes aforesaid."

The school books sent into the state upon the order of school officers, and which remain absolutely under the control of such officers while here, are certainly personal property in the control of the town, township, city or county where they are, and are connected with, and used, and set apart for educational purposes. It is certainly the spirit of the law that such school books should not be taxed while within the control of the state.

I am therefore of the opinion that school books ordered from a contractor by a school officer, and held for future use in the schools by such officer, are exempt from taxation.

REPORT

OF THE

ADJUTANT-GENERAL

OF THE

STATE OF INDIANA

FOR THE

Fiscal Year Ending December 31, 1903

INDIANAPOLIS:
WM. B. BURFORD, CONTRACTOR FOR STATE PRINTING AND BINDING.
1905

THE STATE OF INDIANA,

Returned by the Auditor of State, with above certificate, and transmitted to Secretary of State for publication, upon the order of the Board of Commissioners of Public Printing and Binding.

GEORGE B. LOCKWOOD, Private Secretary.

Filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Indiana, January 12, 1905.

D. E. STORMS,
Secretary of State.

Received the within report and delivered to the printer this 15th day of January, 1905.

THOS. J. CARTER,
Clerk Printing Bureau.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S REPORT, 1903.

STATE OF INDIANA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, January 30, 1903.

To the Governor of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to submit herewith my report for the months of November and December, 1902, and for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1903, covering the condition of the Indiana National Guard up to this date; expenditures from the Militia Fund; expenditures made from the general fund on account of active service of the militia occasioned by the performance of riot duty; and reimbursement to the soldiers of the Spanish-American War, under the act passed by the General Assembly of 1899.

Heretofore the report of the Adjutant-General has been submitted on the theory that the fiscal year ended the 31st of October, whereas the appropriation for the militia does not lapse until the 31st of December. A report, therefore, rendered at any time prior to December the 31st would be incomplete, in so far as it pertained to the expenditure of the Military Fund. I, therefore, on the 10th of December, 1903, asked the Attorney-General for a legal opinion as to the proper time to render my report, to which he made the following reply:

Hon. John R. Ward, Adjutant-General:

Dear Sir—Replying to your letter of the 10th, in which you ask when you should make the report to the Governor required by Section 7424k, Burns' R. S. 1901, said section is as follows:

"The Adjutant-General shall, within one month after the close of the fiscal year, report to the Governor the amount of the Military Fund drawn, the amount expended and the items of expenditure, and in such report shall publish copies of all General Orders, together with such other matters as may be deemed necessary or important to the military service."

The fiscal year for the State, as generally recognized, is the year beginning on the first day of November and ending on the thirty-first day of the succeeding October; but there is no statute fixing this as a fiscal year, and it is recognized as the fiscal year for the reason that all general appropriations are made for said time.

The last law providing for the Militia is Section 1 of an Act of the Legislature of 1903 (See Acts 1903, p. 583), and, in part, is as follows:

"That there is hereby, and shall be, appropriated annually, on the first day of January, out of the revenues of the State not otherwise appropriated by law, the sum of seventy-five thousand dollars, which shall be set aside and constitute a fund for military purposes."

This provision is identical with the provision of the act of 1895, except that the amount is changed from forty-five thousand dollars to seventy-five thousand dollars, and the legislature of 1895, in the same act, passed section 7424k, above quoted.

Construing these two enactments together, it would seem that the fiscal year for the militia would be from January to January, and that your report should be made within thirty days from the 31st of December of each year, as, to report otherwise would necessitate the making of a financial report in the middle of a fiscal year.

I have the honor to be, very truly yours,

(Signed) CHARLES W. MILLER,
Attorney-General.

ORGANIZATION.

At the beginning of the fiscal year the Indiana National Guard consisted of thirty-five companies of Infantry, three batteries of Artillery, one company each of Hospital Corps and Signal Corps, and three bands.

Mustered out—
- Company G, First Infantry, Attica, April 23, 1903.
- Company L, First Infantry, Greencastle, June 1, 1903.
- Company G, Second Infantry, Hartford City, June 1, 1903.
- Company K, Second Infantry, Danville, December 23, 1903.

Added to the Organization—
- Company D, First Infantry, Spencer, April 23, 1903.
- Company G, First Infantry, Goshen, June 6, 1903.
- Company I, First Infantry, Salem, August 24, 1903.
- Company L, First Infantry, Connersville, June 26, 1903.
- Company M, First Infantry, Portland, August 21, 1903.
- Company G, Second Infantry, Bluffton, April 22, 1903.

Band Second Infantry, Michigan City, May 18, 1903.

Unassigned Company, Kokomo, September 26, 1903.

CAMP OF INSTRUCTION.

The Annual Camp of Instruction was held at the Indiana State Fair Grounds, from July 26th to August 3d, under General Order No. 6, A. G. O., which is made a part of this report.

This Encampment was a departure from former ones, in that a considerable portion of the time was occupied in battle maneuvers, which were very creditably executed.

Captain Blanton Winship, Acting Judge Advocate United States Army, was in Camp officially and professionally, being detailed by the War Department as an inspector and instructor and also acted as an Umpire in the maneuvers.

Colonel Arthur L. Wagner, United States Army, Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Lakes, was present during the Camp, on the invitation of your Excellency, from July 31st to August 2d, and rendered very efficient service to the Militia by acting as Chief Umpire of the maneuvers, a branch of the military service in which he so notably excels.

Captain Edgar Ridenour, Sixteenth Infantry, and Second Lieutenant Benjamin F. Ristine, of the Twenty-first Infantry, were present as guests and contributed in a material way to the success of the Encampment.

The total aggregate strength in Camp was one hundred and sixty-nine officers and nineteen hundred and twenty-two enlisted men; one hundred and fifty-seven cooks and servants. Total, twenty-two hundred and forty-eight.

Special attention was given in this Encampment to camp sanitation, resulting in material improvement in sanitary conditions, as shown by the report of the Brigadier-General Commanding.

Taken altogether, the Encampment was in advance of any former ones.

JOINT MANEUVERS AT WEST POINT, KENTUCKY.

Under the authority contained in General Order No. 10, A. G. O., September 14, 1903, the entire organized Militia of the State, under the command of Brigadier-General Will J. McKee, proceeded, on September 30th, to West Point, Kentucky, where upon arrival it participated for a period of ten days in Joint Maneuvers with the Regular Army forces of the Department of the Lakes.

Brigadier-General John C. Bates, commanding the Department of the Lakes, was in command of the Maneuvers Camp.

The maneuvers consisted of numerous and varied battle exercises, under the supervision of Colonel Arthur L. Wagner, Chief Umpire. To say that the Indiana Militia acquitted itself with credit is but to do it simple justice. Both Brigadier-General McKee and Colonel Wagner in their respective reports assign to the Indiana troops a high place.

The expense of transportation, subsistence and pay of the State troops on the occasion was borne by the United States Government, out of the appropriation for the support of the Army. The State, however, was to an expense of about five thousand dollars, rendered necessary in the provision of the horses necessary to the proper equipment of its Militia.

ACTIVE SERVICE.

On July 4th, 1903, Robert Lee, a negro, killed Louis Massey, a policeman, at Evansville. Lee was arrested and confined in the county jail, situate in the City of Evansville.

Immediately a strong sentiment against the prisoner made itself manifest, and mob violence was threatened and seemed imminent. The Sheriff of Vanderburgh County notified the Governor that the forces at his command were insufficient to cope with the situation.

By the 6th of July housebreaking and burglary of hardware stores by the mob to secure firearms had become prevalent. Upon the urgent call of the local authorities, Company E, First Infantry, stationed at Evansville, was ordered on duty by your Excellency (a preport of the operations of which company, made by Captain Julius F. Blum, commanding, are filed herewith and made a part of this report).

Afterward it was found to be necessary to reinforce. Accordingly Special Order No. 66, A. G. O., July 7, 1903, was issued and was as follows:

STATE OF INDIANA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 7, 1903.

SPECIAL ORDERS,
No. 66.

I. Brigadier-General Will J. McKee, commanding Indiana National Guard, and Quartermaster-General Oran Perry, are hereby directed to proceed to Evansville at once. On arrival General Will J. McKee will take command of the troops there and as they arrive. Quartermaster-General Perry will provide for the quartering and subsistence of troops.

II. Colonel H. B. Smith, commanding Second Infantry, Indiana National Guard, is hereby ordered to proceed to Evansville with the First Battalion of the Second Infantry, Battery A, Artillery Battalion, and Company K, First Infantry, via special train, I. & V. and E & T. H. Railroad, and upon arrival at destination will report to Brigadier-General Will J. McKee, commanding.

III. Major William H. Kershner, Chief Commissary, and First Lieutenant Guy A. Boyle, Aid-de-Camp, are hereby directed to proceed to Evansville via I. & V. special, at 2 o'clock p. m., today, and upon arrival at destination report to Brigadier-General Will J. McKee. First Lieutenant Walter W. Heiskell, commanding Battery A, Artillery Battalion, will report with his command to Colonel Harry B. Smith, commanding Second Regiment, to proceed to Evansville via I. & V. special train at 2 o'clock p. m.

By order of the Governor.

(Signed) JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

In addition to the organizations named in this order, Company B, First Infantry, stationed at Terre Haute, Captain Alvin W. Dudley, commanding; Company C, stationed at New Albany, Captain James F. McCurdy, commanding; Company A, First Infantry, stationed at Vincennes, Captain James A. McCoy, commanding; Company K, First Infantry, stationed at Martinsville, Captain Hugh E. Rutledge, commanding; Battery A, Artillery Battalion, stationed at Indianapolis, Captain Harry A. Callon commanding, and the Hospital Corps, stationed at Indianapolis, Captain John A. Pfaff commanding, were by telegraphic orders directed to proceed to Evansville and report for duty to Brigadier-General McKee, on arrival.

The report of Captain Julius F. Blum, filed herewith, recites all the facts leading up to and incident to the engagement between the mob and the Militia.

After a period of four days' occupation of the city by the Militia the mob had been dispersed, order restored and the Militia withdrawn. A number (about forty) of the rioters were arrested and indicted, but after changes of venue and trials in other counties, only one, ——— Tyndall, was convicted.

Respectfully,

John R. Ward.

Adjutant-General.

COMPANY E, FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.

EVANSVILLE, IND., July 13, 1903.

The Adjutant-General, State of Indiana, Indianapolis:

Sir—I have the honor to report that in obedience to the Governor's order, received by the writer at 5:55 o'clock a. m., July 6, 1903, ordering out the Company at once and placing same at the disposal of the Sheriff of Vanderburgh County, to suppress mob violence, Company E, First Infantry, I. N. G., was assembled in the Armory at 8 o'clock a. m., July 6th, and reported to the Sheriff (sixty-one) officers and men. The Sheriff requested the Company held in the Armory until wanted.

As rioting, housebreaking, robbing and shooting had been going on two days, the writer considered the situation dangerous in the extreme, so, in the presence of the Judges of the Circuit and Superior Courts, the Sheriff, Mayor and Chief of Police of Evansville, called up the Adjutant-General's office by telephone and recommended that additional troops be hurried to this city, and was informed that two companies would probably be sent.

The Sheriff called the Company to the court house and jail at 2:30 o'clock p. m., July 6, 1903. Upon arrival of the Company at the jail a guard was immediately posted, surrounding the county jail and protecting the Fourth-street entrance to the court house.

The crowd began to assemble immediately and soon became ugly. It seemed that the sentiment of the crowd changed from a desire to wreak vengeance upon the negro to vindictive hate of the National Guard, who were subjected to unheard of taunts, jeers, curses, threats and personal attack.

The Chief of Police was appealed to to furnish officers to make arrests; was informed the police department could furnish none. One hundred deputy sheriffs had been sworn in, one-third of whom were sent to a remote part of the city to assist the police to patrol Baptistown, a colored settlement. The balance of the deputies were posted inside of the court house.

At 7 o'clock p. m., July 6th, one of the guards bayoneted a rioter in self-defense. The man was not seriously hurt—the guard's bayonet passed through his clothing and pinned him to the ground. At this point the mob became very threatening and abusive.

This line was now reinforced by five additional men from the reserve. The mob continued crowding, and all efforts by suasion were entirely lost. The guards were forced back inch by inch, the distance of half a block, to the jail entrance. During this time the mob at the opposite end of the street were just as abusive to the soldiers, but not so aggressive, and failed to force the guards back. The alley in the rear of the jail was kept clear the entire evening by fifteen men of Company E. At 10 o'clock p. m. the entire company was on guard endeavoring to hold the mob in check. The writer had been called into the Sheriff's parlor in the jail building to consult with Colonel McCoy and the Sheriff, Colonel McCoy insisting that the Sheriff place his deputies to support the guard in the effort to hold the mob in check and force same back to original line. The Sheriff finally placed four deputies at the disposal of the Company Commander. These deputies were taking their places in line when the attack by the rioters upon the guard began.

At the first shot a Corporal floored a man with the butt of rifle. The firing now became general, the guard responding instantly without command. Two Sergeants were hit at the first fire, but continued in line until compelled to fall out by reason of weakness, caused by loss of blood.

The mob was now fleeing as fast as it could get away. Occasionally a man would halt, fire and run. The command, "Cease firing," was instantly given after the first volley by the guard. The deputy sheriff either did not hear the command or else did not understand—same continued to fire another round after the first fire.

My guard line had now advanced to the line established in the afternoon and held the same until relieved by Company A, of Vincennes.

The casualties were:

Sergeant Will J. Reese, shot in thigh by 32-caliber bullet, shot in ankle with ball of same caliber; a load of buckshot passed through his hat, doing no damage; is doing nicely; will be out in a few days.

Sergeant George F. Koehne, shot in leg with 32-caliber bullet; a buckshot wound in same leg, and shot through the hat with 38-caliber ball; wounds not serious; is able to be about.

Private Melvin Jaquess, shot in arm after giving a wounded rioter a drink of water; his wound is painful, but not serious.

Private H. Luton was kicked by a rioter between the legs and badly injured, and is in hospital here.

Edwin R. Spain, a deputy sheriff, shot in the neck; ball passed through a linen collar into his neck; will recover.

There were five rioters killed. Four have since died; many more were hurt. I am informed, however, that all the wounded will recover.

The feeling against the members of the local company is intense. The man who was bayoneted and followed up his misdeed by threats of personal harm to the guard has been placed under a peace bond.

Some men have lost their positions through their connection with the local company in the late riot, as follows: Private Benjamin West, Harvey Whitton, Henry Vice (discharged by the Cook Brewing Company); Simon Bitz (discharged by the druggist, Dr. Ed Loval, west end); Melvin Jaquess (discharged by the Maurer & Steckler, grocers, Ninth and Sycamore).

I am informed the business men of this city will act in the matter of discharged men by reason of connection with I. N. G. The Company was relieved from duty at 5 o'clock p. m., July 9, 1903.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) JULIUS F. BLUM,

Captain.

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., March 4, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 1.

I. The following proclamation has been issued:

BY THE GOVERNOR OF INDIANA—A PROCLAMATION.

The melancholy duty devolves upon me of announcing the death of Gen. Robert S. Foster, Quartermaster-General of Indiana, which occurred at his home in Indianapolis, at 3:45 p. m. on Tuesday, March 3.

General Foster was one of the most conspicuous survivors of the Civil War. He was closely identified with Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas and others who achieved immortal fame as victorious leaders of the mighty legions of the North, marshaled under the flag of the Union. At the beginning of the sectional conflict, Robert S. Foster raised a company of volunteers and was thereupon commissioned Captain by Governor Morton. His subsequent achievements in the science of arms were characterized by a series of brilliant victories, which were rewarded by well earned promotions, until he was finally brevetted Major-General. Before he had reached the age of thirty years he was commander of a division, and in all of the many notable engagements in which he bore a conspicuous part it is recorded to his credit that he never lost a battle or a skirmish. Going into the war almost at its beginning, he was present at the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, where he shared the honors of the victorious hosts and was personally complimented by President Lincoln.

In civil life General Foster occupied many positions of public trust. He had an unusually high sense of honor, his integrity was never questioned and he was generally beloved. He was a stranger to intrigue, and, although his courage had been tested and proved on many fields of carnage, his great nature was marked by unvarying kindness and gentleness.

He was a native of Indiana, and thoroughly loyal to its every interest. He achieved distinction by the force of merit, but, secure in all the honors he had so worthily won, he was so modest that he rarely made reference to the distinguished services he had rendered his country during the period of the Nation's direst necessities.

As a soldier and as a citizen he was a model type of sturdy American manhood, and the people of Indiana, I am sure, will mourn with those of us who knew him best in doing honor to his precious memory.

I, therefore, recommend that during the time his body lies in state at the Capitol, public business be suspended, so far as practicable, in order that proper respect may be paid to one who served his country with patriotic fidelity in the discharge of every responsibility imposed upon him.

WINFIELD T. DURBIN,
Governor.

DANIEL E. STORMS,
Secretary of State.

II. On the day of the funeral the flags on all armories of the Indiana National Guard will be displayed at half staff, and the officers willl wear the usual badge of mourning on the sword hilt for the period of thirty days. The colors of the several regiments and battalions, if paraded within thirty days, will be draped in mourning.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, March 17, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 2.

The following appointment on the Military Staff of the Governor is hereby announced:

Brigadier-General Oran Perry, Quartermaster-General.

He will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., April 27, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 3.

Captain Benjamin Alvord, Twentieth Regiment Infantry, U. S. A., has been detailed by the Department of the Lakes, to inspect the Indiana National Guard to determine whether Indiana is entitled to share in the appropriation under the Militia Law passed by the last Congress, and to participate in the maneuvers provided for by that law.

Such inspection will be held on the regular drill nights of the various companies, within the next ten days.

Company Commanders are hereby directed to take such steps as are necessary to insure a full attendance.

Companies will be inspected in heavy marching order.

All property must be submitted for inspection.

The Colonels commanding the several regiments and the commanding officer of the artillery battalion, will accompany the inspecting officer on the tour of inspection of their respective commands.

The travel enjoined is necessary to the public service.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General

STATE OF INDIANA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 9, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 4.

The following act of the General Assembly, approved March 10, 1903, is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

AN ACT to amend Section 9 of an act entitled "An act to amend Sections 6, 7, 10, 11, 14, 18, 19 and 32 of an act entitled 'An act for the reorganization of the Indiana Militia prescribing regulations and penalties for violations thereof, providing for the election and appointment of officers, defining the rights and duties of civil and military officers, and penalties for neglect or violations thereof, providing for armories, court martial, councils of administration, boards of survey, military encampments, and the calling of the militia into active service, making annual appropriations for the support of the militia and other expenses, repealing all laws heretofore enacted on that subject in conflict with the provisions of this act, and declaring an emergency for the immediate taking effect thereof,' approved March 5, 1895, and providing for the payment of officers and soldiers, and declaring an emergency," approved March 12, 1901, and declaring an emergency.

[H. 349. Approved March 10, 1903.]

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That Section 9 of said act be amended to read as follows: Section 9. There shall be appointed for each company, battery, band and other organization of the National Guard, by the commanding officer thereof, regular drill nights in each week of each calendar year, and three days in each year for target practice upon the rifle range, and each and every officer and enlisted men shall be paid the following named sums for atendance and performance of duty at such drills, viz.: Privates, artificers, wagoners, cooks and company musicians, twenty (20) cents for each drill; corporals, twenty-five (25) cents; sergeants, thirty (30) cents; first sergeants, quartermaster-sergeants, commissary-sergeants, sergeant-major and hospital stewards, thirty-five (35) cents; second lieutenants, forty (40) cents; first lieutenants, forty-five (45) cents; captains, fifty (50) cents, and for each day passed in practice upon the range, each private, artificer, wagoner, cook and company musician shall be paid one dollar ($1.00); corporals, one dollar and five cents ($1.05); sergeants, one dollar and ten cents ($1.10); first sergeants, quartermaster-sergeants, commissary-sergeants, and sergeant-major and hospital stewards, one dollar and fifteen cents ($1.15); second lieutenants, one dollar and twenty cents ($1.20); first lieutenants, one dollar and twenty-five cents ($1.25); captains, on dollar and thirty cents ($1.30). Said amount shall be due and payable semi-annually on the last day of April and October of each year, and shall be allowed and paid by the Adjutant-General out of the funds annually provided for the support of the militia: Provided, That not less than one hour and a half actual instruction be considered a drill, nor less than eight hours be counted a day on the range: Provided, further, That no pay shall be allowed except for duty actually performed. No amount provided for in this section shall be paid to officers or soldiers until after an inspection is had of all United States and State property for which such officers and soldiers are responsible, and the cost value of any shortage, damage or unnecessarily injured property shall be deducted from the amount due said officer or soldier before the same is paid.

Sec. 2. An emergency is hereby declared to exist for the immediate taking effect of this act, and the same shall be in force from and after its passage.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 10, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 5.

I. The Annual Camp of Instruction of the Indiana National Guard for the present year will be held at Indianapolis, from July 26 to August 3, both inclusive.

II. Commanding Officers will put their commands in readiness to move via routes and at hours to be hereafter designated.

III. The General Order covering the details incident to the Annual Camp of Instruction will be held in abeyance until this department receives the final decision from the War Department concerning the application of the recent Militia Bill, passed by Congress at the last session.

IV. In the meantime Company Commanders will put their commands in condition and recruit their companies to as near the maximum as possible.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 10, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 6.

I. The Annual Camp of Instruction of the Indiana National Guard for the present year will be held at Indianapolis, from July 26 to August 3, both inclusive.

II. Commanding officers will put their commands in readiness to move via routes and at hours to be hereafter designated.

III. The Quartermaster-General will make all necessary purchases for the proper subsistence of officers and men, and forage for horses, and will contract for horses for mounted officers and batteries, where not furnished by the officers or batteries. He will also furnish blankets, bedsacks and straw.

IV. No bills will be paid for supplies furnished or service performed except those authorized by the Quartermaster-General or this office.

V. Transportation and subsistence will be furnished to officers and men and the authorized servants and cooks.

VI. Officers and men joining after the tour of duty has begun or leaving before the tour of duty is ended (except on sick leave) must do so at their own expense.

VII. Any officer certifying to the presence of a member of his company who is absent, or of any citizen as an enlisted man, shall be fined in any sum not more than fifty dollars ($50.00), or imprisoned in a jail not more than three (3) months, or both, by sentence of a General Court-Martial. See section 46, Militia Law.

VIII. No man recruited after July 8, 1903, will be permitted to be brought into camp without the permission of the Brigade Commander.

IX. The commanding officer of each regiment and of the Artillery Battalion must send requisition, direct, for all horses needed for his command, to reach the Quartermaster-General not later than July 20. This does not apply to draft horses.

Any officer who wishes to furnish his own mount must so notify his commanding officer, at once, in order that he may consider same in making up his requisition for the mounts of his command.

Any officer failing to so report his intention to furnish his own mount to his commanding officer will not be compensated for the use of his horse.

Receipted bills, in triplicate, for horses furnished by battalion officers must be submitted to the Regimental Quartermaster and by him submitted, toegther with triplicate receipted bills for all horses furnished by the Regimental Officers, to the Chief Quartermaster before breaking of camp.

Bills presented after thirty days from breaking of camp will not be considered.

Forage will be furnished by the State for all mounts furnished by officers. Each officer furnishing his own mount must provide for the care of same without expense to the State.

Officers entitled to be mounted will be allowed two dollars per day for the use of horses furnished by themselves. If paid by the United States, then State pay will not be allowed. State will not pay for horses for Battalion Quartermasters for a longer period than July 26 to August 3, both inclusive.

X. Cooks will be allowed one dollar per day, but no cook will be paid whose utensils are not returned to the Quartermaster, clean and dry.

XI. Commanding officers will be held personally responsible for the conduct of the men of their commands while en route to and from the camp, and no civilian will be transported, except the authorized servants and cooks.

XII. The following servants will be allowed, whose transportation and subsistence will be furnished by the State, and who will be entitled to one dollar per diem:

For regimental headquarters, three servants.
For each battalion headquarters, one servant.
For the officers of each company, one servant.
Servants will not be allowed by State if United States' pay to officers is allowed.

XIII. The following cooks are authorized:

For regimental mess (field and staff), two cooks.

For regimental line officers' mess, two cooks.

For artillery battalion mess, one cook.

For artillery line officers' mess, one cook.

For each band, one cook.

No allowance will be made for extra cooks.

Company and battery commanders who have not enlisted cooks will be allowed to bring two civilian cooks, who will be paid one dollar per diem.

XIV. No civilian clerks will be allowed or paid, as it is the intention that the non-commissioned staff officers should perform the clerical work and become familiar with their duties.

XV. An Officers' School will be held during the Camp of Instruction, for which all officers will prepare themselves.

Officers will be designated to prepare papers on a given subject, and the discussions on the several papers will be general.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR,
No. 1.

By direction of the Governor the following remarks of Lieutenant-General Sir Ian Hamilton before the British War Commission are herewith published for the information and instruction of the Indiana National Guard:

"If the experience of the South African War can be taken as a guide, the big battalion phase is now about to pass away, and we are entering upon a period when the efficiency of an army will depend far more upon the moral and high training of the individuals who compose it than upon the mere numbers of these individuals who may be available. I believe that an army composed of individuals each so highly trained as to be able to take full advantage of the terrain, and of his wonderful modern weapon, and each animated with a moral and trained to an efficiency which will make him capable of acting in battle on his own initiative, will break through, scatter and demolish less efficient opposing forces, even if greatly superior in numbers.

"Discipline there must be, but it must be discipline on a higher plane. It must be the aim of the new discipline to make the private soldier capable of keeping steadfastly in mind for the whole of the day, or even for several days, and striving with all his might to carry out what he has been told by a superior who is no longer present, and who, for all he may know, is dead. Within a mile of the enemy and in open country it will no longer be possible for the brigade major to gallop up to the colonel with a folded piece of paper prescribing his next movement. Nor can the colonel send his adjutant to tell the captain to change direction or reinforce. Within 1,000 yards of a hostile position the captain can hardly hope any longer to influence the company as a whole by orders, or even by personal example, and the idea of swarms of men surging forward by word of command to the assault of a position is one which we should do our best to encourage among our potential enemies. If a battalion in open country can succeed in getting within 500 yards of the enemy's defensive position they will have done all that they can do as a collective body. The men will be lying widely extended and pinned down to some small depression, or bits of cover, by streams of bullets passing just over them. At some part of the line, however, it is almost certain that a brook, or ditch, or imperceptible fold of ground will give some trifling shelter to a further advance. Half a dozen private soldiers may find themselves at this spot. If they possess sufficient training to recognize the possibilities of their position, together with sufficient new discipline, initiative and enthusiasm to take advantage of it, they will creep on. They will be followed by others, and if, as a result, the enemy's line is penetrated, even by a few men, the power of their modern armament will make their flanking fire so demoralizing and effective that the position will either be abandoned forthwith, or so much attention will be concentrated on the intruders that an assault may become practicable all along the line. It will be evident that to do this the mind of each man must be imbued with a firm conviction that the other men of his own rank, whom he does not see, and who may be anywhere within the next few miles, are also doing the same and trying to seize hold of every opportunity; in other words, active discipline on the higher plane really consists in an unalterable confidence that it also exists in others, and that the individual is not risking his life for nothing.

"All this means added importance to a thorough disciplinary training, and to esprit de corps. That is, I believe, where the conscript soldier will fail. Only imperfectly acquainted with his officers and with his fellow-soldiers, he will tend at the first difficulty to remain lying under cover, because he has no conviction that they are likely to do much more than he is doing, and is not imbued by the sense that he is giving his comrades away by not doing more. It is the magazine rifle, with its smokeless powder, which is at the root of this startling and imminent change in both tactics which I have endeavored shortly to indicate. The modern firearm has been improved and perfected far more rapidly than the soldier. We want an army composed of men each of whom can be trusted to make the fullest possible use of the finest and most delicately-adjusted rifle that can be made. I have noticed a feeling in our army that improvements in armament can not be carried further, because the private soldier would not be able to avail himself of such niceties. This is indeed putting the cart before the horse, and it should be clearly understood that the private soldier of the future must be sufficiently educated to take every advantage of all that science can do for him. Dispersion, concealment, and intelligent use of the ground are also essential to success for either attack or defense, and this demands a high standard of individuality.

There is a timid school of theorists who are eager to explain that the defense is more likely to be successful than the attack. If attacks are, indeed, to be conducted as they are now on the continent of Europe, or as they were until recently in our own army, then this is undoubtedly true; but to my idea, under skillful leading, the attack has rather gained than lost by the new conditions. There is so much more scope for maneuvers, and so much more frontage of ground comes into the sphere of operations, that it is almost always possible to take up flank and supporting positions, from which a deadly fire can be kept up on the enemy's line of defense, whilst small bodies work their way close up and effect a lodgment as previously described. The difficulties of estimating the strength of an enemy or the direction of his fire will give great advantage to a bold and vigorous general, who keeps on the move, and who is well served by his scouts and his patrols. The defense has then to extend its line, and the opportunities for a clever concentration to envelop one flank or to break through in the center are largely increased."

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

REPORT No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 20, 1903.

The Adjutant-General, State of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the Camp of Instruction held pursuant to G. O. No. 6, A. G. O., 1903, at the State Fair Grounds near Indianapolis, July 26 to August 3, 1903, both days inclusive.

I also have the honor to attach hereto the reports of Lieutenant-Colonel John T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector-General; Major Carroll B. Carr, Chief Quartermaster; Major William H. Kershner, Chief Commissary of Subsistence; Captain John A. Pfaff, commanding Brigade Hospital; Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry; Colonel George W. McCoy, First Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonel Stephen A. Bowman, commanding Third Infantry, and Major Frank E. Stevenson, commanding the Artillery.

The preliminary preparations for Camp were covered by G. O. No. 3 (Appendix "A") and S. O. No. 60 (Appendix "B"), these Headquarters, c. s., Quartermasters' and Commissaries' fatigue details being ordered to report to the Chief Quartermaster and Chief Commissary, respectively, at 10:00 a. m., Saturday, July 25. Camp routine was established by G. O. No. 4 (Appendix "C"), these Headquarters, c. s. The Camp was laid out by First Lieutenant Guy A. Boyle, Aide-de-camp, the plan being practically the same as last year. First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, Aide-de-camp, was detailed to receive all incoming troops at the Union Station, Indianapolis, and arrange for street car transportation for companies and baggage to the Fair Grounds. He was on this duty from 10:00 p. m. Saturday evening, July 25, until 6:00 p. m. July 27. The two last companies, "K" and "B," Third Infantry, missing connections by railroad, came in via Union Electric Traction line from Muncie at 6:30 p. m., July 27. The mobilization of the Guard can not therefore be considered an entire success in point of promptness. The cause, however, as pointed out in reports of regimental commanders, was the inadequate train service on Sunday, making regular connections impossible. The recommendation that mobilization be arranged for a weekday on future occasions deserves endorsement.

For the mere purpose of camp, the State Fair Grounds afford a very acceptable site. There is an abundance of excellent water, well distributed, plenty of shade, and fair drainage. Some of the fair buildings, with electric light and telephone connection with the city, make ideal headquarters. Stock stables are convenient for saddle horses and draught animals for the artillery; and the dairy buildings with cold storage facilities made an ideal depot for commissary supplies. The Signal Corps connected the Administration building, where General Headquarters were established, by wire with headquarters of the infantry regiments and the artillery, thus perfecting the convenience of administration.

On the other hand drill space was limited, and the space inside the mile oval, which had previously been used for a parade ground, had since the last camp been cut up by a new half-mile track; so that its use for military purposes was rendered inadequate. However, the use of wooded pasture and stubblefields adjoining the Fair Grounds had been secured for maneuvering purposes, and proved very useful for the tactical work planned for this Encampment.

The grand stand of the race track proved very useful as a meeting place and lecture hall for officers' schools. It would be very desirable at future camps held where such conveniences are not available, to provide a large lecture tent for similar purposes.

REGULAR OFFICERS IN CAMP.

This Camp of Instruction was particularly fortunate in having present during the tour, several officers of the regular establishment.

Captain Blanton Winship, Acting Judge Advocate, U. S. A., was in camp officially and professionally, being detailed by the War Department as inspector and instructor. Captain Winship arrived Tuesday, July 28, and remained until Sunday, August 2. He took a very active interest in all the work done and kindly consented to act as Chief Umpire on the defensive side in the Tactical Exercise of August 1. Captain Winship sought opportunities to be obliging and of technical assistance, and made many appreciative friends throughout the Guard by his uniform courtesy and considerate helpfulness.

The Guard was greatly honored by the presence, on invitation, of Colonel Arthur L. Wagner, U. S. A., Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of the Lakes, the eminent strategist and tactician and author of standard technical works on military subjects. Colonel Wagner is the greatest American authority on the science of war, so recognized throughout the world, and his presence at our principal tactical exercise, kindness in assuming the duties of Chief Umpire of the same, and afterward preparing an analysis and critical comment on the exercise, which he read to the assembled officers, were of great instructive value, and appreciated as a high compliment. It is a pleasure to attach to this report a copy of Colonel Wagner's comment, marked "Appendix 'F'." Colonel Wagner arrived from Chicago at 4:00 p. m. July 31, and remained until Sunday, August 2.

There were also in Camp, Capt. Edgar Ridenour, Sixteenth United States Infantry, and Second Lieutenant Ben F. Ristine, Twenty-first United States Infantry—both officers showing by their presence great professional zeal, and giving material help wherever opportunity offered.

It would certainly be in every way desirable to have present in our future Camps of Instruction, by special invitation as guests of the State, a number of officers of the regular establishment; and if a body, however small, of regular troops be ordered into camp with our organized militia, the results would prove of greatest benefit. The practical manner in which things are done by professional soldiers, both officers and men, as well as the unwritten customs of the service exemplified, are emulated by the civilian soldier, and form an instructive object-lesson unquestionably of highest value.

STRENGTH IN CAMP.

The total aggregate strength in camp was 169 officers, 1,922 enlisted men, 157 cooks and servants—total, 2,248. A general return is attached, marked "Appendix 'D'."

TECHNICAL WORK.

Special attention was given primarily in this Encampment to camp sanitation, and material improvements in sanitary conditions were reported by all inspecting officers. Attention is called in this connection to the report of the Assistant Inspector-General, and to that of Major Fred R. Charlton, Surgeon Second Infantry, the latter report being attached to Report No. 6, marked "Appendix 'I'."

As stated above, drill space inside the camp grounds was limited, and drill hours were devoted chiefly to extended order practice by companies and battalions, and instruction in guard duty. A large number of raw recruits were brought to camp as an experiment, under special permission granted in G. O. No. 3, these headquarters, as were also several newly organized companies. These required elementary instruction and drill in close order, but as they devoted their entire time to the work for the first days in camp, under most zealous and strenuous taskmasters, the results were really remarkable, and at the end of the tour it would have been difficult to distinguish some of the new troops from the veterans. It demonstrated again the fact that a thorough camp tour of ten days is more practically instructive than a year at home stations. In permitting recruits to attend camp the risk is run of men enlisting only for the tour and deserting thereafter. But it appears from reports of all officers that camp work arouses military ardor, and that this camp in particular awakened a great deal of enthusiasm. All officers express satisfaction that this camp was the best ever held. This was undoubtedly due to the more advanced work planned and put into execution, consisting chiefly of outpost duty and field exercises in attack and defense, outside the limits of the camp grounds.

Not an unimportant part of the instruction at this camp were several papers read and addresses delivered to the corps of officers, and to portions of the command. The comment of Colonel Wagner on the tactical exercise has been mentioned. Captain Winship read an interesting paper and Captain Ridenour gave the officers the benefit of his professional observations in camp. His Excellency, the Governor and Commander-in-chief, Winfield T. Durbin, addressed the assembled officers, and on July 31, at evening parade of the First Infantry, ordered Company E, First Infantry, of Evansville, out of the ranks and delivered to them a highly commendatory and patriotic address, complimenting them on their soldierly behavior on occasion of the recent attack of a lynching mob on the Evansville jail. The full text of this address has been published.

The presence in person of the Governor and members of his personal staff, and the direct interest manifested in the work of the guard, particularly in the tactical exercises, was the subject of much appreciative comment among officers and men, and no doubt had an encouraging effect on the service.

TACTICAL EXERCISES.

On Wednesday, July 29, immediately after breakfast, the Second Infantry marched out of camp into the wooded pastures west of the Fair Grounds, and spent the day in formation of outposts, incidentally bivouacking in the open. On the same day the light batteries of the Artillery Battalion worked out a few minor tactical problems of their own, the Battalion Commander, Major Frank E. Stevenson, acting as umpire in a little triangular fight. This was excellent practice for horses and men, but the foot-battery "C," Captain James L. Glascock, armed with two-pounder Hotchkiss mountain guns, moved by drags, showed by its greater mobility and comparative independence of topographic difficulties, its greater superiority in a short-range contest.

On July 31, shortly after noon, the general "call to arms" was sounded without warning, and upon regimental and artillery commanders reporting, they received quick orders for an immediate sortie from camp to repel an imaginary attack from the west, north and east, simultaneously. One field battery was assigned to each regiment commander. The Second Infantry was ordered to the west; the First Infantry to the east; and the Third Infantry to the north. All troops left camp in double time, and after allowing a few minutes for formations, the Commanding General accompanied by members of his staff and Captain Winship inspected the dispositions on all sides, making such criticisms and suggestions as appeared necessary. The exercise was very well executed, and showed a very satisfactory condition of preparedness. The troops were directed to remain out the rest of the afternoon after the conclusion of this exercise, assembling and deploying in new positions and under newly assumed conditions, estimating ranges, etc., thus securing the benefit of very valuable and interesting application of theoretical tactical principles studied at home stations.

EXERCISE OF AUGUST 1.

The references in this brief report of the tactical exercise of August 1, 1903, are to a sketch map, of which a copy is attached, marked "Appendix 'E'." The contour lines indicated roughly on this map are merely suggestions of the topography defined by water courses, and not supposed to be geometrically accurate.

The exercise was not in the nature of a carefully planned problem, but rather the result of indefinite intentions entertained for some time. It had been hoped that the condition of the troops as to preliminary work might prove to be such as to justify an exercise on a larger scale, and the first few days of camp proved that the majority of the forces were ready for an experiment of the kind. The arrival of Colonel Wagner caused these rather vague ideas to crystallize, and the problem was designed and its execution ordered at a moment's notice. The recent action of the Government in obtaining options for an army post site offered a favorable terrain, and so all conditions conspired to make the exercise a reality. The test of the troops was therefore all the more severe, as nothing of the kind was expected, and no form of preparation could have been made. The Commanding General and several officers of the Second Infantry were somewhat familiar with the lay of the land, but all other officers had never seen the site of the new post.

The orders for the exercise were verbal, very informal and general, and very simple.

The Third Infantry, Lieutenant-Colonel Stephen A. Bowman commanding, with two field pieces of Battery B under Captain Wm. Cleary, was ordered to march out at 1:00 a. m. August 1, via Allisonville road to Millersville; thence east along the southern boundary of the reservation (22, 21, 20) to "19"; thence northward in the direction 15, 14, 13, which road is near the east boundary of the post and on a high plateau; thence Colonel Bowman was to move westward and assume a defensive position in preparation for a probable attack from the west, south, or possibly north or northeast.

The attacking force under Colonel Harry B. Smith, consisting of the Second Infantry, First Infantry, two field pieces of Battery A under First Lieutenant W. W. Heiskell, and three two-pounder Hotchkiss guns of Battery C under Capt. James L. Glascock, was ordered to leave camp at 3:00 a. m. August 1, moving to Millersville via the Millersville Pike, and thence eastward via the Fall Creek and Mud Creek Free Gravel Road, as in an enemy's country, to find the enemy and attack him where found. All troops were ordered out in heavy marching order with one day's cooked rations and canteens filled with coffee. The distance to be marched was about eight miles for the defensive force. The attacking force under the plan of attack employed involved an outward march of about ten miles and eight miles returning.

The defensive force was naturally at a disadvantage through disparity of numbers and two hours less rest before starting, but had the advantage of selecting strong positions and disguising its whereabouts. The attacking force on the other hand, had over twice the strength, but encountered the task of finding the enemy and attacking supposedly strong defensive positions.

It was to be regretted that both bodies had to be uniformed alike, as it caused some confusion, and made the securing of information unfairly easy. Some of the scouts of the attacking force were thus enabled to penetrate the lines of the defense and return with complete information of Col. Bowman's dispositions.

The troops marched out promptly at the designated hours, but Col. Bowman's column by mistake took the Millersville instead of the Allisonville gravel road, thus leaving traces for the information of the body following later. However, this was not a serious matter. Col. Bowman's column reached "14" at 4:30 a. m. and thence moved westward toward the Spees house, the right of the main body resting on the wooded ravine north of the Spees house. The two guns of Cleary's battery were stationed immediately west of the Spees house behind the knoll, in readiness for action toward the northwest and southwest. Col. Bowman anticipated the principal attack from the west and southwest, and sent forward Major Harrison's and Feaser's battalions to establish a line of observation on the hills to the east and south of the defile marked "16" and commanding the valley of the branch creek flowing north into Fall Creek. A line of supports was established further back. Major Kuhlman's battalion was kept in reserve near the Spees house and his scouts were sent out to the northeastward toward the Yandes and Roberts' houses. High trees and the roofs of the several houses were occupied by look-outs, who unfortunately proved also conspicuous to the attacking force. Major Harrison's men crossed the road near the schoolhouse, and there was thus a rather thin but almost complete cordon of observation clear around Col. Bowman's position.

Meanwhile Col. Smith's column had reached "5" via "1" and "4" and there Col. Geo. W. McCoy was detached with one battalion of the 1st Infantry and two Hotchkiss guns to move southeast, seize and cross Baker's Bridge, and proceed via "18" to the hills east of the Baker house, then deploy toward the McKibben and Reddick houses, sending scouts well ahead to seek contact with the enemy. Col. McCoy sent his artillery via "17" to "16," there to be ready to co-operate when the attack developed. Col. McCoy's orders were to make all his dispositions, find touch, but not to advance until signaled by Col. Smith, by two guns fired in rapid succession. The signal was not heard so as to be recognized, but this feint attack was made in time to accomplish its purpose.

After detaching Col. McCoy, the rest of Col. Smith's column marched with advance guard, and flanks well protected, as well as a guard on the wagon train, via the Fall Creek and Mud Creeek Gravel roads (6, 7, 8, 10) to "11," the New Kirk Ford, which was crossed to "12," where the wagon train was left under guard. The column then deployed across the fields southwest, from the S. M. Kimberlain house, information having meanwhile been obtained by detached scouts and spies, of the position of the enemy behind the woods north of Spees's. Col. Smith posted his two field guns south of the S. M. Kimberlain house, and fired in the direction of the enemy, partly as a signal to Col. McCoy and partly to develop Col. Bowman's artillery position. Both these purposes failed. Anticipating that Col. McCoy's feint attack on the west must now develop, Col. Smith rapidly advanced his lines across the open from 13 southwest across the plateau. The Hotchkiss with this column was posted on the turn of the road southwest of the Wheeler house, and the two field pieces came into action just west of the Thomas house behind two haystacks, whence they commanded Col. Bowman's artillery position, but in turn were exposed to the fire of one of Cleary's guns.

5:20 a. m. August 1, and rode to Millersville, where Col. Wagner accompanied by Lieut. Guy A. Boyle, left to overtake and accompany Col. Smith's main column on the Fall Creek and Mud Creek gravel road. The rest of the party turned southeastward and followed the route of Col. Bowman's force. A rapid ride brought the party to "15" at 6:30 a. m. whence one of Col. Bowman's lookouts was discovered on the roof of the barn south of the Spees house, thus disclosing the defensive positions. Col. Bowman's dispositions were then found as above described. Capt. Winship remained with this force as umpire. The enemy had not then been developed.

The ride of inspection was continued via "14," "13" to "17," thence to "16," the arrival there being just after firing had been heard from the direction of "12," and Col. McCoy's force opened up the attack on the west. Two-thirds of Col. Bowman's strength occupied the heights to the east and south of "16," outnumbering Col. McCoy's force, and making it impossible for the latter to carry their positions. Capt. Glascock's Hotchkiss guns were rushed in from "17" to "16" along the road, and one piece was put out of action while unlimbering under fire in the open road. The other piece was dragged up the slope east of "16," coming into action toward the southeast and although screened, yet was in a very precarious position. The umpire pronounced the attack on this front a failure in every respect, as, in fact, it was expected to be.

The feint accomplished its end, for the greater portion of Col. Bowman's force was drawn away in that direction, giving Col. Smith's main body time to envelop Col. Bowman's base position in the face of weak opposition. Major Kuhlman's battalion held a strong position on the southeast of the ravine, but his lines did not extend far enough to the eastward, nor did it occupy the outer edge of the woods toward "13." If he had had adequate force to make such occupation Col. Smith's advance across the open would have been extremely hazardous. As it was the two battalions of the 1st Infantry under Major Coulter and Coleman, forming Smith's left, outflanked Kuhlman's position, and enveloped its right and rear from the Thomas house to "14" and as far as "15."

"Cease firing" was sounded at 9:30 a. m., by which time the positions were as shown on the map. All further information is given in the reports of subordinate commanders. In view of the attached observations of Col. Wagner, further comment would be superfluous.

In conclusion it may be said that close application is necessary on the part of every officer of the guard, and a purpose to come as closely as possible to professional perfection—a very high ideal, which may not be attainable, but at least approachable. The right enthusiasm on the part of officers will imbue the rank and file with the proper spirit. Recent national legislation associates the organized militia more closely in a professional sense with the regular establishment, and the purpose of the guard should be at all times to be entirely worthy of such association.

Very respectfully,

WILL J. McKEE,
Brigadier-General Commanding I. N. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "A."

HEADQUARTERS, INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
GENERAL ORDERS, INDIANAPOLIS, July 18, 1903.
No. 3, 1903.

I. The annual Camp of Instruction for 1903 will be held at the State Fair Grounds near Indianapolis, from July 26th inst. to August 3d, prox., both dates inclusive; troops being routed from home stations so as to arrive in the early hours of the morning of the 26th inst.

II. The attention of subordinate commanders is called to the requirements of Paragraph 388, Rules and Regulations, which must be complied with prior to date set for the annual camp.

III. The following clothing and equipment in addition to arms and accoutrements is prescribed for camp, viz., regulation blue blouse and trousers, campaign hat, leggings, dark blue flannel shirt, blanket, blanket bag (shelter halves where issued), canteen, haversack, meat can, knife, fork, spoon, tin cup, poncho, two suits underclothing, strong shoes, two pair socks, towel and toilet articles. In addition, boxes of cleaning material and field desks will be brought. Property and clothing, including spare ordnance and ordnance stores not specified to be brought to camp, will be left in armories, carefully secured from damage, or loss by theft.

IV. Company Commanders are authorized to bring to camp all regularly enlisted men, irrespective of date of enlistment, conditional upon the several men being uniformed, armed and equipped and sufficiently instructed to take their places in ranks.

V. Field ranges, mess and table ware for use during the encampment will be issued each command for temporary use upon proper requisition, upon arrival in camp, the same to be turned back on completion of tour.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieutenant-Colonel and A. A. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "C."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 21, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 4, 1903.

I. The following hours of service are prescribed during the annual Camp of Instruction, 1903:

Reveille	5:30 a. m.
Mess call	6:00 a. m.
Sick call	6:30 a. m.
Fatigue	6:35 a. m.
Drill call	7:00 a. m.
Recall	7:45 a. m.
Guard mounting	8:15 a. m.
Drill call	9:30 a. m.
Recall	11:00 a. m.
First Sergeant's call	11:30 a. m.
Mess call	12:00 m.
School call	1:15 p. m.
Drill call	2:50 p. m.
Recall	4:15 p. m.
Mess call	5:45 p. m.
Regimental parade	6:15 p. m.

Issues	7:00 p. m.
School call	8:00 p. m.
Tattoo	9:30 p. m.
Taps	10:15 p. m.

Only the minimum time necessary will be allowed between drill calls and signals for formations.

II. Company morning reports will be sent to Regimental Headquarters by 8 o'clock a. m. Consolidated regimental reports accompanied by guard reports and all reports of roll calls, to and including the morning reveille roll, will be sent to Camp Headquarters by 12 o'clock m. daily. All company morning reports and company and regimental daily sick report books will be sent to Camp Headquarters with regimental reports on Monday, August 3d proximo.

III. Regimental commanders will see that no officer or man is absent from any drill or duty, except upon Surgeon's orders, and will detail an officer to verify the number paraded for each drill with the number reported in camp.

IV. Regimental Commanders will designate a police officer and a police sergeant, who will be responsible for the policing of the camp; relieving the officer of the day of this duty and allowing him to devote his entire time and attention to his guard. The officer of the day in each camp must be required to make every effort to increase the efficiency of officers and men in the matter of guard duty. Officers of the day will visit their guards at least every two hours during the day time and at night will make the rounds of the entire chain of sentinels, visiting every one at least three times—once between dark and taps and twice between taps and reveille. In making the rounds each sentinel will be minutely questioned as to his duties and orders, and careful instruction given wherever necessary. The old guard relieved in the morning will return to duty at 6 o'clock p. m. same day. On the front of each camp the posts of sentinels of camp guards must be outside the line of sinks and no sentinel permitted to make an enlisted man leave any article of clothing or equipment when crossing his post, as a guarantee of return or for any other purpose.

V. Subordinate commanders will see that kitchens are so located as to avoid injury to trees and not to endanger any building. No animal or picket rope will be hitched or fastened to any tree or fence, or to any building or permanent improvement other than in the designated barns; nor will any rails or lumber be used for firewood. Waste water from hydrants will be drained off, so as to prevent forming of mud holes. Refuse from corrals and barns will be hauled daily to a designated place beyond the camp limits. Garbage will be kept separated from fluids, in barrels furnished for the purpose by the Quartermaster's Department, and will be removed at stated intervals by the contractor. Dishwater and other liquid waste will be thrown in kitchen trenches, and every care taken to keep kitchen surroundings clean.

VI. Horses provided by the State will not be used by others than those to whom allotted or taken outside the limits of the Fair Grounds except under orders. Strikers and orderlies will not be permitted to ride officers' mounts except to and from the stables, and then must not move faster than a walk.

VII. Battalion Commanders will personally supervise all company drills of their respective commands and Company Commanders will do the same over their squad drills. Particular attention will be devoted to instruction in extended order and fire discipline, such instruction being limited only by the available ground. Such instruction as is possible under the surroundings will also be given in outpost duty.

VIII. Officers and men are prohibited from trespassing on the race-tracks except to cross to and from drills and parade, and only at the designated crossings, and commanding officers will see that the speed-ways are blocked as little as possible. Bodies of troops arriving at a crossing simultaneonsly will take precedence in order of seniority of commanding officers. In the event of rain, commanding officers will see that the mats, provided for the purpose, are down before the troops are marched across while the tracks are soft.

IX. No passes will be given to go to the city. All officers and men other than those on special details, found in the city will be subject to arrest.

X. Details for duty on Headquarters guard will be made of old and experienced men, those who have seen service in the army so far as possible. Adjutants mounting the several guards will be held responsible for selection of men for this duty.

XI. Regimental Commanders and the Commanding Officer of the Artillery Battalion will establish summary courts immediately upon arrival in camp, and will see that all offenders are tried and punished, sentences duly carried out and certified to subordinate commanders, who will see that all fines and forfeitures are duly charged on camp pay-rolls.

XII. Campaign hats will be worn in their original shape, a lateral crease in the crown only being permitted. On drill and on guard Regimental Commanders may authorize the leaving off of the blouse; but when this is done it must be uniform throughout the command, and no suspenders worn outside the shirt, which must be the regulation blue flannel. Officers appearing on duty without the blouse will wear the insignia of rank on the collar of the shirt, and non-commissioned officers the prescribed chevrons on the sleeves of same.

XIII. Within fifteen (15) days after the close of the camp, Regimental and Battalion Commanders will submit full reports of the tour of duty, making such recommendations as their several experiences may have shown to be desirable for the betterment of the service. All officers of the Headquarters Staff, the Surgeon in charge of the Hospital Corps and the Commanding Officer of the Signal Corps will submit similar reports within the same time.

XIV. The following detail of bands for duty at the lowering of the Headquarters colors is made, and the several bands with the field music of the respective regiments will report at Camp Headquarters immediately after parade on the designated evenings, marching to the flag staff as the battalions are marched back to their camps, viz.:

Sunday, 26th inst., First Infantry.
Monday, 27th inst., Second Infantry.
Tuesday, 28th inst., Third Infantry.
Wednesday, 29th inst., Artillery.

Thursday, 30th inst., First Infantry.
Friday, 31st inst., Second Infantry.
Saturday, 1st prox., Third Infantry.
Sunday, 2d prox., Artillery.

The Adjutants in charge of the several bands will hold the same in readiness on the same evenings to furnish such music as may be desired by the Commanding General.

XV. The strictest discipline compatible with the service will be maintained throughout the tour of duty, and subordinate commanders are charged with the enforcement to the letter of all the laws, rules and regulations of the State, exacting the fullest compliance with military customs and usage. All offenders, of whatever rank, must have charges filed against them, and the same duly tried if investigation shows they can be substantiated. Any officer failing to file charges for any offense coming under his notice, will himself be liable to charges.

XVI. Blankets will be issued upon arrival in camp on the basis of one to each officer and man in attendance, and will be taken up on their returns by the several responsible officers and accounted for the same as other State property. In this connection the attention of Company Commanders is called to the provisions of Sections 28 and 30 of the Military Laws of the State and Article LXVII of the Rules and Regulations. Particular attention must be paid by all officers at all times that individual property rights are respected by all, and every man's equipment must be safe from molestation by another. The tendency to make good shortages at the expense of others must be stopped in all possible ways.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieut-Col. and A. A. G

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "F."

COMMENT OF COL. ARTHUR L. WAGNER, U. S. A., ON THE TACTICAL EXERCISES OF THE INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD, AUGUST 1, 1903.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, STATE FAIR GROUNDS,
NEAR INDIANAPOLIS, August 1, 1903.

The tactical exercises today were as follows:

A force under Colonel Bowman, consisting of the Third Infantry and two field guns, were directed to leave camp at 1:00 a. m. marching via Allisonville road and thence via Millersville, and so to the point on the southeastern part of the Government reservation, where he was directed to take up a defensive position with the view of repelling an attack if made from the west or north, or possibly both directions.

Another force under Colonel Smith, Second Infantry, I. N. G., consisting of the First and Second Infantry, two field guns and three Hotchkiss guns, was directed to leave camp at 3:00 a. m. and proceed via Howlands P. O., Millersville and the Fall Creek and Mud Creek gravel roads to the northwestern part of the Government reservation; and thence to make dispositions for attacking the enemy according to the position in which he might be found and the nature of the terrain.

The force under Colonel Bowman left camp at 1:17 a. m., taking up a defensive position in accordance with the instructions given. The opposing force left camp at 3:00 a. m. in accordance with the orders it had received.

The disposition of Colonel Bowman's force was as follows:

The two guns were placed in front of the intersection of two roads in the southeasterly part of the Government reservation, two companies on the right of the guns being placed so as to face towards the east. A battalion was placed on the left to oppose an attack that might be made from the direction of the road marking the western boundary of the reservation, and the remainder of the force consisting of six companies being extended in front of the guns. The front was covered by scouts in observation.

When Colonel Smith's command had arrived at the ford where Fall Creek is crossed by the western boundary line of the Government reservation, he detached one battalion and two guns under Colonel McCoy, with orders to observe the enemy and to open fire and move forward to the attack as soon as he should hear the cannonading from the main body of Colonel Smith's command. The terrain at this point of the field is thickly wooded and is impassible for artillery except by the roads. The outpost was established about 450 yards to the front in a position where it did not have a good view of the front. This position was doubtless as good as any that was available, but persistent patrolling should have been carried on further to the front, which does not seem to have been done.

Colonel Smith proceeded with the remainder of his force to the northeast corner of the reservation, where he crossed the ford and moved to the south along the road marking the eastern boundary of the reservation. When he had advanced to a farm house about a half mile beyond the ford he deployed his command for action, having in the meantime sent forward scouts to observe and locate the enemy. In the dispositions made by Colonel Smith, one battalion moved in a southwesterly direction towards the enemy, one company being echeloned to the right, one battalion on the left with another in support echeloned on its left in a cornfield. Two battalions formed a second line at proper supporting distance, each with a company echeloned to its front on its outer flank, one company being detached to guard the wagon train in the rear.

Contact with the enemy was first begun at 7:35 a. m. The two field guns were promptly pushed forward to a position about 1,500 yards from the enemy, and the infantry advanced across the field and down the road marking the eastern boundary of the reservation with the view of turning the flank of the enemy. The advance was made cautiously but steadily. Under the effect of the artillery fire of Colonel Smith's command, the gun with which Colonel Bowman had opened fire was quickly placed out of action. One of the Hotchkiss guns of Colonel Smith's command was pushed well to the front, but under actual battle conditions it would probably have speedily been knocked out by the infantry fire of the enemy to which it was subjected. As soon as Colonel McCoy heard the cannonading on his left he at once effected his deployment in good order at a sufficient distance from the enemy. The general direction of the advance was well kept. The position was discovered by scouts when about 300 yards of the enemy's outposts. Owing to the nature of the ground, the first engagement took place at a range of about 400 yards. The fire was here effective and the cover good. The infantry finally advanced to the road about 125 yards from the enemy, when action was suspended by the umpire at that part of the line. One of McCoy's guns was posted in the road. The first position of this gun was poor, as but one small detachment of the enemy had been located. This gun was soon exposed to infantry fire at about 300 yards, and was accordingly ruled out of action. It had no infantry support. The second gun was in good position, but after the advance it was ruled out of action because of the heavy infantry fire to which it was subjected at 125 yards range. No adequate effort seems to have been made to utilize natural cover for the guns.

The action on the eastern part of the field was suspended at 9:50 a. m.

The following errors are noted: The instructions given to Colonel McCoy to open fire at the sound of the cannonading from the main body were not satisfactory. Many instances have occurred in actual warfare where simultaneous action of detached commands was supposed to begin at such a signal of sound, but in the majority of cases the plan has miscarried. If the enemy had opened fire on his right before Colonel Smith was ready for the combined movement, the attack of Colonel McCoy would have been precipitated. In fact, Colonel McCoy's command was completely detached from the main command under Colonel Smith. The only communication provided was by means of mounted courier. The distance to be traversed was about five miles. Allowing no time for the dictation of orders, but supposing the courier to have started on his return as soon as he reached Colonel Smith, forty minutes would have elapsed before Colonel McCoy could have transmitted news to his commander and received orders in return. That the plan worked out well was due to a degree of good luck that could not ordinarily be expected. There was very little danger in detaching Colonel McCoy's force, as this force being on the defensive could probably have held the entire force of the enemy in check for so long a time as to enable assistance to be sent to it, but it is always dangerous to count on concerted action on the part of two completely separated forces. Considerable confusion was noticed in the deployment of Colonel Smith's command near the farm house. This was evidently due to the lack of experience on the part of the battalion commanders in making deployments under assumed conditions of battle. It was also observed that but little advantage was taken of natural cover when the detachments were moved forward. The men seemed to think that by stooping over they were availing themselves in some degree of shelter, but in most cases this would have merely retarded their advance without any appreciable diminution of the danger to which they were subjected. It would have been much better if they had run forward rapidly for short distances and then thrown themselves flat on the ground, or availed themselves of such shelter as the folds of the ground might offer. The Artillery Officer in command of Colonel Smith's field guns erroneously gave the signal that he was firing on artillery on an occasion when he should have indicated that he was firing on infantry. The Sergeant in charge of the Hotchkiss gun sent forward in advance was not provided with the necessary flags to mark the object of his fire.

The artillery position selected by Colonel Bowman was not a good one, as it did not command a sufficient view and field of fire to the front. A slight elevation of ground a short distance to the front would have given him a position where he could have obtained some natural shelter for his guns, and at the same time could have swept the ground well to his front. It is also noted that he had not before the opening of the engagement established such communication between the different parts of his command as to insure his being promptly informed of occurrences at the different parts of his line.

I have discussed these errors frankly. The exercise in the main was surprisingly well conducted. The plans of Colonel Smith especially were, with the exceptions noted, well conceived and executed. There is no attempt made to decide which force won the victory. There are so many instances in warfare of the effect of fire from one side or the other, being astonishingly heavy or surprisingly light, that without the actual use of bullets it is hard to determine whether an attack at a given point would fail or succeed. I notice particularly the earnestness of the officers and the ready obedience of the men. It was a war exercise, and I was delighted to see that there was no sham battle nonsense about it. I understand that this is the first exercise of the kind that the Indiana National Guard ever had. Under the circumstances, while its execution was not free from errors, the exercises were in the main successful to a most gratifying degree, and individually I am very highly pleased with it. I have never seen a tactical exercise under the assumed conditions of war by any troops that was absolutely free from error, and I never expect to see such an exercise.

REPORT No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT INSPECTOR-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 14, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to respectfully submit the following report of the Indiana National Guard at its Camp of Instruction, July 26 to August 3, 1903.

CAMP.

The Camp was laid out with as much regularity as the conformation of the ground and its limited area would permit. The order in Camp was good; the policing was good; the extended order drills were very good; guard duty was fair, and improved as the Camp progressed. Close order drills and guard mounting were fair. Military courtesy was more marked than in previous Camps, which indicates better discipline. All things considered, it was, without doubt, the most successful and profitable Camp in the history of the Indiana National Guard.

ATTENDANCE.

The general average attendance of this encampment was the best within the last three years.

In 1901 the attendance was about 77 per cent.
In 1902 the attendance was about 72 per cent.
In 1903 the attendance was about 81 per cent.

The First Regiment had the largest general average attendance by companies—about 53½.

The Second Infantry had the smallest general average attendance by companies—about 40.

The Third Infantry had a general average attendance by companies of—about 47.

The Artillery had a general average attendance by companies of—about 50.

The companies report the following percentage of attendance at weekly drills at their home stations:

The First Regiment, 68 per cent.
The Second Regiment, 51½ per cent.
The Third Regiment, 65½ per cent.
The Artillery, 77½ per cent.

This percentage I believe to be reported too high, as it is more than their semi-annual pay rolls indicate.

NEW MEN IN CAMP.

About 400 of the men that were in camp were newly enlisted. The bringing of new men to camp was an experiment not heretofore tried. The fact that the Guard is an elementary school, and the results obtained this time, I think justified the wisdom of the Commanding General in suspending Section 875 Rules and Regulations. The new men probably learned more in ten days' camp than in a whole year at home stations.

HOSPITAL.

The Brigade Surgeon reported a daily general average during the encampment of 17 patients in the Brigade Hospital, no cases with a serious tendency. The principal ailments were sore feet, cramps and bowel troubles, due to careless eating, foraging for green apples and wild berries in route marches and bivouac. The men received good attention from competent surgeons and hospital stewards—the latter all being either practicing physicians or medical students who have had three years in college.

SANITATION.

The experiment first made in this camp of filling sinks with straw, then saturating it with oil and burning them out, was considered a success by the surgeons, and this method should be continued. I recommend that the latrines in future be built in double compartments, with a long sheet-iron urinal trough at the rear, arranged to empty into the same pit as the faeces, all inclosed. As constructed during this encampment, it is impossible to prevent the men from using the ground within the inclosure for urinal purposes.

Where water-works connections are on the grounds it would be advisable to construct shower baths during the camp, which convenience would add materially to the cleanliness, health and comfort of the men.

It was observed that many of the enlisted men were inadequately shod for marching purposes, and much suffering from sore and blistered feet was the consequence. If some provision could be made insuring proper footgear, and instructions given on care of the feet by company commanders under the advice of surgeons, much trouble of this kind could be avoided.

RATIONS.

The rations were of good quality, but a little short—though this shortage no doubt was due more or less to wastefulness, and to the fact that men will eat abnormally the first few days in camp. Less knowledge was shown in companies about rations and subsisting the men than any other subjects. Many of the Quartermaster-Sergeants were utterly ignorant as to the amount of the ration, or whether their companies received what they were entitled to. When the rations were received they were usually turned over to the cooks to use as their whims dictated. In hardly any of the companies was any organized attention given to the daily apportionment of rations. There seemed to be an abiding faith on the part of those responsible that they would somehow get more when they ran out. That such ignorant and slipshod methods did not produce serious complaint and disturbance, was due to good cooks and an excellent Chief Commissary. It is not fair, however, for responsible line officers to unload their responsibilities on the latter officer, for the science of subsistence is an essential part of the soldier's training, and one of the most important branches of military science. Regimental and Battalion Commissaries and all line officers should acquire thorough practical knowledge of this branch and instruct their Quartermaster-Sergeants.

TENTAGE.

Many of the tents were found unserviceable, and it is recommended that all such be condemned.

RECORDS IN CAMP.

Regimental books were all in Camp and seemed to be well kept. Few of the companies, however, had all their books in Camp. Inquiry appeared to indicate that the books and records were well kept at home stations, except the record of the Council of Administration. I find that some companies have had no meetings of the company council for over a year; for example: Company C, Third Infantry; Company M, Second Infantry; Company K, Third Infantry; Company M, Third Infantry; Battery A, Artillery. This condition is reprehensible and should not be allowed to continue. All company commanders should be required to bring their company books and records to the Camp in their field desks. It is absolutely necessary to carry these records and documents in campaigns and in camps of instruction, and is as much part of field practice as any other duty.

GUNS.

The guns in all organizations were in fair to bad condition—none of them perfect. Some companies in all the regiments have kept them fairly well, while the guns of other companies were very rusty. All the Springfield rifles should be cleaned and oiled before being turned in for exchange for the Krag.

GALLERY AND TARGET PRACTICE.

Investigation discloses that gallery and target practice have been badly neglected. Only nine (9) companies in the whole brigade report any gallery practice—two in the First, five in the Second, and two in the Third.

Only five companies in the whole brigade report any traget practice —three companies, three days each, in the First Regiment; one company, three days, in the Second; one company, three days, in the Third.

Target practice is the most important branch of the service. What good is a soldier if he can not shoot accurately? He must have confidence in his ability to wound and kill, or he will run away from the enemy.

I recommend that two substantial trophies be put up—one to be held by the company that makes the best score in target practice during the year, the other to be held by the individual guardsman who makes the best score at target practice during the year. The latter to be competed for by both officers and men of the Guard. The award to be made during each encampment. These trophies to be held a year at a time by the company and guardsman winning them.

I have the honor to attach hereto (Report No. 2, Appendix "D") special report as Provost during this Camp of Instruction.

Very respectfully,

JOHN T. BARNETT,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 2. APPENDIX "G."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 6, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to respectfully submit the following report in accordance with Section 684, Rules and Regulations, I. N. G.

I was detailed as Provost Marshal by the Commanding General I. N. G., July 26, 1903, and remained in that position during the entire encampment. I had charge of the provost guard during said time.

The guard performed its duties in a satisfactory manner, except on Monday, July 27, a sentinel at the roadhouse and one of the officers of the guard became derelict in their duties. We arrested comparatively few soldiers. All were arrested for being outside of camp limits without a pass. Saturday and Sunday nights we had to relieve a number of the guards. They seemed to fag out easily and have sore feet from the march and battle exercises Friday. We had more prisoners (16) Monday morning, August 3, than all the rest of the camp put together. All prisoners, during the camp, were turned over to their Regimental Commanders the next morning, with proper charges preferred for trial.

Monday morning, August 3, the guard arrested a civilian with a State blanket in his possession. An examination disclosed a doubt as to his intent to steal it, and he was turned loose. The camp was patrolled nightly about 11 o'clock and in daytime when necessary.

The camp was orderly throughout. From reports received comparatively few soldiers were down town, or outside of camp limits.

Very respectfully,

JOHN T. BARNETT,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General, I. N. G., Provost.

REPORT No. 3.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 15, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General:

Pursuant to Paragraph XIII, G. O. No. 4, 1903, Headquarters I. N. G., I have the honor to submit the following report of the tour of duty covering the Camp of Instruction, July 26 to August 3, 1903.

Camp equipage and supplies were issued to your Quartermaster at the State's depot in the basement of the State House on Monday, July 20. Ample help had been engaged and transportation to depot at Fair Ground was completed quickly and most satisfactorily.

When the Regimental and Battalion Quartermasters reported to your Chief Quartermaster on the morning of the 25th, supplies based on an estimated strength of six hundred to the regiment were invoiced and ready for issue. Some little delay was caused by a shortage of wheel transportation, owing to an apparent conflict of orders. This, however, was soon remedied, and by 2:30 in the afternoon of the 25th all of the first issue had been transported to regimental camps.

Supplemental issues were made as soon as Regimental Quartermasters could make requisition based upon men actually in camp.

Serious complaint was made to your Quartermaster upon but two points, viz., a shortage of blankets by the time the issue reached the enlisted men and dissatisfaction with management of public mounts.

The State issued 2,315 blankets for use of troops and civilian employes. This issue made necessary strict compliance with the order prescribing issue of one blanket to each officer and man. Regimental and Battalion Quartermasters were inclined to hold up blankets to cover emergencies and the demands of the different headquarters, with the result that the first night some complaint was made by company commanders of an insufficient issue. Any specific and just complaint was taken up by your Quartermaster and the cause removed by insisting upon a strict compliance with the letter of the order governing this issue.

In complying with Paragraph XVI, G. O. No. 4, 1903, Headquarters I. N. G., governing the transfer of blankets to accountable officers, your Quartermaster broadly construed the same as not requiring the transfer for the different headquarters and bands, but only to Company Commanders who alone have any facilities for caring for property. This including of blankets among the permanent equipage of the companies will go far toward avoiding any cause for the recurrence of complaint of a shortage of blankets in any future camp.

The complaint concerning officers' mounts is an annual one, and was much less general than heretofore. The horses furnished by the contractor were as good as can be gotten under such a system. The principal cause of complaint upon the part of the officers was the substitution of horses for the ones issued them. The contractor made continual complaint of the usage given his cattle, principally by servants and enlisted men, who, in violation of orders issued from your office, did much racing back and forth between camp and stables. The inability of the contractor's employes to locate the officers responsible for each mount made it impossible to put a stop to this practice in many cases.

Your Quartermaster would respectfully recommend that in future mobilizations a stable sergeant be detailed by each organization to direct the work of the stable employes and to be immediately in charge of the mounts issued to such organization.

The team horses furnished the Artillery Battalion were very satisfactory. In this connection your Quartermaster begs permission to call attention to the fact that but few of the men of the mounted batteries have any knowledge of the care and management of horses, and theoretical instruction, at least, along such lines would not only be of benefit to the service, but would make it possible to obtain the use of the same animals upon successive occasions.

In returning supplies to the State depot at the close of the tour of duty, the work was not as satisfactory as in the removal therefrom. A delay in obtaining cars from the street car company caused an unfortunate condition at the camp grounds. Equipage was piled upon the depot platform when night fell, awaiting transportation. But two alternatives offered—either to haul it back under shelter again, or take them in to the State House after night. After consulting with the Quartermaster-General's office the latter course was adopted. Lack of light and other facilities, and the condition of the men after a hard day's work caused some confusion, and the supplies were not turned in in as good condition as might be desired.

In conclusion, your Quartermaster begs permission to state that he was personally far from being satisfied with the work of his department during this tour. For this, circumstances seemingly beyond his control were largely responsible. He asks that final judgment be suspended until another occasion demonstrates that he can not improve upon the results obtained from this tour of duty.

Very respectfully,

CARROLL B. CARR,
Major, I. N. G., Chief Quartermaster.

REPORT No. 4.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE CHIEF COMMISSARY OF SUBSISTENCE,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 14, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to General Orders No. 4, July 21, 1903, Headquarters I. N. G., I have the honor to submit the following report on matters relative to the Commissary Department during Camp of Instruction, July 26 to August 3, inclusive, near Indianapolis, Indiana.

The ration issued to the troops was similar in every respect to that issued to the regular army, and so far as was able to ascertain, was generally satisfactory both as to quality and quantity. In cases where there was any dissatisfaction the cause should be traced directly to the lack of knowledge or to indifference on the part of the company commanders or Quartermaster-Sergeants, as to the proper method of caring for and handling the rations issued to them.

For the practice march to the new Army Post, August 1, 1903, a travel ration consisting of corned beef and baked beans was issued upon requisition of the regimental, artillery battalion, and the hospital and signal corps commissary officers, and in such quantities as requested by them. In no case did this equal the government allowance, and the Third Infantry made no requisition. A personal interview with the commissary officer of the Third Infantry brought from him the statement that nothing further was needed, as they had plenty. The following table gives the amounts drawn by the various organizations, viz.:

	Corned Beef.	Baked Beans.	Fresh Beef
First Infantry	168 lbs.	60 lbs.	.....
Second Infantry	294 lbs.	103½ lbs.	.....
Third Infantry	.....	.....	.....
Artillery Battalion	63 lbs.	64¾ lbs.	.....
Hospital and Signal Corps	.....	.....	40 lbs.

Taken as a whole the Company Quartermaster-Sergeants took better care of the rations this year than in previous years. There is still room for a great deal of improvement, as the majority of them seem to have had little or no instruction, not realizing the responsibility resting on them regarding the care of rations. In view of the fact that Quartermaster-Sergeants have the opportunity to handle rations but once a year, it is suggested that they receive some instruction in the theoretical part of their duties by means of correspondence through this office. It seems possible by this means to have a more competent and better instructed corps of Quartermaster-Sergeants by the next Camp of Instruction.

The experiment tried this year of having the various Quartermaster and Commissary details arriving before the main body of troops, subsist themselves, seems to have been a decided success. Little or no friction occurred and no complaints were heard from any source by this department.

The issue of extra rations toward the close of camp was less than that of any of the previous three years, the Second Infantry being the only organization to make requisition for any additional subsistence. The following table gives the amounts issued through the regimental commissary officer to the various companies of that regiment:

Second Infantry.	Coffee.	Potatoes.
Staff, N. C. Staff and Band	2 lbs.	30 lbs.
Company "A"	.....	50 lbs.
Company "B"	3 lbs.	50 lbs.
Company "C"	.....	50 lbs.
Company "D"	.....	50 lbs.
Company "E"	3 lbs.	50 lbs.
Company "I"	3 lbs.	50 lbs.
Company "L"	3 lbs.	50 lbs.
Company "M"	3 lbs.	50 lbs.
	17 lbs.	430 lbs.

The Major-Surgeon of the Third Infantry condemned as unfit for use and had returned to this department a quantity of corned beef issued to that regiment. The corned beef so returned was at once submitted for inspection to the Inspector-General and Captain Pfaff, of the Hospital Corps, both of whom pronounced it perfectly good and wholesome. Captain Pfaff later made a microscopical examination of samples of the beef, and upon receipt of his written certificate (on file in office of A. A. G.) that the same was good, it was reissued to the Third Regiment, accepted, and used by them without further complaint.

The presence at camp of Captain Winship, of the U. S. Army, was much appreciated, and it is believed considerable benefit was derived from his inspection of the various messes and his talk and instructions to the various Company Quartermaster-Sergeants regarding their duties and responsibilities in the care of rations.

Taken as a whole, in matters relating to this department, the present Camp of Instruction showed considerable improvement over that of previous years.

Very respectfully,

W. H. KERSHNER,
Major and C. C. S., I. N. G.

REPORT No. 5.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
HOSPITAL CORPS, INDIANAPOLIS, August 7, 1903.

Brigadier-General W. J. McKee, Commanding Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to herein hand you a summary of the sick reports of the encampment just closed.

Reported sick.	Quarters (No duty).	Quarters (Light duty).	Duty.	Hospital.
First Regiment 159	78	49		302
Second Regiment 143	21	63	43	16
Third Regiment..... 168	12	21	132	3
Artillery Battalion 80	13	14	45	8

Brigade Hospital handled regimental sick as follows:

First Regiment.	Second Regiment.	Third Regiment.	Artillery Battalion.
30	16	3	8

In addition to the above the Brigade Hospital treated fifty men for minor complaints, about evenly distributed among the different regiments before their respective regimental hospitals were in order. These men were all returned to full duty.

Respectfully,

JOHN A. PFAFF,
Captain and Assistant Surgeon of Hospital Corps.

REPORT No. 6.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 18, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to General Orders No. 4 of the current series, Paragraph No. 13, the undersigned has the honor to report that he proceeded to the Camp of Instruction held at the State Fair Grounds, near Indianapolis, July 26 to August 3, inclusive, where he arrived Sunday morning, July 26. The various companies of my command, which were routed to arrive at different hours, all reached camp on July 26, excepting Company G of Bluffton, Indiana, which arrived on Monday, July 27. The strength of the various companies arriving was shown and forwarded to you in the consolidated report.

Camp was established and guards posted on duty. The regular routine and hours of service as prescribed in General Orders was carried out in every way, with the exception of the regimental and battalion drill hours.

Having secured permission from the owners of the open field and woodland which lies immediately west of the Fair Grounds, the regiment left camp at 9:00 a. m. Wednesday morning, July 29, and marched to the above mentioned property, where the day was spent in forming advance guard, establishing Cossack posts and various movements laid down in Wagner's "Security and Information," and in practice of "A Regiment of Infantry in Attack."

On Saturday, August 1, the regiment left camp at 3:00 a. m. and marched to the Government Reservation and participated in the tactical exercise, as provided for by general headquarters, special report of which was made at the time. (Copy attached marked Appendix "E.")

On Sunday afternoon, August 2, the regiment participated in the review of the troops by the Governor.

With the exception of the above dates the tour of duty and hours of service as prescribed in General Orders were followed very closely.

Camp was broken at 1:15 p. m. Monday, August 3, when the entire command marched to the city, the home companies marching to their armories, and the outside companies taking trains at the Union Station.

The substitution of field marches, advance guard work, and tactical problems was, I think, one of the best things that has ever been done; and I feel that more good was accomplished, from a practical standpoint, than at any camp previously held.

While the ground on which the camp was situated was too small the general conditions and the sanitary conditions were excellent. The supply of water was sufficient in quantity and excellent in quality. The same may be said of all the commissary stores. All quartermaster supplies were delivered promptly, and the above matters led to less friction than has been experienced in previous camps.

Attached hereto and marked "Appendix F" is a copy of the report of Surgeon Frederick R. Charlton.

In conclusion I desire to say that my thanks are due to the earnestness and painstaking work of the officers and men of this command. They showed an earnestness in their desire to learn, and a willingness to execute all matters required of them, better than ever before.

Very respectfully,

H. B. SMITH,
Colonel Second Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 6. APPENDIX "H."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 10, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report of the tactical exercises of August 1, 1903.

About 10:00 p. m., July 31, I received verbal orders from Brigadier-General Will J. McKee, to take command of the First and Second Infantry, Battery A, consisting of two field guns, and Battery C, consisting of three Hotchkiss guns, to proceed at three o'clock a. m., August 1, through Millersville to the northwest part of the Government Reservation, via the Fall Creek and Mud Creek gravel roads. Upon my arrival at the above destination I was instructed to make disposition of my forces for attacking the enemy, which consisted of the Third Infantry and two field guns.

A council was immediately held at the headquarters of the Second Infantry to decide on a place of attack. It was finally decided that a greater part of our forces were to be sent around to the north side of the Government Reservation so as to flank the enemy's position, while a smaller force under command of Colonel McCoy of the First Infantry, kept the enemy occupied in front.

Promptly at 3:00 a. m., August 1, the above organizations moved out through the east gate of the State Fair grounds over the Millersville Pike.

The strength of my force at this time for duty was as follows:

	Officers.	Men.
First Infantry	40	471
Second Infantry	46	470
Battery A	3	25
Battery C	4	38
Total	93	1,004

After passing Millersville, Company C, First Battalion, Second Infantry, Captain Taylor C. Power commanding, was thrown to the front as an advance guard and ordered to proceed as rapidly as possible until he arrived at a point where the road crosses Fall Creek, known as Baker's Bridge (See Map Report No. 1, Appendix B, 5 to 18), take possession of the same and establish outposts well to the right and front—and to send scouts forward to ascertain if possible the position of the enemy.

On arriving at the bridge with the main body of the troops the First Battalion, First Infantry, and two of the Hotchkiss guns of Battery C were ordered to cross the bridge and proceed in a southeasterly direction to the center of section 1, township 16, range 4 east, and thus move forward in an easterly direction, establish outposts and send scouts well to the front and discover the force under Colonel Bowman. These two Hotchkiss guns were to be posted in the best position available. This detachment was placed under command of Colonel McCoy of the First Infantry, and his instructions were, in addition to those given above, not to engage Colonel Bowman's command until the main body of the troops had had time to move along the Fall Creek and Mud Creek gravel road to a point at the northeast part of the Government Reservation. The signal to open fire was the sound of the cannonading from the main body. Mounted pickets were established on the road at the point where the bridge crosses Fall Creek, at a point where the road crosses Mud Creek, and at New Kirk Ford (11).

When the column had arrived at the S. M. Kimberlain house, which stands at the northeast corner of the Government Reservation, wagons were parked and one company left as guard. A line of battle was formed and scouts and skirmishers pushed well to the front. This line extended from Fall Creek on the right to the east line of the Government Reservation, just south of S. M. Kimberlain's house. The right of the line was held by the Third Battalion, First Infantry, in command of Major Thomas B. Coulter. The left of the line was held by the Second Battalion, First Infantry, in command of Major William J. Coleman. Two battalions consisting of the Second Battalion of the Second Infantry, in command of Major John J. Backman, and the First Battalion, Second Infantry, in command of Major H. T. Conde, formed the second line covering a distance between the battalions on the right and left flank. The three companies of the remaining battalion under command of Major John H. Tarlton were echeloned on the the right and left of the center battalion. The field guns were posted about midway of the line about thirty yards to the front under cover of an elevation. The field guns opened fire at 7:50 a. m. in order to develop the enemy. Following this scouts were sent to the front and shortly reported the enemy in front of the center of the line at a distance of about 1,800 yards. The line was pushed forward about 500 yards and the field guns took position to the left of the F. M. Kimberlain house as shown on the map, and were ordered to engage the guns under Colonel Bowman. The left of the line was pushed to the left, its left resting just southeast of "13," and afterwards advanced in a westerly direction until it occupied a position which it maintained until the close of the exercise. The Hotchkiss gun was brought forward to "13." During this time the right center and the right of the line had been moved forward about 600 yards to a position south of the McCormick house. Scouts here reported the exact position of the enemy in our front and the Hotchkiss guns were established at the angle in the road north of the Thomas house, the field guns being moved in a southerly direction to a point near the Thomas house. The center and right of the line was advanced to a position about 600 yards from Colonel Bowman's command. Under the effective fire of the artillery the entire line was advanced to the final position as shown on the map, about 200 yards from Colonel Bowman's command.

The center and right were ordered to commence a heavy volley fire on the troops in their front, while the artillery kept up a fire on the left of the enemy's left, and the Third Battalion under command of Major Thomas B. Coulter kept up a continuous fire on the troops on the left of Colonel Bowman's field piece. While in this position at 9:45 a. m., "cease firing" was sounded.

During the exercise the advance line of scouts were under command of Captain H. N. McClain, Adjutant Second Infantry, First Lieutenant Albert P. Smith, Company H, Second Infantry, and First Lieutenant R. L.

Moorhead, Adjutant First Battalion, Second Infantry. The center line was in command of Lieutenant Colonel E. P. Thayer, Second Infantry. The artillery was in command of First Lieutenant Walter W. Heiskell, Battery A, Artillery Battalion.

I desire to commend the officers and men for coolness in excitement which occurs at such exercises, and for their splendid manner, obedience and earnestness in carrying out their part of the exercise.

At 11:00 a. m. the battalions were assembled in the wood just south of the J. M. Wheeler house, and at 12:30 p. m., after mess, the column was formed and marched by easy stages over the Oakland road leading due west to Baker's bridge, and thence west over Fall Creek and Mud Creek and the Millersville gravel road to camp, where they arrived at 4:15 p. m. During the entire march and battle exercise the men showed remarkable endurance, there being only nineteen men who required attention from the Hospital Corps.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. B. SMITH,
Colonel.

REPORT No. 6. APPENDIX "I."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 6, 1903.

The Adjutant, Second Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—I hereby make the following report of sanitary conditions prevailing in Second Regiment, I. N. G., during recent Camp of Instruction at the State Fair Grounds, this city:

Climatic conditions were propitious throughout the week.

The commissary supplies were of very satisfactory quality and efficiently handled. No complaint of quality of food or quantity of issue reached the medical officers.

On personal inspection of supplies nothing is suggested other than in way of commendation.

The water supply was ample, yet is susceptible to improvement in the way of supplying drips and sinks rather than to allow, as in this camp, all excess of water flow to collect about kitchens, except as carried away by rough ditching.

In the establishing of a permanent camp for National Guard this objection could easily be obviated and at a trifling expense, to the great improvement of local conditions and convenience of all concerned.

The kitchen quarters were well policed, no instance of neglect having occurred, and for this company officers are to be commended. The kitchen sinks were carefully guarded against mal-usage, and at no time during the week were any large collections of refuse found on the line, garbage service being unusually prompt.

The latrines were treated this year by the method introduced at Fort Riley last fall. A thin layer of dirt was scattered over the excreta, this covered by straw and saturated with crude oil which was burned. Flies were immediately driven away, eggs destroyed, and the whole surrounding deodorized. This was followed by the thorough application of lime in solution. Under existing circumstances, this seems the best method of care yet suggested. However, the construction of these latrines is bad, of such roughness and inconvenience as hardly to be excused. The seat is uncomfortable and insecure, tending to throw the user backward, and for which he is afforded no protection. There is no provision made for urination, except to lean far over the seat, unavoidably soiling it and at infinite peril to the one compelled to this resort. Consequently, the men use the fence, which along with the adjacent ground becomes saturated and foul, from which there can be no complete relief. There are on the market many simple devices of reasonable price that would idealy meet this need. In event of not purchasing some such appliance it is suggested that a little ingenuity on the Quartermasters' and carpenters' part would easily correct this reprehensible state of affairs.

The general conditions of cleanliness were better maintained than in any previous camp.

The cases coming to Hospital for treatment were few and of simple character, requiring no comment other than to again emphasize the need of restriction in diet and drink, this being the chief causative factor in minor ailments.

Some instruction should be issued through company commanders relative to proper footwear, the many cases of sore feet after the maneuvers and drills being generally traceable to shoes wholly unfit for such wear.

Efficient service and personal comfort may be largely augmented by a little timely direction along this line.

Respectfully,

FREDERICK R. CHARLTON,

Major-Surgeon Second Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 7.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
VINCENNES, IND., August 10, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—In obedience to General Orders No. 4, C. S., I have the honor to submit herewith report of operations of the First Infantry at the Annual Camp of Instruction near Indianapolis, July 26 to August 3, inclusive.

I left my home station at 6:30 a. m. on July 26 and arrived in camp about noon of the same day. By 4:30 o'clock p. m. all the companies of the regiment had arrived and been assigned quarters. The camp guard was established and everything put in readiness to begin the regular routine of duties on the morning of the 27th.

Eleven companies and the band reported for duty, making in all, officers and men, about 650—the largest number attending Camp since the regiment was reorganized in 1900.

Four of the companies had recently been organized and very few of the officers or men of these companies had ever had any experience in military life before—two of them coming in without arms, so that it looked like a hopeless task to get anything like satisfactory work out of them; but officers and men alike all showed a commendable enthusiasm and a remarkable capacity for work; and with the help of the more experienced officers and men, by the middle of the week, the new companies were all able to take their place in line; and by the close of the tour their progress had been such that it would take an experienced officer to pick some of the new companies from the older ones.

Lieutenant-Colonel Fee was appointed Summary Court Officer; Captain Branch, Commissary, was placed in charge of all matters pertaining to the Camp Guard; and Dr. Davidson, Assistant Surgeon, was placed in charge of the policing of the camp, and much of the success of the regiment in its tour of duty is due to the untiring and intelligent efforts of the last named officers.

Never before in the history of the regiment has the guard duty and the policing of the camp been done in so thorough and satisfactory manner. When we consider that out of a total of 650 probably 475 were never in camp before, one can readily see what a prodigious task lay before these officers.

Owing to lack of space, no regimental drills were had, the time being devoted to company and battalion drills, and much of the latter to work in extended order and outpost duty, and it is thought commendable progress was made in all these subjects.

On Saturday, August 1, the regiment participated in the battle exercises on the Government Reservation, and barring the slight delay in forming to march out, the work of all was very well done indeed. A brief report on this exercise is appended marked "G."

The discipline of the command was good, and military courtesy among officers and men showed great improvement over previous camps.

Every one of the company, from cook up, seemed to realize that he was in camp to learn something and was determined to do his best.

If as good material as we had this year can be kept in the Guard a steady improvement may be expected from year to year.

The ration furnished was good and wholesome, and no complaint whatever reached me concerning same.

I respectfully renew my recommendation of previous years that the hours of service be changed so as to have evening parade before supper.

I would also recommend that service uniforms be issued to officers and men.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. M'COY,
Colonel.

REPORT No. 7. APPENDIX "K."

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
VINCENNES, IND., August 14, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report of the part taken by this regiment in the Field Exercise of August 1, 1903.

Having received verbal orders on the evening of July 31 from the Commanding General, I reported my command at 3:00 a. m. August 1, in readiness to march in heavy marching order with one day's cooked rations, to Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry, commanding the attacking force. The regiment marched out promptly with the column and proceeded via Millersville road and Fall Creek gravel road, to the western boundary of the U. S. Army Post site. On arriving at the branch road leading to Baker's bridge, over Fall Creek (See "5," map, Appendix "B," Report No. 1), I was directed by Colonel Smith to take my staff and the First Battalion of this regiment, cross the bridge, and form for action on the hills opposite the bridge, the direction of our advance being directly eastward. The advance was, however, to be delayed until he would give the signal to move forward by firing two guns.

Two Hotchkiss guns of Light Battery C, under Captain James L. Glascock, were assigned to me. It was not practical for the artillery to scale the heights southeast of the bridge, and the pieces were therefore moved along the road (18 to 17) with orders to the commander to select positions best adapted for co-operation with this battalion.

The battalion was formed for attack in the position indicated, scouts sent forward to the east, and in a short time the enemy was located across the branch creek flowing north. After waiting some time, no signal having been heard, although sounds of rifle firing seemed to indicate that the action had been opened by the main body far in our front, I gave the order to begin the attack. The battalion went into action in good shape, the lines being formed and maintained perfectly. The advance took our men into the wooded slopes west of the branch, and the firing by the enemy in our front across the little valley and our right flank was very heavy. The firing lasted perhaps three-quarters of an hour, when the order to cease firing was given by the Umpire present.

The battalion was assembled near the bridge mentioned, and on arrival of the main body of the regiment marched back to camp, where it arrived about 4:30 p. m.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. M'COY,
Colonel.

REPORT No. 8.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
WATERLOO, IND., August 12, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to Paragraph XIII, G. O. No. 4, A. A. G. O., 1903, I have the honor to make the following report of the Third Infantry at the Camp of Instruction, July 25 to August 3, inclusive.

The Third Infantry, in accordance with G. O. No. 5, A. G. O., 1903, and G. O. No. 6, A. A. G. O., 1903, went into camp at the State Fair Grounds, near Indianapolis, the first company, Company C, arriving on Saturday afternoon, July 25, and the last companies at 6:30 p. m. July 27, two days later. This fact makes it evident that it would be better to have the Guard ordered into camp on a week day instead of on Sunday, as it appears difficult to secure necessary railroad connections on Sundays to make possible prompt mobilization of the companies from different points in the northern part of the State.

Camp routine as per schedule was established, and company, battalion and regimental drills taken up, especially extended order formation. On July 30 the regiment was inspected under arms in the field, as well as in quarters, by Captain Blanton Winship, U. S. A. On July 31 a general call "To arms" being sounded, the regiment was thrown out to the northward of the camp to defend the latter against an imaginary attack, and the occasion was taken for practice in developing defensive positions and attack formations. This was valuable and interesting work.

On the evening of July 31 I received verbal orders from the Commanding General to issue one day's cooked rations to my command, fill canteens with coffee, and march out at 1:00 o'clock a. m. August 1, via Allisonville pike and Millersville, to the eastern limit of the new U. S. Army Post site; then enter the reservation, moving toward the west, and assume a position of defense in readiness for an attack from the south, west or north, taking all necessary precautions. One platoon of field artillery from Light Battery B, Captain William Cleary, reported to me at midnight. The column left camp via the east gate at 1:01 a. m., but through a misunderstanding crossed Fall Creek and marched to Millersville over the Millersville pike, when the proper road was taken, due east along the southern boundary of the Post to the crossroad nearest the east boundary (see map, Report No. 1, Appendix "B," 19). Thence the march turned northward (15, 14, 13) and arrived near the Thomas house at 4:30 a. m. The regiment then turned westward over the plateau to the Spees house, near which headquarters were established. Expecting the attack to develop from the south and west, I sent forward Major Harrison and Major Feaser's battalions to occupy the heights overlooking the Fall Creek valley with a line of observation, and reserved Major Kuhlman's battalion and the artillery with orders to cover our right flank and right rear with scouting parties, and at the same time be in readiness to move wherever needed. Regarding further developments I quote from Major Kuhlman's report:

"I immediately threw out scouts to join with the scouts of the advance battalions and form a complete cordon around the position, threw one company across a ravine in my rear and sent squads to other positions with instructions to post men in trees at several points to watch for the enemy. With two companies and Battery B, I held the base position, having posted the guns of the battery in position as well masked as it was possible without earthworks, and the remaining companies concealed from view in any direction, we awaited the attack.

"As expected, the first attack was on the advance battalions of Major Feaser and Major Harrison, and, according to the umpires, it failed of success at both points. Before the firing had entirely ceased at these points, my scouts reported the enemy advancing on my right and in my rear, and I immediately reinforced the line of observation with several squads, which was all that could be spared from the main position.

"The scouts posted in trees on my right and in rear kept me constantly informed as to the movements of the enemy, and I sent forward orders for the advance lines to inflict all possible damage until the enemy arrived within three hundred yards of the ravine, then to retire across the ravine to the base position, which I thought could be held against a considerably superior force, as the ravine was scarcely passable at any point for artillery, and only fairly passable at two points for infantry. The remaining length of the ravine could have been held easily against the attack of a 5-to-1 force.

"When my advance detachments withdrew across the ravine the enemy promptly followed up with his infantry and artillery and took a position with the latter commanding a part of our position. Captain Cleary had posted one of his field guns commanding the only available position for the enemy's artillery, and swept this position with canister (?) while the enemy was bringing his guns into action. Captain Cleary reports that he fired three shots among the enemy's guns before any return fire was received, and considers that he must have disabled at least two of the guns, which were not to exceed two hundred yards distance. However, the umpires ruled this one of our guns out of action, and we do not question the ruling, as it was certainly in an exposed position, as it must have been to enable it to sweep the only opening in the ravine. The other field gun did not receive the fire of the enemy at any time during the action. A hundred yards to the right of this opening the enemy attempted to cross the ravine, and a dozen men actually did cross, but were promptly ruled out by the umpires and ordered to their rear, as they crossed the ravine in the face of a direct fire from Captain McDowell's company of my battalion, and the cross-fire of Captain Freyermuth's company of Major Feaser's battalion, which, in my opinion, could have held the advance of at least one entire battalion.

"At this stage in the action the 'recall' was sounded (9:30 a. m.), and I withdrew my battalion to the open ground on the left of our position and awaited orders."

The regiment was formed and began the return march to camp at 1:00 p. m., arriving at 4:15 p. m., having marched during the maneuvers a distance of sixteen miles by road alone.

On Sunday, August 2, the brigade was reviewed on the field between the race tracks by His Excellency, Governor Winfield T. Durbin.

On Monday, August 3, the brigade left the Fair Grounds at 1:15 p. m. to march to Indianapolis, arriving at the Union Station at 3:15 p. m., having marched a distance of about five miles, where the companies were dismissed to return to home stations.

By way of recommendations, I would suggest that some attention should be given to the matter of providing a suitable place for bathing, especially if the next camp is again to be held during the extremely hot weather of the midsummer months.

This regiment was supplied with only one wagon during the encampment, and this was found insufficient for policing and hauling supplies, and I would suggest that a wagon be furnished for each battalion at the next encampment.

Very respectfully,

STEPHEN A. BOWMAN,

Lieutenant-Colonel Third Infantry, Commanding.

REPORT No. 9.

HEADQUARTERS ARTILLERY BATTALION, I. N. G.,
ROCKVILLE, IND., August 13, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—In compliance with Section XIII, G. O. No. 4, A. A. G. O., I have the honor to hand you herewith report on tour of duty at State Camp from July 25 to August 3, inclusive.

In the Artillery Battalion the officers and men are both very enthusiastic over the results of the recent camp. The lines on which the work was done appealed to them as practical and instructive, besides being out of the usual grind they have had at their armories for years past. The battle maneuvers accomplished much, for they give the men as well the officers an opportunity to study the positions taken and interest in gaining an advantage over the opponent.

I feel confident that more good results were obtained in the battalion this year than last for the work done. In the first place, we got started better, our horses were far superior to those of former camps, and in consequence our first mounted drill would have compared favorably with the last one held in camp last year. This speaks strongly for bettering the class of horses hired. The men take some pride in good teams, and I noticed that the horses were much better treated and showed no ill effects of the week's work on the last day of camp.

The large common just out of camp on Central avenue was a most satisfactory drill park, we being able to drill four-gun battery movements and not be always colliding with a fence.

The enlistment of the Artillery Band has expired, and on account of union prices will not again enlist. I would recommend that this band be engaged for the entire time of our next tour of duty, as we can not get as good a band to muster, and by such an arrangement we could have the entire time of the musicians.

I most earnestly recommend that our batteries be equipped with four guns each. This will put us on a peace footing with the batteries of the Artillery Corps, U. S. A. There is no question but Batteries "A" and "C" can immediately muster to the maximum number, and their officers are perfectly competent to handle a four-gun battery. I hope this matter will be taken up at once and that we will get quick results.

Battery "B" has made strides for the better, and their work in this camp was very satisfactory.

I am now of the opinion that if we can get the equipment of a battalion of artillery, we now have interest and enthusiasm enough to put the artillery arm of the service on an equal footing with any one of our infantry battalions.

I should also recommend that sub-caliber drill cartridges be issued to the several batteries together with the special 30-caliber ammunition to be used with them; for it seems to me that we should at once begin practical work in sighting and firing at targets with 3.2 pieces, and it is next to impossible to obtain a range for the larger ammunition.

Here I wish to quote from the report of my Commissary Department in the hands of First Lieutenant E. H. Burford:

"I have the honor to report the commissary's most successful year since I have been commissioned in the National Guard. The issue this year has been satisfactory in the highest degree, and I attribute the success of our camp largely due to the high grade of the rations.

"I would recommend, however, that the battery commanders take up the study of the subsistence department, as that seems to be their weakest point. In almost every case the commanders were at a loss to know just what was due them, and therefore the Sergeants had no way of receiving information.

"The cooks were mostly very good, using the greatest care in preparing the food, which by personal observation I found to be very palatable. The greatest care was exercised throughout the camp in regard to cleanliness, and the results were most gratifying to me. I would recommend that enlisted cooks be mustered in each battery, if possible, as the experience I gained from Battery C's cook showed me plainly that the enlisted cook was more anxious to please than the contract cooks."

I also quote from the report of First Lieutenant W. W. Heiskell:

"Both officers and men are unanimous in agreeing that the camp just closed was by far the most beneficial ever held by the National Guard during their experience, and would recommend that just such work be continued in our future National Guard Camps of Instruction."

I would respectfully recommend that both officers and men be supplied with the service uniform as adopted by the United States Army before participating in the maneuvers at West Point in October. Would also state that the blue shirts issued by the State seemed to be of inferior quality, as nearly all the shirts issued to Battery A were burned out by the sunshine almost red and some almost gray, making a very poor appearance, and would ask that we be allowed to exchange such shirts of that appearance for new ones.

In conclusion I notice that an additional amount of $350,000 has been asked for and set aside by General Randolph, Chief of Artillery, U. S. A., with which to further the equipment of the artillery arm in the militia with the new model three-inch pieces, and I hope we may be in on this equipment.

Respectfully,

F. E. STEVENSON,
Major A. B.

REPORT No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., December 10, 1903.

The Adjutant-General, State of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the participation of the Indiana National Guard in the Combined Fall Maneuvers, 1903, at Camp Young, West Point, Kentucky, September 30 to October 11, 1903.

On September 16, 1903, there were received at these headquarters General Orders No. 10, A. G. O., State of Indiana, 1903, ordering the participation of this command in the maneuvers, and charging me with the execution of the order. A copy of this order is hereto appended marked "A".

General Orders No. 8, 1903, from these headquarters were thereupon issued. Copy appended and marked "B".

On September 21, 1903, I received G. O. No. 11, War Department, 1903 (Appendix "C"), organizing the regular and militia forces participating in the maneuvers, and assigning me to the command of the Second Brigade, Maneuver Division—such Brigade consisting of the three regiments of my command. The same order assigned the First Provisional Field Battery, Indiana National Guard, to the Divisional Artillery.

On September 24, 1903, I received S. O. No. 169, Dept. of the Lakes, 1903, and G. O. No. 29, Dept. of the Lakes, 1903. Copies of these orders are appended marked "D," "E" and "F."

Kerschner, Chief Commissary of Subsistence, marked "5;" of Major Frederick R. Charlton, Acting Chief Surgeon, marked "6;" of First Lieutenant John N. LeHew, commanding Signal Corps, marked "7;" of Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry, I. N. G., marked "8;" of Colonel George W. McCoy, First Infantry, I. N. G., marked "9;" of Lieutenant-Colonel Stephen A. Bowman, commanding Third Infantry, I. N. G., marked "10;' and of Major Frank E. Stevenson, commanding Provisional Battery, marked "11."

Having been advised by the Adjutant-General, State if Indiana, that the mobilization of the State forces would be controlled by the Quartermaster's Department of the Army, including the routing and transportation of troops, animals and impedimenta, I considered my staff relieved from any duty in connection with such mobilization, and gave my attention through my Acting Chief Quartermaster, only to the forwarding of camp equipage issued by the Quartermaster-General of this State. This particularly, as I was not furnished with any copies of orders, schedules of routes of transportation, or other details covering the movements of troops in my command, and remained therefore in ignorance of such movements.

On Sunday, September 27, First Lieutenant Robert H. Tyndall, Artillery Battalion, Acting Chief Quartermaster, was ordered by S. O. No. 89, these headquarters, 1903, to proceed with a fatigue party of fifteen men to Howard Station, Kentucky—receive there the camp equipage shipped, acquaint himself with the location of camp assigned to this command, and establish depot for issues. Lieutenant-Colonel John T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector-General, I. N. G., to proceed to West Point and familiarize himself with the camp site and approaches, and stake out camp for the infantry regiments, so as to accelerate establishment of camp upon arrival of troops of this command. Both officers rendered excellent service, and reported that they had received at the hands of the officers of the regular establishment, with whom they came in contact, the utmost courtesy and most valuable assistance and instruction.

On Wednesday, September 30, at 3:00 p. m. I left home station, Indianapolis, accompanied by Major Wm. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary of Subsistence, and First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, Aide-de-camp, of my staff, for Howard—arriving at 9:00 p. m., and found tentage for these headquarters ready for occupancy.

On Thursday morning, October 1, G. O. No. 1, Headquarters Second Brigade, Maneuver Division, in which I assumed command, was issued. Copy appended and marked "G." In compliance with G. O. No. 8, Headquarters Maneuver Division, Lieutenant-Colonel John T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector-General, I. N. G., was detailed as "Observer" for the Second Bridage, by S. O. No. 1, Headquarters Second Brigade, Maneuver Division. His report is appended marked "M."

Thursday, October 1, and Friday, October 2, were occupied with the arrival of the Organized Militia in camp, the troops already in camp occupying their time with battalion and regimental duties. The first troops of the infantry of my command to arrive were Headquarters, Band and First Battalion, Second Infantry, reaching Howard at 2:00 a. m. October 1; and the last to arrive was the Second Battalion, Second Infantry, at 10:00 a. m. October 2. The First Provisional Field Battery reported at headquarters Divisional Artillery at 11:00 a. m. October 2, and the Detachment Signal Corps, I. N. G., at Signal Corps headquarters at 3:25 p. m. October 2.

On Friday afternoon, October 2, at 4 o'clock, the officers of this command then in camp, reported to the Chief Engineer Officer of the Division in accordance with Memorandum No. 5, Paragraph 2, Headquarters Maneuver Division, to inspect the model intrenchments prepared by the Engineer Corps. The First Battalion, Second Infantry, I. N. G., Major Henry T. Conde, was employed to man the trenches for purposes of illustration. The exhibit was the most perfect and comprehensive ever seen by any of our officers, and the practical object lesson conveyed by this inspection and the accompanying lecture and explanatory guidance of Major John Biddle, U. S. Engineers, of incalculable benefit.

By Friday evening the camp of the Second Brigade, Maneuver Division, was thoroughly organized, all sanitary requirements fulfilled, and all camp routine regularly established.

On Saturday, October 3, under schedule of exercises published in Memorandum No. 5, Paragraph 3, Headquarters Maneuver Division, the three regiments of infantry in this brigade took part in the combined maneuvers, each regiment separately, viz., First and Third Infantry, formation of an Advance Guard for a Division; Second Infantry, formation of an outpost. These exercises are covered in the appended reports of the regimental commanders, marked "8," "9" and "10." As to the manner in which the exercises were executed by these troops, I quote the Chief Umpire's comments: "In the advance guard exercises the work of the Third Indiana deserves high commendation. The conduct of the First Indiana was also very satisfactory, as was also the work of the Second Indiana in the outpost exercise."

On the evening of Saturday, October 3, these headquarters were honored by the arrival, informally, of His Excellency Winfield T. Durbin, Governor of Indiana, accompanied by Brigadier-General John R. Ward, Adjutant-General; Brigadier-General Oran Perry, Quartermaster-General; Colonel William E. English, Inspector-General, and Major Fletcher M. Durbin, Personal Aide-de-camp. The Governor and party remained in camp until Tuesday, October 6, inspecting the camp and accompanying the various maneuvers as observers. Upon his return to the State Capitol His Excellency expressed his satisfaction with the condition and work of the National Guard in a complimentary telegram, which was ordered to be read at regimental parades, and of which a copy is appended, marked "H."

On Sunday, October 4, two of my staff officers—Major Carroll B. Carr, Chief Quartermaster, and Lieutenant Guy A. Boyle, Aide-de-camp, who both had been unavoidably delayed, reported in person at these headquarters.

At the request of Brigadier-General Tasker H. Bliss, U. S. A., commanding First Division, Brown Army, in the exercise of October 4 and 5, Second Lieutenant Mark A. Dawson, Second Infantry, was detailed to act as an aide on his staff during said exercise, and was commended for the satisfactory discharge of his duties as such.

PROBLEM No. 5, OCTOBER 5 AND 6, 1903.

In compliance with the Memorandum No. 7, Headquarters Maneuver Division, and Memorandum Circular, October 4, Headquarters Maneuver Division, of which latter a copy is appended marked "I"—this brigade, consisting of the First, Second and Third Infantry, Indiana National Guard, Troop L, Second U. S. Cavalry, and Brigade Hospital Corps, 143 officers and 1,324 enlisted men, proceeded from Camp Young via Clay Cross Roads, the Tip Top and the Leitchfield roads, to Boone Cross Roads, there to bivouac for the night. The march was conducted as in a friendly country, the cavalry being sent ahead to select a site suitable for bivouac. The brigade left camp at the appointed time, 3:00 p. m., and arrived at Boone Cross Roads at 5:35, where First Lieutenant Edgar N. Coffee, commanding the cavalry, guided the column into a large rolling open field immediately east of the clump of woods on the northeast corner of the cross-roads. Bivouac was made in a heavy downpour of rain which thoroughly drenched the troops before they could pitch their shelter tents, and gave them a valuable experience in accommodating themselves to the vicissitudes of an actual campaign.

Brigade headquarters were established at the Higby house (marked "Hart" west of Leitchfield road on the official map), and, except during inspection of the positions, maintained headquarters at that point, or vicinity, between 87 and 89 on the Leitchfield road throughout the exercise.

At 9:00 p. m. the Brigade Commander was summoned by a courier to Division Headquarters at Stithton, where he reported in person, accompanied by two officers of his staff, at a conference of Brigade and Artillery Commanders, and received from Brigadier-General Tasker H. Bliss, U. S. A., the Division Commander, a verbal explanation of the general and special situations of the exercise, and the nature of the problem, as follows:

GENERAL SITUATION.

The Brown Army at Vine Grove is preparing to withdraw in view of the advance of the Blue Army in superior numbers. The Brown commander decides to place a force in a position to check the advance of the Blue until he can complete the arrangements for withdrawal from Vine Grove.

SPECIAL SITUATION—BROWN.

Brigadier-General Tasker H. Bliss to move at daybreak, October 5, 1903, with the First Division at Stithton, there to occupy a good defensive position so as to bar the advance of the enemy on the Langley road, the Louisville and Nashville pike, the Bloomington road, and intervening approaches; and to hold the enemy in check until the arrangements for withdrawal of the main Brown army could be completed.

The proportion of the frontage to be defended by this brigade was defined by Field Orders No. 2, Headquarters First Division, Brown Army, a copy of which was delivered to me at 7:00 a. m. October 5, by an aid of the Division Commander. A copy of this order is appended, marked "K."

At 8:00 o'clock on the morning of October 5, the regiments of infantry of this command began their march from Boone Cross Roads to their respective defensive positions. In a general way Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry, had been directed to cover the left of our positions, occupying the most advantageous positions along an arc from the Bloomington road east of Crittenden Cross Roads to a point southeast of the Brooks house on the Grahampton road, thus commanding the Bloomington and Grahampton roads; Colonel George W. McCoy, First Infantry, was ordered to occupy an arc from the Brooks house to the Illinois Central Railroad southeast of Tip Top, commanding the Dickson road, railroad tracks and the Tip Top road; Lieutenant-Colonel Stephen A. Bowman, commanding Third Infantry, was to complete the line from the right of the First Infantry on the railroad to the Fisher house, crossing the Leitchfield road, commanding that approach as well as the Tip Top road and communicating on the right with the left of the Michigan Brigade. Each regimental commander was given discretion as to the disposition of his troops, and selection of the tactical vantage points; but the general instructions were to establish a line of observation consisting of Cossack posts, well to the front of their respective positions; select strong positions for the line of resistance and intrench the latter; and keep their reserves well under cover, and yet readily available for use in case of attack anywhere along the line. Each regiment was ordered to establish a first aid station near the reserve. Brigade headquarters were announced as on the Leitchfield road between 87 and 89, near the Higby house.

By 9 o'clock the dispositions were roughly accomplished, and after that the positions of Cossack posts were improved by careful study of the terrain, and the line of resistance along the whole front intrenched. At 9:40 the right of the Third Infantry established connection with the left of the First Michigan of the Third Brigade. The entire length of our intrenched supports was approximately 3,000 yards, almost exactly 1,000 yards to each regiment. There were about 300 men in the line of observation, 600 in the line of resistance, and 600 in the reserves—making an average for the line of defenses, for this brigade, of one man to every two yards of intrenchment.

Shortly before noon an inspection of the entire line was made and the positions occupied found to be as indicated on appended sketch map marked "L" and described as follows:

SECOND INFANTRY.

Cossack Posts: On the Grahampton road southwest of "77" two posts, with a sentinel on the extreme left in a high tree; one post 200 yards west of Crittenden crossroads on the Bloomington road, and eleven posts along the Grahampton road from "77" to Brooks house, connecting with the left of the First Infantry. A detached post of one officer and four men on Indian Hill.

Supports: Four and a half companies along military crest of the elevation marked 400 contour right extending to the road near the Brooks house, the left crossing the Bloomington road. The trenches were screened with brush and extended by an earthwork barricade across the road, which was probably too conspicuous to be of much advantage.

Reserve: Four and a half companies in the depression behind contour 400, in line of platoons in columns of fours, left resting on Bloomington road. Position well protected. First aid station located with the reserve.

FIRST INFANTRY.

Cossack Posts: Line of observation from Brooks house to Tip Top. Each battalion furnished its own Cossack posts—one to each company in support, there being nine posts in all, the left being in touch with the Second Infantry and the right with the Third Infantry. A lookout post was established at a vacant house near "79" on the Dickson road, and another on the signal tower at Tip Top station, commanding a long view of the track and of the Tip Top road.

Supports: The intrenched line of supports had a fine position, the left in the outer edge of an orchard and mostly screened behind a fence, and commanding the ground in front for several hundred yards, as well as the Dickson road. The right was prepared for obstinate resistance at Tip Top.

Reserve: Each battalion held one company in reserve posted in rear of the respective battalions, the general positions being well sheltered behind the 400 contours between the Brooks orchard and the Schiebeld orchard. The first aid station was about 500 yards in rear of the Villers house near the reserve of the center battalion. The regimental commander and staff took position first near the Villers house, and later moved nearer the Leitchfield road.

THIRD INFANTRY.

Cossack Posts: The Third Battalion formed all the outposts, each company covering its front with Cossack posts, or observation groups. The disposition of the line had been repeatedly changed during the morning. The final line generally trended from the Lewis house on the Tip Top road eastward across the Leitchfield road, and several posts were well advanced toward "81."

Support: The First Battalion formed the support, the line extending from the Fisher house to Tip Top, where it connected with the right of the First Infantry. Company E was intrenched near the Lewis house, about 25 yards north of Tip Top; Companies H and I at the high elevation marked "400," between the Lewis house and the Leitchfield road, where they could see everything 400 yards to the front, 800 yards to the right, and 400 yards to the left. Company F was intrenched at the Fisher house, commanding open space to the front and flanks.

Reserve: The Second Battalion was held in reserve in the woods north of "87," where a first aid station was established in the Leitchfield road. The regimental commander and staff were near the Fisher house.

This was the disposition of the troops at noon, and the brigade remained in this formation during the rest of the exercises. Although the line was thin, yet the line of resistance appeared to be at all salient points exceptionally well adapted for defense. The country between the approaches is very rough, cut up by ravines, gullies, runs and declivities, which would have made an attack very difficult except along the highways, and the latter were commanded by our positions. A concentration at any one point of attack could have been quickly accomplished, so as to intensify resistance.

At 12:00 o'clock the brigade cavalry, Troop L, Second U. S. Cavalry, in two platoons under First Lieutenant Edgar N. Coffee and Second Lieutenant Allen M. Pope, was pushed out the Bloomington and Leitchfield roads, respectively. Lieutenant Coffee had orders to scout well out on the Bloomington, Grahampton and Dickson roads, and Lieutenant Pope was to cover the Leitchfield, Tip Top and neighborhood roads, and the country on both sides.

At 12:30 o'clock information was obtained by Captain Griffis of the Second Infantry using a telephone at the Lusk house, that Blue Cavalry was advancing over the Muldraugh road toward the Dickson road, and had then passed Muldraugh. This information was sent to Division Headquarters by an aide, and the Third Kentucky Regiment was shortly afterward moved to Boone Crossroads, where it took position as a reserve in the field which had been occupied by the bivouac the night before.

At about 1 o'clock a courier from Lieutenant Coffee reported contact with Blue cavalry scouts and indications that the enemy were advancing in force along the Muldraugh road, suggesting the possibility of an attack via the Dickson or Bloomington roads. This surmise later appeared incorrect, but at the time it was suggested in a message to General Bliss to occupy Indian Hill with artillery.

A detachment of the U. S. Signal Corps had established a station in the northeast corner of Boone cross-roads, under the trees, but owing to the heavy rain which continued all day, communication was very much impaired, and it took nearly an hour to send this message—the only one transmitted—there being meanwhile no development of any attack on our front.

However, no contact occurred with the enemy beyond skirmishes between cavalry scouts and outposts. Some of the advanced Cossack posts of the Third Infantry near "81" fired upon Blues advancing from the Triplett house, but our line of resistance was not approached during the exercise. "Cease firing," "halt," "attention" was sounded at 4:30—the umpires having decided that "impossible conditions had developed." The regiments assembled and marched back to camp under weather conditions that one of the field officers very truthfully described as "unspeakable." The First and Third Infantries returned via Tip Top road and L. and N. pike, while the Second marched over the Illinois Central tracks.

On Tuesday, October 6, and Wednesday, October 7, the weather was very inclement and the troops were allowed to remain in camp. I was pleased to note, however, that lying in flooded trenches for several hours on Monday did not affect the health of the command, and that the recuperative powers of the men appeared of a high order. On Wednesday afternoon a "practice" review for the Brigade was ordered, in which ceremony the command had had experience, and which therefore represented a task of little difficulty. On the 7th the organized militia in camp was mustered by officers of the regular establishment detailed for the purpose.

On Thursday, October 8, the command of the Brigade was turned over to Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry, the Senior Colonel, in accordance with Paragraph 7, Circular No. 1, Headquarters Maneuver Division, the commanding general being excused from participation, and honored with an invitation from the Commanding General Maneuver Division, Major General John C. Bates, U. S. A., to accompany him as an observer. This invitation was accepted on behalf of myself and my aide, First Lieutenant Guy A. Boyle, I. N. G., the other officers of the Brigade staff serving on the staff of Colonel Smith, in their respective capacities.

The report on Problem No. 6, in which the Brigade participated, will be found in Appendices "N," "O," "P," "Q" and "R" to Report No. 8—that of Colonel Smith, herewith.

On Friday morning, October 9, the organized militia was paid, and in the afternoon the Brigade participated in a Division Review by Major-General John C. Bates, the Division on this occasion being commanded by Brigadier-General W. A. Kobbe, U. S. A. The ceremony was very impressive and interesting, and had its value as an inspiring experience for many of the officers and men.

On Saturday, October 10, under General Orders No. 3, these Headquarters, pursuant to General Orders No. 26, Headquarters Maneuver Division, tents were struck in this Brigade at 8:00 a. m. The usual routine of breaking camp regularly followed, and the transportation of these troops to their respective home stations was carried out by the Quartermaster's Department, U. S. A.

It seems to be the unanimous opinion of all officers of the Indiana National Guard that the practical experience gained by them in these exercises has been of incalculable benefit. Camping and professional association with regular troops undoubtedly contributed as much to this valuable result as the joint maneuvers themselves. What is still more satisfactory, is that the enlisted men themselves profited by observation and example, and feel encouraged in their voluntary assumption of military duties. The tour at West Point has become a pleasant tradition among the rank and file, and a marked improvement in appreciation of military details should show itself when next occasion offers.

This being true, it would appear desirable to encourage still more the intimate association of the men of State and regular forces. No reading, lecturing or demonstrating is equal in instructive force to the practical object lesson, which teaches by observation—eye and memory—of the individual himself. If something could be accomplished in the way of allowing a certain number of old experienced enlisted men of the army to be temporarily attached to militia organizations, the mere force of example would prove invaluable as a practical instructive measure.

Comment could not justly be withheld on the uniform courtesy of all regular officers towards those of the militia, the constant painstaking readiness to be helpful, many times under conditions undoubtedly trying to patience. On the other hand—the evident ambition to learn, as shown by the militia officers and men, and their willingness to acknowledge deficiencies and ask questions, is heartily to be commended, and will show its results. The tour was in a sense school for one and examination for the other establishment. There is no doubt but that application has been and will be made of all that has been learned, and demonstrate itself in marked improvement in all respects.

Criticisms on this tour are apt to find their origin in a mistaken viewpoint. Reports from many officers in this command complain of indirect routing of troops with resulting unnecessary inconvenience and delay. Possibly the mobilizing and routing of militia in this State could have been managed more satisfactorily by the State Quartermaster-General's Department, but undoubtedly the manner in which it was conducted was part of the technical experience looked for in the regular establishment.

There is no need to speak of the apparent inadequacy of the railroad transportation facilities obtaining in the approaches to Camp Young. It is to be noted, however, that the railroads were permitted to furnish rolling stock inferior to that specified on schedules of the Quartermaster's Department, particularly noticeable being the entire absence of sleeping car service for officers of several of our battalions, although scheduled. In one instance, the headquarters, field and staff of one of our regiments were compelled to pass the night in a baggage car, through failure of the railroad company to furnish the cars scheduled.

The detail of administration of the Maneuver Division was admirable, and made the work of Brigade Headquarters comparatively light. There was some conflict of orders between the Medical and Inspector-General's departments as to the detail of sanitary arrangements, which caused temporary misunderstandings and a little extra work; but otherwise, in this respect, our experience was very satisfactory indeed.

Respectfully submitted,

WILL J. M'KEE,
Brigadier-General Commanding, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "A."

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Sept. 14, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 10.

I. The Indiana National Guard will participate in the maneuvers of the regular and organized militia forces of the Department of the Lakes, to be held at West Point, Kentucky, September 30 to October 11, 1903, both dates inclusive.

II. The Brigadier-General commanding the Indiana National Guard is hereby charged with the execution of this order.

III. The Quartermaster-General will make the necessary arrangements for the equipment of the Guard, and to comply with instructions he may receive from the Department of the Lakes relating to his department.

IV. Upon completion of the tour of duty all officers and organizations will return to their home stations.

V. Travel enjoined is necessary for the public service.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "B."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Sept. 16, 1903.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 8, 1903.

I. The following arms, clothing and equipment is prescribed for the joint army and militia maneuvers at West Point, Kentucky, September 30th to October 11th, 1903, viz.: 30-caliber magazine rifle, with gun sling, bayonet, bayonet scabbard and cartridge belt, khaki blouse and trousers, campaign hat, dark blue flannel shirt, leggings, blanket, shelfer halves, canteen, haversacks, meat can, knife, fork and spoon, tin cup, poncho, two (2) suits underclothing, strong shoes, two (2) pair socks, towel, and toilet articles. Also boxes of cleaning material and field desks, together with record books.

When assigned to the "blues" the khaki blouse will not be worn, the blue flannel shirt with khaki trousers being the uniform. When taking part with the "Browns" the khaki blouse will be worn. When off duty or serving with the "Blues" officers may wear the blue dress blouse or old style field blouse. Property not specified to be taken "in the field" will be left in armories, secured from damage, or loss by theft.

II. Field ranges and cooking utensils will be issued each company by Chief Quartermaster, Indiana National Guard, upon proper requisition upon arrival at West Point.

III. Subordinate Commanders will take with them sufficient stationery to last through the tour, as none will be issued or be available at the scene of the maneuvers.

IV. No mess boxes larger than a gun chest, or that require more than two men to handle conveniently, will be taken.

V. No civilians, other than the authorized servants and cooks, will be permitted in camp. This applies also to women and children.

VI. Officers will be required to provide themselves with all necessities for their own comfort, the same as officers of the army, and will have to provide their own messes. Subsistence can be purchased of the Camp Commissary. Officers will not be allowed to subsist at company messes.

VII. Transportation will be furnished by the Quartermaster of the Department of the Lakes, and will not cover servants or strikers, or any but the minimum amount of baggage.

VIII. The mess outfits in haversacks will have to cover all requirements of this nature upon the part of enlisted men.

IX. No man will be taken to the maneuvres who is not fully armed and equipped as prescribed.

X. Officers should provide their own mounts. Transportation to and from West Point will be furnished by the Army Quartermaster.

XI. Subordinate commanders are strictly charged to see that no ammunition of any nature is in possession of men en route to or from rendezvous, and while at rendezvous only the blank cartridges issued under orders.

XII. Wheel transportation will be furnished at camp on basis of one two-horse or mule team and wagon for each battalion.

XIII. Ten (10) days subsistence will be issued regimental commissaries by Army Commissary upon arrival in camp and reissued immediately to company commanders.

XIV. Travel rations for the return journey will be drawn prior to departure from camp.

XV. The Assistant Surgeon in charge of the Hospital Corps will arrange for a twenty (20) bed hospital.

XVI. The Commanding Officer of the Signal Corps will take to the maneuvers all signal equipment in his possession. The Signal Corps of the State will be attached to that of the Army attending the exercise.

XVII. Tent pins and other articles for temporary use in camp that are issued in boxes will be returned to Quartermaster's Department in same package as received. No cases or boxes will be destroyed, and care will be taken in opening all same, so they will be available for use in return shipment to storehouse.

XVIII. Subordinate commanders will hold their commands in readiness to move by routes and at time hereafter named. The orders for movement of troops will probably come direct from the Department of the Lakes to officers in immediate command at each home station.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieutenant-Colonel and A. A. G.

Each organization will bring its own camp equipage, cooking outfits, proper allowance of wall tents for officers, and conical wall tents for men, at the rate of one tent to each 12 enlisted men, for infantry, and 10 enlisted men for artillery. If not sufficient conical wall tents are available, wall tents will be brought at the rate of four enlisted men to a tent, and in addition thereto, each man will be equipped with a shelter half and pole, blanket and the uniform as per circular letter from these headquarters of August 29, 1903. Sibley stoves and stove pipe should be brought. Each man should bring one suit of heavy under garments. There will be no formations under arms in overcoats during the encampment, but commanding officers should use their own judgment about having their men bring them. Straw for bedding will be issued at the camp, but bed sacks will be brought if practicable. The field allowance of baggage as fixed in Army Regulations and Orders will not be exceeded. The authorized mounts of officers and enlisted men will be transported by the United States. Forage will not be supplied to horses of the organized militia, but can be purchased from the depot quartermaster at the maneuver camp at contract rates. Enlisted men will not be allowed to transport trunks, chests, etc., but their bedding and extra clothing should be neatly rolled and packed, and all baggage of troops assembling should accompany them by rail, as far as practicable. All property should be carefully marked with the name of the state, number and letter of each organization. Only officers and enlisted men properly belonging to organizations will be transported by the United States.

Each organization will be properly armed and equipped. Blank rifle ammunition caliber .30; blank revolver ammunition caliber .38, and blank ammunition for 3.2 inch field pieces can be drawn in camp.

Troops will draw rations on properly made out ration returns on arriving in camp. All travel rations will be accounted for on arriving in camp. There will be a limited variety of commissary stores on hand, for sale to officers and enlisted men. Each enlisted man should bring a tin wash basin, but these can be purchased at the camp, if necessary.

The entraining and detraining of troops will be considered as part of the exercises, and reports thereon will be rendered by the commanding officers of all separate commands to the Adjutant-General, Maneuver Division.

In this connection, attention is invited to paragraphs 144 to 151 of Troops in Campaign, and paragraph 1206 of the Army Regulations. Commanding officers of separate commands will report the time of departure of their separate trains; also the designation of the command, the number of officers, men and horses, and the probable time of arrival at camp, by wire to the Chief Quartermaster, Maneuver Division, as soon as their trains are ready to start.

Upon completion of the maneuvers the above named organizations will return to their proper stations.

The Quartermaster's Department will furnish the necessary transportation, and the Subsistence Department will provide suitable subsistence.

By command of Major-General Bates.

W. M. WRIGHT,
Captain, Second Infantry, A. D. C. Acting Adjutant-General.

TELEGRAM.

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, October 9, 1903.

General Will J. McKee, Commanding I. N. G., West Point, Kentucky:

I am directed by the Governor to congratulate you and through you the officers and men of the I. N. G. for the notable record you have made during the maneuvers. The pride which Indiana has always felt in her citizen soldiery has been increased by the demonstration just given of the unusual state of discipline and efficiency to which you have attained.

He compliments and commends you on behalf of the people of Indiana, whose growing interest in the Guard he trusts will serve as an incentive to continued effort for the promotion of efficiency throughout the State's military establishment.

He further directs that a copy of this dispatch be furnished to the commanding officer of each regiment to be read at parade this afternoon.

(Signed) JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "I."

HEADQUARTERS MANEUVER DIVISION,
CAMP YOUNG, WEST POINT, KY., Oct. 4, 1903.

MEMORANDUM CIRCULAR.

The Brown force under command of Brigadier-General Tasker H. Bliss, U. S. Army, for the problem of tomorrow, October 5, 1903, will march out of camp at 3:00 p. m. today, viz.:

Second Brigade—Brigadier-General McKee commanding—and troop L, Second U. S. Cavalry, to Boone Cross Roads, where the Brigade will bivouac.

Third Brigade—Brigadier-General McGurrin Commanding (except First Independent Battalion, Michigan), with Troop M, Second U. S. Cavalry, to Kenton Cross Roads, where the Brigade will bivouac.

Fourth Brigade—(excepting Eighth Ohio and the Kentucky Artillery Battalion) with the First Battery, Indiana Organized Militia, and the Third Platoon, Twenty-first Battery of U. S. Field Artillery, to Stithton, where the Brigade will bivouac.

The march will be conducted as in a friendly country, no enemy within reach.

Regimental bands will accompany the troops.

The troops will carry one day's rations.

Blanket rolls, shelter tents, and blank ammunition will be taken.

Particular attention to paragraph 4, Circular No. 1, Headquarters Man. Div., September 26, 1903, is invited.

By command of Major-General Bates.

H. LIGGETT,
Major of Infantry, Adjutant-General.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "K."

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION,
BROWN ARMY,
(En route from the South towards Stithton.)
5 A. M., October 5, 1903.

FIELD ORDERS, No. 2.

The following orders are communicated to the commanders of the Second, Third and Fourth Brigades, of the Cavalry, and of the Field Artillery of this Division, which is charged with the duty of retarding the advance of the enemy from West Point toward Pine Grove, via the Bloomington road, Louisville and Nashville pike and Langley road.

The commander of the Second Brigade will proceed by the shortest practicable route to the Boone Cross Roads, accompanied by Troop L, Second Cavalry; the Third Brigade will proceed via Stithton to Kenton Cross Roads, accompanied by Troop M, Second Cavalry; the Fourth Brigade, accompanied by the Third Platoon, Twenty-first Battery, F. A. and the First Battery, I. N. G., will proceed through Stithton to a point just north of the village and extending from the I. C. R. R. to and across the unnamed road leading north from the point "93" on the Stithton road, the artillery being on or near said unnamed road.

The brigades having arrived in the designated positions a defensive line will be formed as follows:

The left will extend from a point on the left of the Bloomington road, between the Boone Cross Roads and the Crittenton Cross Roads, to the northeast, to the vicinity of the Fisher house; thence to the plateau on the Stithton road occupied by the most westerly of the two Preston houses; thence in a southerly direction across the Langley road toward the Preston house south of said road.

From the left to the Fisher house, the position will be held by the Second Brigade and its cavalry; from the Fisher house to the right of the line, by the Third Brigade and its cavalry.

In the more defensible positions on the general line thus indicated, the commanders of the Second and Third Brigade will establish the supports of their outpost line, placing their reserves with a general view to the retarding of a principal attack coming by the Bloomington road, the Tip Top and Leitchfield roads, the Louisville and Nashville Pike, the Stithton road and the Langley road.

The ultimate disposition of their reserves will be determined by the development of the principal attack.

As soon as the general position of the line of supports has been definitely selected, the respective commanders will intrench the position as strongly as possible.

As for a time the cavalry will not be available for scouting, commanders will throw as far forward as practicable their lines of sentinels and pickets, which should retard the advance of small parties. They will constantly communicate to the line of supports information received by them, and only when necessary will they retire on that line.

The commanders on the advanced line will keep especially in mind the probable sources of attack as indicated above.

As these orders are given mainly on information obtained from the map, it is possible that the conditions of the ground will require a modification. Such modifications (keeping in mind the foregoing idea) will be made by brigade commanders, subject to the following conditions:

The left flank must at all hazards cover the approaches via Boone Cross Roads; the center and left center must cover the approaches by the Louisville and Nashville Pike and the unnamed road between the Pike and the I. C. railroad; the right must cover the approaches to the Louisville and Nashville Pike via the Stithton and Langley roads. Therefore, if the general line above indicated has to be materially modified, it will be done by establishing a position interior to it (i. e. nearer Stithton) rather than one exterior to it.

The commanding officers of the Indiana Battery and of the Platoon of the Twenty-first Battery will select positions in support of the general line, and cover, as far as practicable, the open ground along the Louisville and Nashville Pike and westward to the Leitchfield road, the positions being such as will permit the greatest freedom of movement to the rear or to either flank.

The Fourth Brigade will constitute the general reserves of the division and will move as directed by the division commander.

The Second Kentucky will take a position west of the Kenton Cross Roads, on and near the unnamed road running north between the Louisville and Nashville Pike and the I. C. Railroad, and for convenience of movement toward the right flank will keep near the road from Stithton to Kenton Cross Roads. It can thus move most readily to the front or by either flank.

The Third Kentucky will take position to the westward of the Second Kentucky, at a point near the Bloomington road.

Troops L and M, Second Cavalry, will remain respectively—L near the Boone Cross Roads and M near Kenton Cross Roads, until the line of outposts is established. In any event, however, at 12:00 noon these troops will be available for scouting under the direction of the respective brigade commanders. They will scout all approaches thoroughly and as far to the front as practicable, promptly sending necessary information to the nearest part of the line of outposts and to the brigade commanders. Troop L will endeavor to learn whether artillery accompanies the enemy's right, and will promptly report that fact to the brigade commander, who will take every precaution to prevent the enemy's guns from getting into position on his left at Indian Hill. On the right flank, the cavalry will retire when necessary by the Louisville and Nashville Pike, and its approaches on the right, in the general direction of Stithton.

The commander of the Third Brigade will take every precaution to hold the elevated position on the Stithton road near the Preston house east of the Louisville and Nashville Pike.

Until further orders the headquarters of the First Division will be near the Second Kentucky Infantry in reserve.

The commanding officers of the nearest infantry command will furnish supports for the artillery in position when necessary.

The Division Hospital will be established in the town of Stithton.

By command of Brigadier-General Bliss.

Captain Ninth U. S. Cavalry, Adjutant-General.

REPORT No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE OF THE AIDES-DE-CAMP,
ATTICA, INDIANA, October 15, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report:

In compliance with personal directions from the Commanding General, I reported to him in person at Indianapolis at 10:00 a. m., September 30, 1903, and accompanied him to Camp Young, Kentucky, leaving Indianapolis at 3:20 p. m. and arriving at Howard, Kentucky, 9:30 p. m. Returning, I was excused by the Commanding General at 10:00 a. m., October 10, and permitted to proceed overland to Louisville and thence by railroad connections to this station, where I arrived at 3:00 p. m., Monday, October 12, 1903.

On October 1 I was assigned to duty as Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division, by G. O. No. 1, Headquarters Man. Div. (Report No. 1, Appendix "G") and acted as such throughout the tour. The administrative duties were made comparatively light by the excellent methods and facilities at Division Headquarters, which, for example, saved much rewriting of orders, circulars and memoranda by furnishing a liberal supply of copies for distribution to subordinate commanders. The matter of consolidated reports was reduced to the simplest form, minimizing all requirements to absolute needs in the field. The first day or two there was much delay on the part of regimental and battalion adjutants, having its origin no doubt in the companies; but all adapted themselves to conditions very quickly, and the work was prompt and fairly accurate during the remainder of the tour.

In this department, as in all others under observation, officers of the regular establishment showed the greatest willingness to encourage and assist, and their self-sacrifice on this occasion will reward itself by making questions and inquiries less necessary on part of militia officers next time.

I take the liberty to suggest the urgent need of improvement in the field office equipment for these headquarters. Our State camps of instruction have been held in the immediate vicinity of Indianapolis, where office facilities, even to roll-top desks, were easily obtainable, and the office needs in the field campaigns have no doubt been overlooked.

Very respectfully,

ALFRED B. SCHANZ,

First Lieutenant and A. D. C., I. N. G., A. A. A. G. Second Brigade, Maneuver Division.

REPORT No. 3.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT INSPECTOR GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, Nov. 20, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report, as Assistant Inspector-General of the I. N. G. during the maneuvers at West Point, Kentucky, October, 1903:

The duties of an inspecting officer are not agreeable in the regular army, and by the very nature of things, are less agreeable in the militia. They require a man to be more or less inquisitorial, critical and pessimistic.

ORDERS.

I went to the West Point Maneuver Camp in accordance with the following order:

"Indianapolis, September 26, 1903.

Special Orders, 1903. No. 90.

Extract: I. Lieutenant-Colonel Jno. T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector General, will proceed without delay to Howard Station, Ky., and stake out camp site for infantry regiments ordered to joint maneuvers with army. The travel enjoined is necessary for the public service.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK, Lt.-Col. and A. A. G.

Lt.-Col. Jno. T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector-General."

I received said order Monday afternoon. The commanding general, however, personally told me Sunday about 10 o'clock he would like me to go to West Point on Monday. I left Indianapolis Monday afternoon. It was impossible for me to get ready for the morning train. I took the first train from Louisville to West Point after my arrival at Louisville. I reached West Point about 9:00 p. m. and remained there Monday night.

Tuesday morning as soon as I could get transportation, I went to the I. N. G. camp ground, arriving there about 8:30 a. m. I found Lieutenant Tyndall there with fourteen men, I believe; he informed me that he had arrived there about the same time the day before. We found the camp ground already staked out, by the regular officers, looked over it as staked out, located brigade headquarters and determined that the stable of the I. N. G. would have to be moved; this was done during the afternoon. Tuesday evening about six o'clock I went to West Point and remained there over night for three reasons:

First. I had no bedding at the camp ground.

Second. Lieutenant Tyndall informed me that he expected 90 head of horses next day by boat, that he would have to receive at the wharf. He didn't have enough men to take care of them and do the work and guard duty. I telephoned Major Coleman and asked him to send ten men from the New Albany Company on the train Wednesday morning. I also telegraphed the commanding general what I had done.

Third. The ground was very hard at that time and sinks could not be dug without picks. Lieutenant Tyndall said the boxes of picks were left behind, but he thought had been forwarded by express. I remained until the morning train came in to get the picks, if any, and direct the men Major Coleman would send to camp. The men failed to come till the afternoon, but the picks did. When the men did come they did effective service, such as guard duty, digging sinks, etc. I returned to camp that morning, performing such duties as were necessary to get the camp in shape for the command.

CAMP.

The maneuver ground rented by the U. S. Government, from the farmers, contained about 30,000 acres. About one-tenth of this is practically a level plain along the Ohio River, which was used for the encampments, parades, reviews, etc. The Louisville and Nashville Turnpike runs in a generally southern direction from West Point, practically halving the grounds south of the aforesaid plain. The L., H. & St. L. R. R. nearly halves the aforesaid plain east and west, and crosses the aforesaid pike at Howard Station, the entraining and detraining point of the camp. The I. N. G. was encamped by brigade about one-fourth mile south of Howard Station and on the west side and adjoining the turnpike. The brigade was remarkably well located, as to division headquarters, Howard Station and Lecture Tent. The encampment ground, for its size, was as good as any in the whole division. The ground upon which the First and Second Regiments were located, was practically a level plain; while that of the Third sloped gently to the north with a slight ravine depression at its west end. Water was obtained from three wells, especially driven by the U. S. Q. M. Department within the encampment enclosure, and from the well at the Applegate house, just west of the First Regiment. The camp was surveyed and staked out and the body of the brigade located by a regular officer under orders from Division Headquarters. I was informed by said officer that it was desirous that the general conformation of the brigade remain as staked out; but that Brigade and Regimental Headquarters could be located as deemed desirable; that he expected us to put them at the most convenient place where there was room. It would have been better if the body of the camp had been near the road. Headquarters would not then have been so crowded.

CAMP SANITATION.

The policing and sanitation of the camp, until after Sunday, was very unsatisfactory to the Division Inspector-General; yet at all times it was as good or better than the policing and sanitation of our State camps. It seemed, and I was so informed, that special stress was put upon camp sanitation, for the purpose of instruction. In the light of the Spanish-American War, camp sanitation is now regarded by the War Department about as important as knowing how to shoot.

ATTENDANCE.

The percentage of attendance, about 66⅔, was less than the State Encampment. The opinion seemed general among the officers and men that had the maneuvers been a month earlier, the attendance would have been better.

OPINION OF REGULAR OFFICERS.

The regular officers, among them several former West Point Academy classmates, talked freely to me in regard to the I. N. G. All commended their conduct during the actual maneuvers. Col. Smith was specially mentioned several times as showing special aptitude and ability in handling his command during all the maneuvers. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that the I. N. G. was superior to all militia there, except the Wisconsin Regiment. That seemed to be the model of militiamen as far as regulars commented. However, this was doubtless Wisconsin's best and model regiment. When we left I asked Colonel Wagner, "What can I say about Indiana?" "Indiana did very well indeed in everything except camp policing and camp sanitation," he replied. It was unfortunate that the I. N. G.'s record in the latter was not as good as in the actual maneuvers; but it was largely due, I think, to the short duration of our State Camp and the apparent lack in them of the necessity of the highest sanitation; while at West Point the desire was to sanitate as if the camp was a permanent one as an object lesson.

CRITICISMS.

Some slight criticism was made by regular officers in that some, if not all of the I. N. G., had out too many flankers when on the march, thereby delaying the main column; that flankers are for information only and not resistance; that too much distance was kept from point to support, and from support to reserve, each likely to be picked up in detail by cavalry, and too much noise and temporarily leaving of ranks while marching. The Assistant Adjutant-General, in charge of the militia, thinks that during these maneuvers that militia and regulars should be camped alternately by regiments, so that the officers and men could fraternize and each learn from the other by contact.

OBSERVER.

I was detailed as observer of the Second Brigade by the following order:

"Headquarters Second Brigade, Maneuver Division.
"Camp Young, Kentucky, October 1, 1903.

"Special Order, No. 1.

"I. Lieutenant-Colonel John T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector-General, is detailed as Observer in compliance with General Order No. 8, Headquarters Maneuver Division.

"By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

"Alfred B. Schanz, First Lieutenant and Aide-de-camp,
"Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

"To Lieutenant-Colonel John T. Barnett, Assistant Inspector-General."

I was surprised at the small amount of damage done to fences, crops and land; all, volunteers and regulars, seemed to have a special care to do as little damage as possible and perform their duty properly.

Appendix "M" hereto attached covers all the damages I noted that specially came under my order.

DISCIPLINE OF I. N. G.

I believe there is no militia in the United States equal to the I. N. G. in point of discipline. As evidence of this I wish to cite two late instances.

1. That the Captain of the Evansville company was able to control the fire of his command at the end of one volley during the Evansville riots.

2. When, as observer of the Second Brigade, I asked the man who lived on the Applegate farm what complaint he had to make of the Indiana troops, he replied: "I have been well treated by Indiana; had I been as well treated by other troops I would have no complaint to make."

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The command was short on tentage. Every company should have cooking tents. The lack of them was a continual cause for "kick" from the Division Inspector-General. The Headquarters were short on clerks. A few competent civilian clerks in the Adjutant-General's office facilitates the business of the whole command and enables it to reap the greatest benefit from the maneuvers.

All officers should be furnished with a copy of the problems from day to day for two reasons. First, all staff officers should have them, as they are on different parts of the field and are expected to act in the name of the general in his absence, and should know the problems to act intelligently. Second, if superiors are taken prisoners or killed, the inferiors in rank, to command intelligently, must know the problems. Again, these maneuvers are schools of instruction. The better the officers know the problems beforehand the more they will obtain from them. They will pass from an automaton to an intelligent acting officer.

I recommend that in future maneuvers, an exchange for encampment purposes be made between an Indiana regiment and a regular regiment; i. e., that the commanding general of the I. N. G. request that a regular regiment be brigaded at his command and an Indiana regiment be put in a brigade of regulars, and this continue from year to year.

Sinks should be the first things constructed in a military camp, if thorough camp sanitation is expected.

CONCLUSIONS.

From conversations with officers and men during and since the maneuvers, I think it difficult to realize the great benefits the I. N. G. received from them. The regular officers received as much or more than the militia. The various problems were discussed and criticised by them around their camp-fires and mess tables, and they were always willing and anxious to assist and to impart any information to the militia to make an effective reserve force.

In some regular army quarters there is a feeling that there should be no State organizations above regiments; and that they should attend these maneuvers that way. This idea arises from their limited view of the militia; they consider it only as a national reserve force. It is that and more; it has a dual capacity; it is a state force as well. In fact, the greater part of its service is as a State force; and in this capacity a single organization with a single effective head is as necessary as a single head is to the regular army; and when that organization exists it should be drilled and disciplined in these maneuvers as such. No one can question for a moment but that the good record made by the I. N. G. is due to its single organization under its efficient commander.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN T. BARNETT,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 3. APPENDIX "M."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BRIGADE MANEUVER DIVISION,
CAMP YOUNG, KENTUCKY, October 8, 1903.

To the President of the Board Appointed to Assess Damages:

Sir—I have the honor to respectfully report as Observer of the Second Brigade, the following damages noted by me:

October 4th, the Second Indiana Brigade, and one troop of Regular Cavalry bivouacked on W. R. Hart's farm.

About thirty rods of ten-rail fence were burned. It was a good fence, rails fair, worth 60 per cent. of new rails.

Mr. Higby, a cash tenant near the bivouac, said "About six shocks, twelve bushels of his corn, and ten shocks, twenty bushels of T. W. Hart's corn, was taken." I think this a fair estimate of the corn. October corn is worth 44 cents. The corn with fodder taken from Higby is worth $5.50. The corn with fodder taken from T. W. Hart is worth $9.00.

October 9th, about 9:00 a. m., I interviewed Mr. Patterson, a cash tenant on the Applegate farm, as to the amount of damages done him by the Second Brigade. He reported as follows:

"To the three acres of standing corn west of Brigade Headquarters, $50.00.

"To combination of rail and wire fence west of Brigade, $10.00."

I believe both of these items are too high. The corn will not yield over forty bushels to the acre; hence, he wants full price instead of damages. Again, he informed me he had made a claim through Division Headquarters for some corn taken from same field by another brigade. I think $12.00 would cover all damages to the corn, and $6.00 to the fence.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

JOHN T. BARNETT,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General, I. N. G. Observer Second Brigade.

REPORT No. 4.

BATTERY A, INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., November 20, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I respectfully submit the following report as Acting Chief Quartermaster, I. N. G., during the joint maneuvers at West Point, Kentucky, September 27 to October 12, 1903.

In compliance with S. O. No. 89, Headquarters I. N. G., 1903, I left Indianapolis, Sunday, September 27, at 4:00 p. m., with a fatigue party consisting of one sergeant, two corporals and twelve men, for Camp Young, West Point, Kentucky, to make preparations for the Indiana Brigade and establish Quartermaster's depot. We arrived at West Point at 9:15 same day. The camp equipage and Quartermaster's stores had been shipped by the Quartermaster-General and were supposed to be at Howard Station.

Arriving in total darkness, I ordered the detail to bivouac for the night in a vacant lot at West Point, but at midnight, owing to the cold, permitted the men to take shelter in the railroad station. The following morning we marched to Howard, where I reported at headquarters, registered and immediately took up the search for my cars of property. Only two cars of four shipped had arrived. The missing cars contained the field ranges, tools, tent stakes, etc., and their absence seriously impeded our work. They did not arrive until September 29 and 30, respectively.

The camp for the Indiana organized militia had been laid and staked out by Captain Barker, Third United States Infantry, who advised that brigade headquarters, which had been marked near the L. & N. pike, would better be moved to the west of the brigade to get away from the awful dust and the great traffic along the road. This necessitated the removal of our stables, which had already been erected, to a point about 300 yards north, where the drainage was best.

My requisition on the Chief Commissary, United States Army, for subsistence for my party was readily honored. We were, however, without cooks or cooking facilities, and prepared only two meals. I found it necessary to mess the men at a public lunch stand and kept them in better condition for work.

On the afternoon of September 29 I received a telegram from the Quartermaster-General, directing me to receive and receipt for ninety-six head of horses, which came in by boat from Louisville. As we had such a small detail and all the regular troops were out on maneuvers, I had to borrow six roustabouts from the Quartermaster's Depot to help unload them. The horses were excited and we had much trouble. Sixty head were left at the artillery stables with four men to guard them. The rest were taken to headquarters stables. We had two stampedes at the artillery stables during the night and only the prompt help of Major Charles G. Woodward, commanding the division artillery, who ordered some of his men to the assistance of our guards, prevented serious damage and loss.

The car containing tentage for brigade headquarters arrived on the afternoon of September 30, enabling us to pitch headquarters camp before arrival of the commanding general and staff at 9:30 that night.

The First and most of the Second Infantry arrived early in the morning of October 1st, and equipment was issued to them at once. One battalion of the Third Infantry arrived later the same morning, and owing to the absence of the regimental and battalion quartermasters, due to delayed trains, it became necessary to issue to individual companies, as it was raining hard and they needed shelter. The property was issued on memorandum receipts and taken up later in regular form.

We struck camp on the morning of October 10. All property was turned in to me by noon, and I was left behind with a detail of twenty-five men to ship the State camp equipment back to Indianapolis. That afternoon I found two empty cars on a side track about half a mile from Howard Station, and having received permission from Major Elias Chandler, Twenty-fourth United States Infantry, Chief Quartermaster, I loaded all heavy equipage late that afternoon. The ninety-six head of contract horses were loaded and shipped by boat to Louisville at 9:30 p. m., October 10. On the morning of the 11th I got permission to unload a car of freight so as to secure the car, and at 10 a. m. the regular freight empties came in and one car was assigned to me, completing my number. All State property was loaded and all Government property turned in by 3 o'clock that afternoon. I made requisition for and received transportation for myself and fatigue party and left West Point at 4:50 p. m., arriving at Indianapolis 12:05 a. m., October 12. The Indiana fatigue party, I am informed, reported for transportation to home station twenty-four hours earlier than any other State.

My experience with the regular officers was not only instructive, but very pleasant. I came in contact personally with about twenty-five or thirty and was treated with greatest courtesy by all—especially so by Major Chandler, Chief Quartermaster, Department of the Lakes. Although a man whose every minute was taken up with duties, he was always easy to approach and ready to answer questions or give advice.

Indiana camp equipage compared favorably with the best and was far ahead of that of some of the other States.

Indiana foraged 160 head of horses, 96 of which were contract. The team horses for the artillery were as good as were furnished the camps heretofore, and the saddle horses were much better.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

I take the liberty of offering the following suggestions:

That the fatigue parties for future maneuvers consist of an entire company and its officers, as were furnished by the other State militia. This would enable the Quartermaster to attend strictly to his duties and be relieved from being officer of the guard; and when he is at one point he could leave an officer in charge at the other.

That all regimental and artillery battalion quartermasters arrive at least one day in advance of their organizations to receive property, and that they remain after the breaking of camp until their complete camp return is made out.

That the Quartermaster's department furnish a tent at least 60 by 40 feet for depot shelter to shelter equipage upon arrival; also mess shelters for individual company and headquarters messes.

That the Quartermaster department furnish a picket rope for each regiment and battery so they may have their own stables, and the quartermasters of the different organizations be responsible and issue to each officer the necessary contract horses, as it is very easy when a horse goes lame with an officer or a man to switch with some other regiment's horses when all are on one picket rope. In this manner it will be easy to trace the cause of an injury.

That the Quartermaster department furnish canvas horse covers with surcingles if the contract calls for shelter for the horses, as the sheds with tarpaulins are impracticable; the wind gets under and uses them for a sail, and they are no protection when raining if the wind is blowing.

Very respectfully,

ROBERT H. TYNDALL,

First Lieutenant of Artillery, Acting Chief Quartermaster, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 5.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE CHIEF COMMISSARY SUBSISTENCE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., November 21, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to Paragraph III, S. O. No. 169, Headquarters Department of the Lakes, I reported in person to the commanding general and accompanied him from this station October 1, 1903, at 3:10 p. m., arriving at Camp Young, West Point, Ky., about 9:30 p. m. the same evening. Returning, left Camp Young about 1:20 p. m., October 10, 1903, and arrived here about 4:30 a. m. the next morning, having missed connection at Louisville, Ky., owing to the slow movement of trains between Howard, Ky., and that point.

Owing to the fact that the rations for the Second Brigade were not issued through the brigade commissary, but by the depot commissary direct to the regimental commissaries, I had no official transactions with the regular army officers connected with the Subsistence Department, but upon making myself known was treated with every courtesy and given every opportunity to acquire all information possible relating to this department. Not only did these officers treat me well, but all the regular officers with whom it was my good fortune to come in contact were uniformly courteous and obliging and seemed to consider it a pleasure to be of assistance in any way possible.

Close inquiry was made as to the method employed in handling and issuing rations and also regarding paper work in the Subsistence Department. There is but one thing to say regarding their work, and that is, "they are the goods," to use a colloquial expression. This is due mainly to the fact that it is their constant business—they do nothing else—and it but verifies the old saying that "practice makes perfect."

Inspections of the company mess revealed the fact that the company quartermaster-sergeants of the regular troops are exceedingly well up in their duties. They know what they are entitled to in the way of rations, how to get it, and how to take care of and use it to the best advantage after they get it. The fact that the companies have enlisted cooks works to their advantage in many ways also. This is the weak point in the I. N. G., and is due to the lack of instructions given the quartermaster-sergeants during the interval from one State camp to the next. If some method was adopted whereby the quartermaster-sergeants received weekly instructions regarding their duties in the care of the ration, the same as the balance of the company receives weekly instruction in drill, etc., it would be possible in a short time to have these men reasonably well trained in their duties, to the very great advantage and benefit of the entire guard while in camp. It is impossible to make a well-drilled soldier with but one week's drill each; and no more is it possible to make a competent quartermaster-sergeant with a like amount of instruction. The health and good feeling of the entire command depends largely upon the food served, and the manner in which it is cooked; and, as the detail of the management of the company mess devolves largely on the quartermaster-sergeant, the necessity of a competent, well-instructed man to fill this position is obvious. The difference in the results accomplished by the regulars and the National Guard at West Point under similar conditions was very noticeable, the regulars obtaining much the better results.

The subsistence blanks used by the I. N. G. are the same as those used in the regular army. In fact, they are government blanks and are drawn from the Commissary-General at Washington.

The rations issued to the I. N. G. at State camps and those issued at West Point are identical, both as to component parts and quantities, except a slight difference in the vegetable ration. While the gross quantity of this portion of the ration is the same at the State camps, a greater variety is issued—one fresh vegetable (usually cabbage) being used. This, however, is offset with the regulars by the fact that they have a company fund and obtain fresh vegetables by that means.

The only difference in the method of issue at State camps and that at West Point was in the fresh meat issue. At West Point the meat was issued in bulk, while at the State camps heretofore the meat has been cut up before issue.

There was very little complaint regarding the rations at West Point by the Indiana troops, and so far as was able to ascertain, very little shortage amongst the companies. No extra rations were issued to cover shortages. They took what they were entitled to and made it cover the period for which it was issued under more trying circumstances than they have heretofore encountered at State camps. It demonstrates the fact that the ration as issued at State camps is amply sufficient if handled properly after reaching the company commissary.

To sum up the whole, the methods of issue, the ration (both as to component parts and quantities thereof), the blanks, etc., as used by the I. N. G. are practically identical with those used in the regular army. As I understand that is the result desired, I see no reason to recommend any change therein. The work is not as smoothly or as quickly accomplished as by the regulars, but that is due to the fact that the I. N. G. has one week a year and the regulars work at it the year round.

I would make but one recommendation—that the company quartermaster-sergeant receive weekly instruction as regards the handling and care of the ration—that he be required to pass as rigid an inspection to ascertain his proficiency in these duties before going to camp as each man is required to pass regarding the condition of his rifle and other equipment. It is absolutely necessary that the quartermaster-sergeants reach a much greater degree of efficiency in their duties before we can expect a proper handling of the ration or any degree of perfection in the all-important work of properly subsisting the Guard.

Respectfully,

W. H. KERSHNER,

Major, Chief Commissary of Subsistence.

REPORT No. 6.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, I. N. G.
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., November 20, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report:

Pursuant to Paragraph II, G. O. No. 1, Headquarters Second Brigade Maneuver Division, Camp Young, October 1, 1903, I took command of the Brigade Hospital Corps during the combined maneuvers October 1 to 11, 1903.

The Hospital Corps attached to the brigade consisted of the following officers and men:

	Officers.	Men.
Brigade Hospital	1	20
First Infantry	2	1
Second Infantry	2	2
Third Infantry	2	1
Totals	7	24

Each regiment was equipped with two chests, one surgical and one medical. The Artillery Battalion, being represented only by a provisional battery, was not equipped for this tour.

The Brigade Hospital was equipped with—

1 large chest extra medical supplies.
2 small chests extra medical supplies.
1 operating table and stool.
1 sterilizing chest and outfit.
1 large chest bedding linen.
1 large chest pillows.
50 double blankets (hospital).

The last named three items being summarized as bedding equipment for a hospital of twenty beds.

The Hospital Detachment, Brigade Corps, departed Indianapolis September 30, 1903, at 10:30 p. m., and arrived Howard, Ky., October 1, 1903, at 2 a. m., going into camp and establishing hospital upon arrival. On return, the detachment left Howard at 9:30 p. m., October 11, arriving Indianapolis 2:30 a. m., October 12, and detraining at 8 a. m., same date.

Upon recommendation of the Chief Surgeon of the division and by authority of S. O. No. 9, Headquarters Maneuver Division, October 3, 1903, the following named enlisted men of the Hospital Corps were assigned to the Base Hospital for duty during the maneuvers:

Sergeants (first class)—Kennith I. Jeffries, Howard E. Figg, Robert H. Bailey and A. C. Seaton.

Privates (first class)—Harry McDonald, Charles A. Russell, Joel Sturdevant, Harry Dunn, Edson K. Westhafer, Allen R. Sommer and Ted C. Light.

These men received instructions at the Base Hospital along practical lines of nursing, hospital organization, transportation of supplies, sick, wounded, etc.

Each medical officer of this brigade was assigned as inspecting officer to the division for one day during the tour, and such detailed inspection in co-operation with officers of the regular establishment was invaluable, both in itself as in the opportunities thus afforded for comparative studies of camps and methods.

On each maneuver a detachment was detailed, meeting as nearly as possible conditions of actual warfare. Problems of bivouac and following firing lines being somewhat new and immeasurably practical.

There were practically no cases requiring medical treatment during the entire tour. The men were exposed in connection with Problem 5 to severe rainstorms practically continuous for a night and a day, slept all night in clothes and blankets completely drenched, and lay in flooded trenches for hours, but suffered no ill consequences. Only two cases showing symptoms of fever were reported and these men were ordered to their home stations as a precautionary measure. There was, however, no evidence that these cases were necessarily a result of camp conditions. Although the men had several long and hard marches, there was practically no trouble with blistered feet. We had only two cases of minor surgery, both due to accidents—one a fracture caused by a fall in friendly wrestling, and the other a slight bayonet wound.

Conferences were attended as held and daily school was conducted when in camp among the medical officers of the Indiana Brigade, where free comment prevailed and application was made of all instruction and experience.

CAMP SANITATION.

One sharp criticism applies to the maneuvers equally with all other camps that I have seen. It is that too little attention is paid to the actual comfort of the men. Not once have I seen a place of real convenience provided, where a man might wash his face and hands. He must needs carry his water to some stump or box or place it on the ground, and while standing usually in mud and water, go through a farce of cleaning up. The inevitable result is a tendency to slovenliness, and it all traces back to the grudging of a few dollars that would prepare a place of simple convenience for cleanliness.

The same criticism applies to the construction of sinks or latrines, places often of such utter offensiveness that decent men by preference avoid them—a single rough bar for a seat placed over the edge of a crumbling, muddy bank, a really hazardous thing to attempt. At West Point many of them were placed, as in one of the Michigan regiments, in a low-lying cornfield, without any approach, so that ultimately it became a wallow of mud and filth. Here again the expenditure of a few dollars in lumber, a better and safer support and cleaner approach would make camp immeasurably pleasanter. Men would find service more agreeable, and a contented soldier is a good soldier—a discontented one the reverse. The notion generally prevailing that camps of instruction should be places where everything is done without comfort I believe to be false. Take as much luxury and as many ordinary necessities to camp as is possible. In actual war there is enough of ghastly hardship and deprivation without electing it at other times. Men always rise to the occasion if needful, but object to it when not called for.

My observation teaches me that sanitary faults in almost every case are directly traceable to the fact that the company officers subordinate this part of their duty to everything else. Many of them ignore the care of their camps and their men entirely, if possible, their notion being one of drill purely. If company commanders could be held as sharply and as personally responsible for their sanitation as for the condition of the arms and equipments much of this objection would be done away with.

Acknowledgment is due all the officers of the regular establishment for uniform courtesy and helpfulness. At no time was the least reluctance shown in the answering of many questions, many no doubt of such elementary character as must have seemed almost inexcusable.

One recommendation is made, growing out of experience at West Point, and that is, that medical detachments should be sent out to bivouac, find their way across country and meet conditions for themselves as in actual warfare, doing this independently and so developing as a separate department. Too many of our Hospital Corps, who are medical students or young doctors, are rather averse to manual drudgery and regard the service as purely professional. To offset this, teamsters, carpenters and laborers should be included to such an extent that some practical skilled service along all lines might be quickly available.

Very respectfully,

FRED R. CHARLTON,
Major, Surgeon Second Infantry, Acting Chief Surgeon.

REPORT No. 7.

HEADQUARTERS SIGNAL CORPS, I. N. G.
WARSAW, INDIANA, November, 26, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report:

In compliance with G. O. Nos. 9 and 10, A. G. O., 1903, and G. O. Nos. 7 and 8, Headquarters I. N. G., 1903, I left this station October 1, 1903, at 7:30 a. m., arriving at Howard, Kentucky, at 10:30 a. m., October 2. The men of my Signal Corps detachment were routed individually, and all of them detailed for this duty did not report until the afternoon of October 2. At 3:25 p. m., October 2, I reported to Capt. Charles P. Hepburn, commanding Signal Corps, Maneuver Division, one officer and five first class privates.

I took as equipment for this tour four heliographs complete, four torches, six pair field glasses, five pocket compasses, six pocket relays, cipher disks, five flags and staffs, two linemen's outfits, field desk, books and record.

The Signal Corps, I. N. G., was quartered with the regular corps and was assigned to the command of Captain D. J. Carr, U. S. S. C., performing duties in the regular course of service, and in that way obtaining a great deal of practical experience in the actual work of a campaign and the methods in use in the regular establishment. Members of the detachment were used in the various field maneuvers and became familiar with the more recent developments of signaling, all of which should certainly prove of great benefit to our own service in the National Guard.

The regular officers of the U. S. Signal Corps present and active at the Maneuvers were Capt. Charles B. Hepburn, Capt. D. J. Carr, Capt. Geo. S. Gibbs, First Lieut. Frank E. Lyman, First Lieut. William Mitchell, and First Lieut. Henry S. Hathaway, all of whom had seen foreign service in actual campaigns, and were without exception extremely obliging and courteous, giving instruction to our men that could not possibly have been acquired from books or National Guard Camps of Instruction alone.

Respectfully,

JOHN N. LEHEW,
First Lieutenant commanding Signal Corps.

REPORT No. 8.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Dec. 5, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the participation of this regiment in the joint maneuvers at Camp Young, West Point, Kentucky, September 30 to October 11, 1903:

Pursuant to G. O. No. 8, Headquarters I. N. G., 1903, the Headquarters and band, and First Battalion, Second Infantry, consisting of Companies A, D, C, and H, left Indianapolis over the Pennsylvania Railroad for West Point, Kentucky, at 9:40 p. m., September 30, and arrived at Howard Station about 3:00 a. m., October 1. Camp was established in an open field lying on the Louisville and Nashville Pike about 800 yards south of Howard Station. The Second and Third Battalions did not arrive in camp until 10:00 a. m., October 2d.

The strength of the regiment during this tour of duty consisted of 49 officers and 423 enlisted men.

This regiment participated in the various maneuvers, exercises, formations and ceremonies as outlined in the program furnished by Division Headquarters as follows:

Friday, October 2.—Inspection of model intrenchments. The First Battalion of this regiment was employed for the purpose of illustration to occupy the model trenches constructed by the U. S. Engineers and Regular Infantry, west of the Second Brigade camp. The opportunity to study the various trenches and gun-pits in actual existence was greatly appreciated by all our officers.

Saturday, October 3.—Problem 4. Formation of an outpost. A special report on this exercise, copy of one made at the time through Headquarters, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division, is appended marked "H."

Sunday, October 4.—Problem 4. March out as in a friendly country to Boone crossroads, there to bivouac for the night to be in readiness for the maneuvers on Monday morning.

Monday, October 5.—Problem 5. Division as rear guard occupying defensive position.

Thursday, October 8.—Problem 6. Attack and defense. For this battle exercise, for purposes of experience, the command of the Second Brigade, Maneuver Division, was turned over to me as senior colonel. Copy of order of march governing this maneuver is appended marked "O." Also special report rendered to the Adjutant-General, Blue Army, at the time, marked "P." Also special report of Lieut.-Col. Stephen A. Bowman, on part taken by Third Infantry, marked "Q." Also map showing positions at the close of this exercise, marked "R." The following officers of the staff of the general commanding the Second Brigade served on my staff for this occasion: First Lieut. Alfred B. Schanz, A. D. C., Acting Assistant Adjutant-General; Major William H. Kershner, Chief Commissary; Major Carroll B. Carr, Chief Quartermaster and First Lieut. of Artillery, Robert H. Tyndall—the last three acting as aides.

Friday, October 9.—The regiment participated in the division review.

Saturday, October 10.—Orders were given for the regiment to break camp at 11:00 a. m. Headquarters, band and First Battalion left Howard Station at 8:00 p. m., October 10, and arrived at Indianapolis at 8:00 a. m., October 11. The other eight companies left Howard Station at 6:00 p. m. and 7:00 p. m., October 10.

These maneuvers and field exercises gave the regiment an opportunity to participate in work which, I think, was vastly beneficial to it in every way, as it gave an opportunity to participate in exercises and formations which it is impossible to have at the home station, on account of the limited space or ground in which the guard can operate.

The conduct of the entire regiment was excellent in every way, and the work was most satisfactory.

The health of the regiment was exceedingly good and the discipline of the men first class.

I feel that every one was benefited by the work during the stay at West Point, and the lessons taught were practical in every way, and it presented an opportunity to both officers and men of the guard to see the weakness of certain work and the necessity of greater work in battle exercise, extended order and field formation.

Since returning to the home station I have directed the company commanders to take up with their various organizations the work done during the army maneuvers, and have had charts and maps drawn which will be furnished to each company during the following week, in the hope that they will be enabled to take up this work theoretically and be better prepared in the future for exercises of the kind participated in during our stay in Kentucky.

I am, sir, very respectfully yours,

H. B. SMITH,
Colonel, Second Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 8. APPENDIX "N."

CAMP YOUNG, WEST POINT, KENTUCKY,
October 3, 1903.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division:

Sir—I have the honor to report in compliance with paragraph 3, memorandum No. 5, Headquarters Maneuver Division, Camp Young, West Point, Kentucky, October 2, 1903, the Second Regiment, Indiana National Guard, with the strength of 47 officers and 393 men, left camp at 8:00 a. m., accompanied by umpires Major George A. Zinn, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., and Captain John F. Preston, Twenty-sixth U. S. Infantry, proceeding via Pilcher Point road to the Cormack house; thence over a road running due north to the Greenly house, arriving at that point at 8:45 a. m. The ground designated for our movements was bounded by the Ohio River on the north, the fence just west of the cavalry camp on the east, the L. H. & St. L. Railroad on the south, and the Cormack and Greenly road on the west.

Immediately upon arrival at the Greenly house the following disposition was made of the troops: Major H. T. Conde, with companies A, C, and D, of the First Battalion was directed to proceed in a southeasterly direction and establish a line of Cossack posts on the arc of a circle, with the right resting upon the Cormack house, and the left coming in contact with the Ohio River at the northeast corner of the allotted ground, covering a distance of about 1,300 yards. This was done with fourteen posts, and, in addition, two interior posts were established, where particularly favorable ground was found for the observation of the surrounding country.

The Second Battalion, commanded by Major John J. Backman, Companies E, F, G and I, and Company H, of the First Battalion, were placed in the line of supports at a distance of about 400 yards in the rear of the Cossack posts.

The Third Battalion, commanded by Major J. H. Tarlton, consisting of Companies E, K, L and M, was designated as the reserve, and took up a position just south of the Greenly barn, where concealment was permitted in a cornfield.

These posts were established and ready for inspection at 10:05 a. m. The umpires inspected the same, and the line of supports.

The umpires then directed that we assume an enemy was advancing upon our outposts, and that we take the necessary precaution to repel the attack. The sentinels, upon discovering the approach of the enemy, fired upon them, and then retired to their posts. A fire was opened from these, at the same time word was sent back to the supports saying that it would be impossible for them to resist the enemy but for a short period.

Thereupon they were directed to fall back upon the line of support. The enemy advanced with a heavy force from the east, their line forming a parallel to the lane running north from the Prewitt barn. The reserve was then sent into action reinforcing the left wing of our front, arriving on the firing line eleven minutes after the firing of the first shot by the sentinels in the extreme front. Immediately volley firing was begun at 600 yards, five volleys being fired before cease firing was sounded. The men fired directly according to orders, and in no case was it noticed that the number of shots ordered was exceeded. Cease firing having been sounded, the assembly was blown, and the battalions were formed and marched back into the open field. The entire exercise was completed by 12:15 p. m. After mess the battalions were marched back into camp, arriving at 2:20 p. m.

The instructions in paragraph 4, Circular No. 1, concerning the inspection of cartridge belts, were strictly carried out. The troops were cautioned in regard to taking advantage of all cover, and particular stress was laid upon the fire discipline. The above was observed in the most faithful manner. Men and officers showed eagerness in the execution of all details.

I am, sir, very respectfully yours,

HARRY B. SMITH,
Colonel.

REPORT No. 8. APPENDIX "O."

HEADQUARTERS BLUE FORCES,
CAMP YOUNG, KENTUCKY, October 7, 1903.

Order of march for October 8th.

Distribution of Forces.	1. The enemy is encamped at Vine Grove. Their outpost line north of Stithton. Our army advances tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.
CAVALRY. (Capt. Brewer, 7th Cav., Comdg.) 4 Troops 7th Cav. with 4 guns.	2. Object: To attack the enemy wherever found and drive him back. 3. Instructions for Capt. Brewer: To move rapidly via Fort Hill road, 46, 42, 44, Connel's house to 54, and from there moving west and endeavoring to strike the flank and rear of the enemy, after the enemy has been heavily engaged in front. In case the enemy is met in force beyond 52 and he is compelled to fall back, Capt. Brewer is to retreat to Connel's house, covering the road 42–54.
2 Troops and 2 guns, (Capt. Waterman Comdg.)	To move rapidly via Muldraugh road to 51, thence to 79. This force to be used as a feint on the enemy's left; to this end it will attack boldly any body of the enemy found, avoiding a compromising engagement. When fighting on foot, the deployment will be made with large intervals, magazine fire used.
INFANTRY. 1st Brigade, 1st and 3rd Infantry.	To proceed to "I" on L. and N. pike via Ft. Hill road through 99, 44, 48, 50. On arrival at "I" to deploy facing south, the right resting near the Rahm house.
1st Brig. Hdqtrs with the 1st Wis. and 3rd Bat. 20th Infantry.	To proceed via "C" and "F" on L. and N. pike to "H," thence via Clay roads, the head of the column to 81, then deploying to the south, the left near the Rahm house, connecting with the 1st and 3rd Infantry.
2nd Brigade, via the.	To proceed, the 3rd Regiment in advance, via the Muldraugh road, leading regiment to 53, from thence it deploys, advancing in the direction of Tip Top. 1st and 2nd Regiments to 49 thence to 85, and from that point in direction of the Rahm house to be used as a reserve in center of 1st Brigade.

Two troops Seventh Cavalry will be directed by Captain Brewer to report to Brigade Commanders, one to each Brigade, to be used for scouting purposes. The line from "I," the Rahm house, to 81 having deployed, will move south in general direction to "M" 93. On arriving at Tip Top the Third Indiana will conform to the general forward movement in the direction of Stithton "93," keeping its left as near the Leitchfield road as possible. The Division Headquarters will be at the Rahm house.

REPORT No. 8. APPENDIX "P."

CAMP YOUNG, WEST POINT, KY.,
October 3, 1903.

Adjutant-General, Blue Forces:

Sir—I have the honor to report that in compliance with orders received from Colonel George S. Anderson, Eighth Cavalry, U. S. A., commanding the Blue forces, and after having a careful inspection made in all subordinate commands under paragraph 4, Circular No. 1, Headquarters Maneuver Division, I reported result to the Adjutant-General as satisfactory and moved the Second Brigade Blue Army from its camp on the Louisville and Nashville pike this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The Brigade consisted of the First, Second and Third Regiments of the Indiana National Guard, aggregating 137 officers and 1,221 enlisted men, and the Brigade Hospital Corps; and there was also assigned to the Brigade, Troop M, Seventh Cavalry, U. S. A.

The march continued as in a friendly country along the Louisville and Nashville pike as far as the Illinois Central Railroad trestles; thence along the Muldraugh road up the steep ascent as far as the Tioga Springs road, where I halted the column at 10:58 to rest the men and take the precautions necessary on a march through territory supposedly occupied by the enemy. The cavalry was sent ahead as an advance party with directions to scout along the Muldraugh road and the territory on either side of the same. The cavalry was then about 700 yards forward of the head of the main body. As per orders the Third Regiment was at the head of the column. Company K of said regiment was sent forward as an advance guard with instructions to send out flankers with as many connecting files as the terrain of the country would permit, so as to keep in constant communication with the head of the column.

This formation being completed regimental commanders were cautioned to keep their men in good formation on the road, to see that silence was maintained and no trespassing on private property or straggling be permitted. I desire to state here that these orders were satisfactorily obeyed. These dispositions being made during the halt of twelve minutes, the march was resumed at 11:10 a. m., and proceeded along the Muldraugh road.

At 11:21 Captain Waterman commanding two troops and two guns on the right flank of the Blues, and who had preceded my brigade along the Muldraugh road, reported by courier that the Muldraugh road was clear to 53, and a half mile east and a half mile south of 53, and with the request that this information be transmitted to Colonel Anderson. I sent an aid with it, who proceeded along the Muldraugh road to the Blakely road and thence to the Louisville and Nashville pike to find this headquarters. It was due to this aid that I first learned that the enemy were on the Blakely road about one mile from its intersection with the Muldraugh road at No. 53.

The march of the Brigade continued as far as 53. At this point, as per orders, the Third Regiment, I. N. G., was ordered to deploy and proceed in the direction of Tip Top. The Second Infantry had halted with its right resting at No. 49, and the First Regiment about 300 yards farther down the road toward 53. As these two regiments were to act as reserves I moved them in a southeasterly direction toward 85 in parallel columns in the direction of the Rahm house, the First Regiment marching on No. 83, and the Second Regiment on 85. At a point about midway between 49 and 83 and 85, the aid before mentioned who had started to carry the report of Captain Waterman, returned and informed me that he had encountered the Browns on the Blakely road about one mile from 53. The march was continued with scouts advanced well to the front who reported that they had seen a small body of Brown cavalry. Immediately following this report another scout reported that the enemy were advancing along the line southeast of the Blakely road and parallel to the same. I immediately ordered the Second Regiment, I. N. G., to form left front into line of companies in columns of fours, and to form line of resistance along the Blakely road with its right resting at 85, and its left near the Akens house. This had hardly been done before the enemy appeared in force coming across the open field from the woods extending from the Elliott house to the sawmill south of 85. Other scouts brought information that a line of Brown Infantry skirmishers were advancing on each side of the road through the woods running from 83 to 81 and about 600 yards distant from 83. I immediately ordered the First Regiment, I. N. G., to throw out a line to intercept them before they could reach 83, and that the left of their line should connect with the line of the Second Infantry, I. N. G., at the Beeler house at No. 85. The order to take the above formation was given at 11:55, and at 12:10 the enemy having appeared in large numbers were given three volleys by the Second Infantry from their concealed position along the Blakely road. A few minutes later two companies of the Browns advancing in column of fours from a point south of the sawmill were given three volleys by the Third Battalion of the Second Regiment and by the left company of the First Infantry, who had just arrived and taken position. The enemy continued to advance across the open field and heavy volley firing was ordered as the Browns were seen to be receiving reinforcements to their line. They advanced across the open until they reached a wire fence in a hollow south of the road and about parallel with it at a distance of about 200 yards from the Blakely road. Meanwhile I had sent orders to Colonel McCoy of the First Regiment to advance his right so as to intercept the enemy should they attempt to get on his right flank. The Second Infantry had occupied the sunken Blakely road from 85 to a point near the Akens house, refusing the left to conform to the road and head off the enemy's attempt to outflank the line. The First Infantry engaged the enemy from a point west of the sawmill south of 85, making a perfect flank attack and enfilading the Browns' position, while the Second poured a very heavy and steady fire directly toward the front. The Browns were thus in a cross fire in an absolutely untenable position, while the First Regiment, I. N. G., was in the outer edge of a woods facing eastward, and the Second Infantry, I. N. G., in a sunken road the military crest of a ridge forming an almost perfect ready-made intrenchment. Some of the enemy's reinforcements came from the woods behind them in close order and the mounted officers were in plain view and range. From their positions behind the lower wire fence the enemy fired apparently at will. At about 12:30 the Brown line was suddenly seen to climb the fence as if to charge up the hill over the open field. Five volleys were fired into them when the umpire with them ordered the sounding of "cease firing," leaving the Brown line plainly exposed at a distance of about 150 yards from the intrenched position of the two regiments of my brigade. The umpire decided a loss of only thirty men in our forces, and ordered both the First and Second Regiments to retire and assemble.

The Third Regiment of this Brigade was not within the field of my observation after deploying from 53 toward Tip Top, and the appended report of its commanding officer will supplement the present report. My orders were to have the Third Regiment, I. N. G., when it had reached 53 on the Blakely road deploy and march toward Tip Top. This was done, and my orders for the First and Second Regiments, I. N. G., were to proceed to 49, thence to 85, and from that point in the direction of the Rahm house to be used as a reserve in the center of the First Brigade. These orders were followed implicitly until we encountered the Brown enemy, as per the above report. Orders were received to expend the balance of the ammunition and then return to camp, which was done where the First and Second Regiments arrived at 4:30 and 4:35 p. m.

I enclose you report of Lt.-Col. S. A. Bowman, commanding Third Infantry—such report being marked "Q."

I am, sir, very respectfully,

HARRY B. SMITH,

Colonel Second Infantry, I. N. G., commanding 2d Brigade, Blue Army.

REPORT No. 8. APPENDIX "Q."

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.
WEST POINT, KENTUCKY, October 8, 1903.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report regarding the part taken by the Third Infantry in the attack and defense exercise known as

PROBLEM 6.

The Third Infantry as part of the Second Brigade was assigned to the Blue Army, the Division being commanded by Col. Anderson, Eighth U. S. Cavalry, and the Second Brigade by Col. Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry, I. N. G.

In the order of march for October 8, Headquarters Blue forces October 7, 1903, the Third Infantry was placed in the advance of the Brigade, and ordered to proceed via the Muldraugh road to "53," thence to deploy advancing in the direction of Tip Top. (See Report No. 8, Appendix "O.") On arriving at Tip Top the regiment was to conform to the general forward movement in the direction of Stithton "93," keeping its left as near the Leitchfield road as possible.

In obedience to these orders this regiment with a strength of 36 officers and 432 men marched at the head of the column on the morning of the Sth, and upon arrival at Tioga Springs road at 11:00 a. m., Troop M of the Seventh Cavalry having been sent ahead as advance cavalry, Company K of this command formed an advance guard in regular formation, and led the column without opposition or incident to "53." There the brigade commander dismissed the regiment to act independently in accordance with its special orders. The time then was 11:40 a. m. The advance guard was immediately assembled by silent signals, and almost at the same time, an aid of the brigade commander, who had attempted to reach Colonel Anderson on the L. and N. pike passed the regiment at "53," and reported Brown cavalry scouts half a mile east on the Blakely road. I therefore sent one company to scout along the Blakely road to "83" and thence southward along the Neighborhood road, to protect our left flank, and at once formed the regiment in two skirmish lines, the first consisting of the Second Battalion, the second of the First Battalion, and the Third Battalion followed in line of sections. The distance between the lines when the advance began was about 150 yards, but increased greatly on the march until, when unexpected contact with the enemy occurred on our left flank, the battalions practically acted independently of one another.

The left of our lines was on the edge of the Neighborhood woods as we advanced in the direction of Tip Top. It appeared that Brown Infantry at this time was pushing through the woods, and their left missed the left of our first line. The opposing lines might have passed each other altogether had not the extreme left of the Browns debouched from the woods had been discovered. Fortunately our cavalry scouts had realized the situation in time to warn the commanding officer of the Second Battalion to prevent a flank and interior attack. The first line promptly changed front to the rear and swung its left eastward, occupying the crest of a ridge and getting into its new position before the firing began. Almost immediately the enemy's advancing lines began to debouch from woods and ravines in the new front and advance across the open. An umpire of the Browns inspected the positions of the opposing forces and decided that the Browns could not have dislodged the Blue Battalion. The Browns were four companies of Kentucky Infantry. This skirmish took place at 1:00 p. m., the position of the Second Battalion being southeast of the "Broff" house and facing northeast toward the neighborhood wood. Soon after the advance from "53" began, I decided to extend the first line by pushing the First Battalion to the right until its right should reach the railroad, and then converge toward Tip Top. The line of the First Battalion was intended to be coincident with a prolongation of that of the Second, but the two battalions lost touch when the First entered a very roughly cut up woods southwest of the Masters' house, and not indicated on the map. At 12:26 I with my staff reached the railroad track on the extreme right of my first line, near the point which on the map shows the county line crossing the railroad. The reserve under Major Harrison was deployed and following in the rear of the First Battalion. Hearing the heavy firing eastward, I swung the first line on its left, the right passing the north of the little pond shown about 600 yards north of Tip Top. The reserve forming the second line remained northwest of the pond, and when the firing toward the northeast showed that our Second Battalion was engaged, Major Harrison took his three companies of reserves to Major Kuhlman's assistance, but arrived just as "recall" was sounded.

The First Battalion still in skirmish line, it appeared later, was at 12:48 practically aligned on the right of the Second Battalion as originally intended, but the whole regiment had been swung around to the northward. Our line north of the pond was now in position to open fire on the Brown left in flank and rear. I halted the line on favorable ground, and at 1:14 opened, at a range of 300 yards, fire on a company of the Eighth Ohio, detached from its regiment, the Brown company being retired with a loss of ten men.

"Recall" was sounded at 1:25 p. m. and the Second and Third Battalions marched back to camp from their positions, while I returned with the First Battalion. The company which had been sent out on the Blakely and Neighborhood roads from "53" returned to camp with the First Infantry.

Very respectfully,

S. A. BOWMAN,
Lieutenant-Colonel commanding Third Infantry.

REPORT No. 9.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY,
VINCENNES, IND., November 26, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report of the tour of duty of this regiment at Camp Young near West Point, Kentucky, October 1st to 10th ultimo.

I left here at 1:45 a. m., October 1st, with Major Coulter, Third Battalion, and Captain Bierhaus, Regimental Quartermaster, and three officers and 41 men of Company A, by way of the B. & O. S. W. Railroad and arrived in Louisville about 7:30 a. m. of the same day, but owing to poor railroad facilities was unable to get to West Point until after one o'clock. Upon arrival at camp I found Company E, which had left Evansville at 7:00 a. m. via L. H. & St. L. and had beaten us in by some two or three hours. The companies came straggling in all afternoon and some three or four did not get into camp until 10:00 a. m., October 2. With the exception of the Evansville Company the whole regiment was sent around by way of Louisville, which entailed great delay and annoyances. The Martinsville, Spencer, Terre Haute and Vincennes Companies could have been routed by way of Evansville, avoided the crush at and below Louisville, reached camp at 7:00 o'clock the same morning, and it would not have cost the government one cent more for transportation.

As soon as practicable camp was established and the regular routine of duties taken up.

The regiment took part in only one independent, detached maneuver, that of problem 4, the formation of an advance guard for a division, on October 3d. A special report on this exercise is appended marked "N."

The tour of duty was a very beneficial one in every way, and many of the mistakes made this year will not be made again.

From a sanitary point of view the work was disappointing, and not up to that seen in our regiment at its State Encampment. I attribute the trouble in this respect to lack of time to get things in shape at the start.

The regiment broke camp October 10th and the sub-commands left for home stations on various trains during the day,

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. McCOY,
Colonel First Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 9. APPENDIX "S."

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.
WEST POINT, KENTUCKY, October 3, 1903.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the field maneuver of this date by the First Infantry, I. N. G., viz., the formation of an advance guard for a division, otherwise problem 4.

My orders were to leave camp at 6:00 a. m. and march to Muldraugh, moving on the Muldraugh road. The march was supposed to be in a hostile country and all precautions accordingly taken. The regiment was ordered to bivouac at Muldraugh, or just beyond the town.

The regiment was promptly formed and inspected for ball cartridges and moved exactly at six o'clock—a fact favorably commented on by the senior umpire with the column, Colonel Joseph H. Dorst, Third U. S. Cavalry. The advance guard formation was taken after the head of the column passed the Pike trestle and entered the Muldraugh road. The Third Battalion was assigned as the advance party of the vanguard, and its commander, Major Coulter, to the command of the vanguard. The Second Battalion formed the support and the First Battalion the reserve. The formation was normal, the advance party sending forward a point and sending flankers to the right and left. As the regiment ascended the steep road, the flankers on the left had to climb precipitous rocks and those on the right had very dense and rough woodland to traverse, so that by the time the head of the column had crossed the Illinois Central Railroad at Tioga Station, passed the Tioga Springs road, and reached the little road from the east at "43," the right flankers had lost connection with the column, and I ordered patrols sent out to find them and bring them back into touch. This delayed the column until 7:00 a. m., whereupon the march proceeded.

After passing "47" and near Tripp's house the point discovered Brown cavalry scouts at 7:30 and fired at them. The advance company was deployed, flankers sent out by the support, field and staff officers dismounted, and the column proceeded slowly coming into contact with the enemy's scouts again at the Grimes house and at "53," the Blakely road, where dismounted cavalry had taken cover. Our left flankers coming through the Neighborhood woods, dislodged the enemy from this position and the Browns mounted under fire at short range. The column continued its march with occasional short halts, and deployments of parts of the support and reserve in their relative positions to repel flank attacks, until at 9:00 a. m., when the exercise ended, the point had passed through Muldraugh and the rest of the advance party was in the village. The support was about entering the village and the reserve a quarter of a mile further back, skirmishing with the Browns on their left.

The principal criticisms expressed by the senior umpire was that the column had allowed itself to be too much delayed by insignificant opposition and that the men showed more disposition to seek cover than to keep driving off the enemy and clear the road for the main body following.

The regiment bivouacked in a grove south of Muldraugh on the east side of the road until 4:30 p m., so as not to interfere with other commands advancing along the Muldraugh road for similar maneuvers, and marched back to camp.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. McCOY,
Colonel, First Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 10.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY,
WATERLOO, IND., November 27, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report:

Pursuant to G. O. No. 8, Headquarters I. N. G., 1903, I left home station on the evening of September 30 and arrived at Howard, Kentucky, at 9:00 a. m., October 1st. The companies of my command arrived at intervals during the day, after many delays caused by the insufficiency of railroad facilities. The camp of the Third Infantry was on the west of the lane leading from the L. and N. pike to the Applegate house, being the nearest of the brigade to Howard Station. The strength of the regiment was 40 officers and 463 men.

This regiment took part in three principal maneuvers, problems 4, 5 and 6. Copies of special reports on problems 4 and 5 made at the time through Headquarters Second Brigade, Maneuver Division, are appended to this report, marked "T" and "U." A special field report on the part taken by this regiment in problem 6, was made at the time to the Assistant Adjutant-General Second Brigade, and incorporated with the report of Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry, who commanded the brigade on that occasion. (See Report No. 8, Appendix "Q.")

I think the experience of the officers and men in camp, and also having the privilege of maneuvering with the regular army was a great lesson, as frequent remarks from officers and men were to the effect that they had learned more in maneuvers of this kind than they had during their whole service in the Spanish-American War.

The sanitary condition of the camp was most of the time excellent, very largely on account of the efforts of Regimental Surgeon Major Barnett, who was always on the alert looking to the betterment of this part of the service. Very few men were sick—due also, I think, to the absence of intoxicating liquors.

Rations were issued to the companies in abundance, and of the best quality, and no complaints were offered of any one not having enough to eat.

The Third Infantry broke camp at 10:00 a. m., October 11th, preparatory to departure to home stations. Most of the companies in the northern part of the state, however, did not arrive at their home stations until October 12th.

Respectfully,

S. A. BOWMAN,
Lieutenant-Colonel commanding Third Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 10. APPENDIX "T."

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.
CAMP YOUNG, WEST POINT, KY., October 3, 1903.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report of field maneuvers, Third Infantry, I. N. G., October 3, 1903, problem No. 4—the formation of an advance guard for a division.

My orders were to leave camp at 2:00 p. m., October 3, and march to Muldraugh, moving on the Muldraugh road, the march being supposed to be in an enemy's country, necessitating all precautions, and the regiment to be the advance guard of a division. The regiment was to bivouac at Muldraugh, or just beyond the town.

After a careful inspection by company commanders of their men for ball cartridges, the regiment, 35 officers and 450 men, marched out of camp promptly at two o'clock, via L. and N. pike and Muldraugh road, adopting its advance guard formation when the head of the column reached Tioga Springs road. The Second Battalion, under Major Kuhlman, formed the advance party; the Third Battalion, under Major J. R. Harrison, formed the support; and the First Battalion, under Captain George W. Freyermuth, the reserve. In the leading battalion, the First Company formed the point and support; the Second and Third Companies were sent out right and left as flankers to patrol the woods of 500 yards; the Fourth Company formed the reserve of the advance party. Unfortunately, owing to the very rough and difficult character of the country on that side, the right flanking company lost connection with the column. At the same time the support of the advance guard threw out flankers to protect the support and reserve.

The column proceeded without opposition until near the Grimes house ("49") when the point was fired on by dismounted Brown cavalry. The point halted and with the rest of the advance party took position on the left of the road behind the fence and returned the fire. The Browns mounted and retreated toward "53" and took up a new position on the Blakely road. The left flanking company was, however, already in shape to gain a position on the enemy's right along the Blakely road, and between the fires the Browns, consisting of one or two troops of the Seventh U. S. Cavalry, were dislodged. Meanwhile, I ordered Companies A and M to attempt to flank the enemy by a detour through timber and a cornfield to the right. They were successful and the opposing force suddenly found themselves under fire from both flanks and their direct front. The umpires on both sides decided that the Browns were practically annihilated. The loss assessed to the Blues was only ten men. The left flanking company was preparing to charge the Browns on the Blakely road without orders, and began to run, when the umpires called a halt and "recall" was sounded immediately afterward, at 4:30 p. m.

The regiment assembled and marched back to camp, where it arrived at 6:30 o'clock.

Very respectfully,

S. A. BOWMAN,
Lieutenant-Colonel commanding Third Infantry.

REPORT No. 10. APPENDIX "U."

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY,
WEST POINT, KY., October 5, 1903.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Second Brigade, Maneuver Division:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report on

PROBLEM No. 5.

The Third Infantry left camp at 3:00 p. m., October 4, 1903, consisting of 37 officers and 413 men. The march was on the L. and N. pike and connecting roads to the Boone crossroads, where the brigade went into bivouac in a driving rain, which wet all the members of the regiment to the skin. At six o'clock on the morning of October 5th orders were received to select a strong defensive position, the right connecting with the First Michigan troops at the Fisher house. The regiment was to arrive on the position at 8:00 o'clock a. m. and to throw out 70 men as outposts and pickets; also to deploy 170 men as supports, who were to cover a frontage of three-quarters of a mile. The Third Battalion, under command of Major J. R. Harrison, established outposts and pickets connecting with the First Indiana at the railroad near Tip Top and with the First Michigan at the Fisher house. The support, under command of Captain George W. Freyermuth of the First Battalion, took position about 500 yards in rear of the outposts; and at the same time Major A. L. Kuhlman of the Second Battalion, commanding the reserve, took position about 500 yards in rear of support. After this disposition was made, the commanding officer inspected his positions and found the outposts had not been placed far enough in advance of the timber to properly observe the approach of an enemy, and at 10:45 a. m. the outposts, support and reserve, were ordered to advance approximately 500 yards in their same relative positions so as to connect the line of observation at No. 81 on the right and Tip Top on the left. The outposts discovered the Blues at No. 81 and fired several shots at small detachments of cavalry at 12:30 p. m. and Cossack posts from Companies G, L and M, fired three rounds at 500 yards at a troop of the Seventh U. S. Cavalry, putting them out of action for thirty minutes with a loss of one-third of their men and a loss of but five from our outposts. At 1:30 p. m. firing had begun on small detachments of the Blue cavalry all along the Brown front. The firing continued until 2:00 p. m., when the Blue infantry charged the outposts of G and L Companies, driving them back to their supports and putting one-half of the Brown detachment out of action.

The Brown line was reinforced from Companies E and M and hostilities were resumed. At about the same time Company A engaged two troops of the Seventh Cavalry near Tip Top, putting two-thirds of the command out of action, with a loss of five men. The firing became general all along the line until the Third Battalion acting as outposts had exhausted their ammunition. The line of supports was occupied by Companies E, F, H and I. One platoon of Company F was intrenched at the Fisher house, the other at the edge of the woods just west of the Fisher house commanding the open space at the front. Company I was located just west of the Leitchfield road, Company H on a high hill just about 100 yards farther to the west; Company E east of the Lewis house on the Tip Top road. At 12:30 p. m. Company E was sent to No. 81 to strengthen the outposts engaged with Brown cavalry; one platoon of Company H was ordered to the Fisher house to occupy the position formerly held by Company E. At 2:15 p. m. Company I was ordered to No. 81 to support the firing line in the outpost skirmish.

The "recall" was sounded at about 2:30 p. m. and after a short delay the troops returned to camp over the same route they had taken the previous day. All the men were thoroughly drenched with rain and mud.

Very respectfully,

STEPHEN A. BOWMAN,
Lieutenant-Colonel commanding Third Infantry.

REPORT No. 11.

HEADQUARTERS ARTILLERY BATTALION, I. N. G.
ROCKVILLE, INDIANA, Nov. 28, 1903.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report:

Upon receiving G. O. No. 10, A. G. O., 1903, and G. O. No. 8, Headquarters I. N. G., 1903, I arranged to have the Artillery Battalion represented at the joint maneuvers, Camp Young, West Point, Kentucky, by a provisional battery harmonizing with conditions of arms and equipment existing in my batteries. It was decided to take one platoon from each battery, "B" furnishing the right platoon, "A" the center, and "C" the left, of the provisional battery. Battery "C" being armed with Hotchkiss two-pounder mountain guns, the battery commander made arrangements with Purdue University for the temporary use of two 3.2 in. field pieces issued by the National Government to the military department of that institution. Captain W. C. Cleary, Battery "B;" Captain J. L. Glascock, Batery "C," and Lieutenant C. A. Railsback, Battery "A," acted as platoon commanders of the provisional battery. The strength of the latter, showing representation of the batteries, was as follows:

	Officers.	Men.
Field and staff	1	0
Battery A	1	39
Battery B	1	30
Battery C	1	59
Total	4	128

Orders were given from these headquarters for this battery to rendezvous at Indianapolis at the armory of Battery A on Wednesday, September 30, at 11:00 a. m., but owing to difficulties and delays in railroad transportation, the battery was not assembled until Thursday morning, October 1.

The entire battery entrained at the Union Station at 11 o'clock a. m., October 1, and after great delay caused by traffic congestion between Louisville and Howard, Kentucky, arrived at West Point at 11 o'clock a. m., October 2. I reported my arrival to Major G. A. Woodward, A. C., U. S. A., commanding the Divisional Artillery, who at once in person showed us the ground to be occupied by our camp.

A battery guard was immediately mounted and the infantry guard which had been on duty up to our arrival, was relieved. Many of the horses were found small, our collars too large for them, and an insufficient supply of pads later on caused galls and bruised shoulders. The quality of horses was fair, but contained an unusual percentage of balks and unbroken colts, which gave us much trouble in the maneuvers and several these impaired our mobility at critical moments. Several horses had been injured before our arrival by stable bruises, kicks and wire cuts, and could not be harnessed. The Quartermaster-General of the State, upon his arrival, arranged with the veterinary of the regular artillery to look after our sick and injured animals. I mention the condition of our horses particularly as accounting for several instances of loss in action, under rulings of umpires during the maneuvers.

The time on October 2 and 3 was fully occupied with perfecting our camp, fitting harness, organizing and drilling the battery. We accomplished something in the way of mounted drills in the field occupied by the assembly tent, at this and other times not taken up by maneuvers.

PROBLEM 5.

On Sunday, October 4, I was ordered to report to General Bliss, U. S. A., who gave orders that our battery march from camp at 3:15 p. m. for Stithton, at which place we were to go into bivouac for the night. This order was carried out, our battery arriving and going into bivouac at 6 o'clock p. m. in a downpour of rain near the schoolhouse on the Stithton road.

At 9 o'clock p. m. I attended a meeting of officers at the hotel at Stithton, after which I was ordered to report at the schoolhouse to Colonel Williams, commanding Fourth Brigade. After a consultation of the officers at the schoolhouse I was ordered to ride over the grounds at daylight with a view of selecting suitable artillery positions for the location of the battery. This was done at 5 o'clock a. m. October 5th, and I reported again at 8 o'clock to Colonel Williams, who ordered the battery to move to the positions at once. I disposed of the left platoon by sending them near the Fisher house, Captain Glascock in command; the center platoon in charge of Lieutenant Railsback to the elevation opposite the McGarvin house; and the right platoon, Captain Cleary in command, to the high elevation at Stovall, near Kenton Cross Roads. From the latter position the entire terrain was commanded from Fisher's to the L. & N. pike. Range 3,300 yards, and 1,300 yards of the L. & N. pike covered; 600 yards of the Stithton road from L to between "56" and "58," and by moving 200 yards to the rear with excellent cover this platoon could command 1,400 yards of the Langley road. This position was very strong, as the platoon had excellent protection, Colonel Williams riding to within fifteen yards of the guns before discovering its position. The support of this platoon was one platoon of infantry.

The center platoon had a position near the McGarvin house, from which 1,000 yards of the L. & N. pike was commanded, as well as all territory between the L. & N. pike and Fisher's, and had a line of covered retreat open to them to reinforce the right platoon at Stovalls. The center platoon also had one platoon of infantry as support.

The left platoon was the only part of this battery that got into action (at Fisher's), firing the first five shots in the artillery duel, at Blue artillery west of the Welch house; and, although put out of action it was not until the opposing battery was ruled out. (Range 1,000 to 1,300 yards.)

"Impossible conditions" having developed, "Recall" was sounded before this maneuver was finished, our battery was reassembled and marched to camp, arriving at dusk.

PROBLEM No. 6.

In the other maneuver in which the Indiana Battery took part I also reported to General Bliss and was ordered to march at 6 o'clock a. m. October 8th, to Boone Cross Roads and there await orders. We marched by the way of the L. & N. pike, Stithton and Bloomington roads, arriving about 9:45, taking this longer road as the ground was very soft and our tracks could have been easily followed had we turned off at the Tip Top road. We watered and fed our horses and the men had mess; at 11 o'clock we were ordered forward with an escort of one platoon of cavalry, but were halted at the unnamed road at 87, which turns off from the Leitchfield road near Fisher's to await further orders. This was the worst place which could have been found to halt a battery in an enemy's country. I, however, sent out a reconnoitering party and kept as well posted as possible as to the movements of the Blue army. We were finally ordered forward, four guns, to a position north of Triplett's and one platoon behind the crest of a wooded hill at Stovall's on the Tip Top road. Five of my six guns did good service. One gun was placed out of action by the failure of the Chief of Section to comply promptly with orders. This was a section from the right platoon.

A good deal of trouble was had by both artillery and infantry commanders on account of staff officers giving orders to the commands direct. This was, however, finally remedied by the umpires.

In breaking camp our battery was ordered to entrain at 12:00 noon, October 10, and we broke camp and marched to the station at 11:30 o'clock, but owing to the poor railroad facilities our train did not arrive until 10:15 p. m. We then loaded and were off at 11:10 o'clock, arriving at Indianapolis about 8:15 a. m. Sunday, October 11, where the commanders of platoons were put in command and moved over the several routes to their home stations.

Unfortunately for my report, a list of shots fired in these maneuvers and the ranges used was lost from the field desk of Battery A, which I used while in camp.

In summing up I wish to state that in my mind there is no doubt but that these maneuvers were of great benefit to both officers and men. Being quartered with the batteries of the regular establishment was to me a great advantage, and I certainly know more now of handling a battery in the field in active service than before this experience. The officers with whom I was associated did everything for us possible and gave me much valuable information. Especially is this true of Major Woodward, Captain Barry, Captain Newcomb and Adjutant Cory.

I think the work of all the officers and men under my command was the best of which they were capable. There was no shirking duty, no one made request to leave camp, and it seemed to be the idea of every one to get all the instruction and information possible, and I believe with our experience of this camp that we will be able to do much better work in our State camps and those of joint maneuvers in the future.

Only one man of the Provisional Battery was on sick report, and he only for one day; and there were no accidents of any description to report.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

F. E. STEVENSON,

Major of Artillery, Commanding First Provisional Battery, I. N. G.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S REPORT, 1904.

STATE OF INDIANA,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, January 3, 1905.

To the Governor of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to herewith submit my report for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1904, together with the report of the Quartermaster-General and the Brigadier-General commanding.

ORGANIZATION.

At the beginning of the fiscal year the Indiana National Guard consisted of thirty-seven companies of Infantry, three batteries of Artillery and a company each of Hospital Corps and Signal Corps, and four bands.

Mustered in—January 1, Company K, Second Infantry, Logansport. Band Artillery Battalion, April 11, 1904, Peru.

Mustered out—Band Second Regiment, Michigan City, August 13, 1904. Band Third Regiment, South Bend, August 13, 1904.

ANNUAL CAMP OF INSTRUCTION.

The Annual Camp of Instruction was held at the United States Army Post site, near Lawrence, Marion County.

Under the provisions of the National Militia law, your Excellency made requisition on the Secretary of War for a sum sufficient to cover the cost of pay, transportation and subsistence of troops encamped, which was allowed and resulted in the saving to the State the cost of those items.

The report of the Commanding General, covering in detail the tour of duty performed, is herewith submitted and attention is respectfully invited thereto.

Respectfully,

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

PURCHASES FROM THE APPROPRIATION BY THE STATE DURING THE YEAR 1904.

Thirty-five officers' blouses, 50 pairs officers' trousers, 15 shirts, 16 pairs leggings, 145 officers' caps, 120 rakes, 50 shovels, 65 pairs garbage cans, 150 galvanized iron buckets, 48 gasoline torches, 48 lanterns, 50 nose bags.

Since the passage of the "Dick Bill" very material progress has been made towards placing the Guard of this State on an equality with the troops of the regular establishment as far as equipment is concerned. The infantry has been furnished with the new magazine rifle, caliber 30, together with the accoutrements belonging thereto. At present Batteries A and B of the Artillery are each supplied with two 3.2-inch field guns and Battery C with three Hotchkiss rapid fire guns. A requisition from this department is now on file with the Ordnance Department for the new 3-inch guns to replace the above equipment, but owing to the time required for manufacture, they will not be available for at least a year and a half.

This year, for the first time, the Signal Corps was equipped with all the apparatus necessary for the successful operation of the brigade in camp and field.

For emergencies, each organization has been supplied with blankets, shelter halves, mess outfits and multi-ball ammunition.

For the annual encampments, this department is abundantly supplied with tentage, common, wall, hospital and enough Sibley tents to accommodate the Artillery Battalion; Myers field ovens, cooking utensils, garbage cans, kitchen shelters, shovels, rakes, brooms, axes and entrenching tools.

Both officers and men have been supplied with the regulation blue uniform, including overcoats, as well as the service uniform now in use by the troops of the regular army.

For the instruction of the Guard the following named books have been purchased and distributed:

Manual for Signal Corps.
The Enlisted Man.
Military Courtesy and Guard Duty.
Rifleman's Hand Book.
1904 Firing Regulations.
1904 Drill Regulations.
Britton's Field Instructions, Nos. 1 and 2.
Wiser on "Strategy."
Wagner's "Organization and Tactics."
Wagner's "Security and Information."
Wagner's "Strategy."

The Encampment of 1904 was held July 27 to August 5, at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Lawrence, Ind., 12 miles east of Indianapolis. The ground selected was on the east side and the highest on the tract, within a half mile of the Big Four railroad and the Indiana Union Traction Company. The latter company built a spur track half mile in length, making it possible to land passengers and supplies within a few rods of brigade headquarters.

The grounds were prepared under the direction of the Quartermaster-General, and the camp sites of the various organizations were staked out by Lieutenant H. C. Brubaker, Company C, Second Infantry, the result of which was a beautiful camp.

To obtain a supply of pure water, a four-inch well was driven near the center of the camp. At a depth of a hundred feet a strong vein of water was struck, which promised an abundant supply. But the day before the opening of camp, under the pressure of the power pump, the pipe filled with quicksand and the well was abandoned. This necessitated the organization of a train of water tanks, the supply being drawn from neighboring springs and wells.

On the north side of Fall Creek, half a mile from camp, were erected ten Brinton targets, six on the west range for 100 to 300 yards practice, four on the east range for 100 to 500 yards practice, enabling two battalions to be on the range each day of the encampment. For this practice there was used 16,000 rounds reduced range ammunition and 2,000 rounds service ammunition.

The necessary camp equipage and subsistence stores were placed on the ground via Union Traction Company the day before the Encampment, thus enabling the Chief Quartermaster and Chief Commissary to make their issues to the arriving troops without friction or delay.

The camp transportation was drawn from the farmers of the surrounding country, consisting of heavy draft horses and Studebaker wagons, and was supplied by Murphy & McConnell, of Lawrence. It was uniform in appearance and very like that of the regular service. It was conceded to be the most satisfactory we have ever had.

The artillery horses were furnished by Mr. Frank Copeland, of West Newton, and were also most satisfactory.

The subsistence department under the direction of Major Kershner was handled with marked ability. The issue was confined to the regular army ration, and so carefully and painstaking were the issues managed that the cost of ice added to the ration came within the amount allowed by the Government for the daily ration.

The business of the Chief Quartermaster, Major Carr, was equally well conducted. He made a saving on his forage, his teams were turned back without damage, and his camp equipment was checked back to this department in good condition and with but slight loss.

Respectfully submitted,

ORAN PERRY,
Quartermaster-General.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., February 18, 1904.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 2.

I. Major David I. McCormick, retired Indiana National Guard, is hereby assigned for duty as Ordnance Officer in connection with the Quartermaster-General's Department, to whom he will report on receipt of this order for instructions.

II. Major McCormick will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 23, 1904.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 3.

Permission is hereby granted to the Organized Militia of the several States and Territories of the United States to pass through the State of Indiana, fully armed, uniformed and equipped, to attend, and return from, the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, at St. Louis, Missouri.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

STATE OF INDIANA,
OFFICE OF THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 1, 1904.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 4.

I. Beginning on July 27 and concluding on August 5, 1904, the Indiana National Guard, constituting the organized Militia of the State, will engage in field and camp service for instruction, at the Army Post site, near Lawrence, Marion County, Indiana.

II. The Adjutant-General will, on the issuance of this order, immediately proceed to make the necessary arrangements for the transportation of the several organizations of the Militia to and from the place of encampment, designated in paragraph I of this order, and will cause to be prepared, pay-rolls covering payment to be made by the State to the Militia for the service performed. He will also take any and all steps necessary to the fulfillment of the spirit of this order as comes within the authority of his department.

III. The Quartermaster-General will at once proceed to place the site selected for the camp in condition to receive the troops, and will provide for the subsistence of the same during the time of said encampment; provide the necessary horses and forage therefor; establish headquarters for the Governor and his staff; procure a supply of water suitable to the needs of the troops encamped, and perform any other service necessary for the fulfilment of the intent of this order not herein enumerated.

IV. The Adjutant-General and the Quartermaster-General will, while on duty under this order, establish and maintain during the encampment their respective headquarters in the field at the place of encampment.

V. The Brigadier-General commanding will issue, not later than July 15, such order or orders as he deems necessary for the mobilization of the Guard, their equipment, discipline, course of instruction while in camp, and such other matters as the tour of duty contemplated may necessitate.

By order of the Governor.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, May 9, 1904.

CIRCULAR,
No. 1.

In view of the approaching Camp of Instruction of the Indiana National Guard, to be held July 27 to August 5, 1904, and having in view the welfare of the Guard and a higher standard of proficiency, the Commander-in-Chief directs attention to the following subjects:

GUARD DUTY.

An examination of all officers of the line will be had on guard duty, and officers rated in ability according to their knowledge of the subject as exemplified through their men. In view of the fact that guard duty has been given special attention at previous camp no further time will be allotted in camp for instructions on this subject. The officers and men should be well instructed before coming to camp.

The ceremony of guard mounting is considered the test of military training, therefore special attention should be given to this subject by both commissioned and non-commissioned officers.

MILITARY COURTESY.

This is a subject to which especial attention should be given. Military recognition by salutes is the smallest part of military courtesy. A soldier should be, in all the word implies, a gentleman at all times and upon all occasions. The reflection of an act of officer or enlisted man is far-reaching and leaves impressions for good or otherwise. In this connection attention is called to Sec. 4, A. R.

Many official acts of courtesy are in obedience to the "Custom of the Service," and demand the same rendition as those required by law and regulation.

CARE OF CAMP.

The Camp of Instruction will be held on the land recently acquired by the United States government for an army post site. All organizations going into camp will be required to do for themselves as if in active service. It is therefore necessary that the men should be instructed in the matter of establishing camps and maintaining sanitary conditions at all times. Daily inspection of camps by the Commanding General will be had during period in camp. Men should be not only instructed but disciplined in matters conducive to good health.

CARE OF PROPERTY.

Officers and men of the Guard should realize at all times that Guard property is placed in their hands in trust, and therefore should at all times be kept in the best possible condition. Officers will hereafter be held to strict accountability for the condition of State property in their care. This applies to all officers of the Guard. The Legislature has made ample appropriation to provide for the requirements of the Guard, and this, reinforced by provisions made by the Federal authorities, makes not only ample but generous provision. The officers and men receive compensation for all services performed. Therefore, the State has a right to and does exact all things necessary to the proper care of her property. Slouchiness should never be allowed. No soldier should be permitted to appear or be at any time slovenly. The State provides ample clothing and no man should be allowed to abuse it.

TARGET PRACTICE.

A target range will be provided near the camp for the use of all members of the Guard, but no organization or individual will be permitted to expend ammunition unless it can be shown that instruction has been given in the armory in position, pointing and sighting. An officer has been provided to visit each company in its armory and impart instructions. At most places he was welcomed, and in a few instances his instructions were deemed unnecessary, and it was asserted that officers should be sufficiently competent to impart instructions in all military matter. While acknowledging the correctness of the assertion, it stands in evidence that the lack of proficiency contradicts the claim that the officers and men need no instructions from officers detailed for special instruction. The object to be attained in all military equipment instruction, etc., is to hit the object shot at. It is, therefore, necessary to bend every effort toward accuracy in shooting. All else fails if the man in action fails to make his shots count. Competent officers will be present to observe the target practice.

DISCIPLINE.

Discipline is as essential as rations or clothing or arms and all other equipments. Without discipline an organization is builded without a foundation. Officers are foundation stones, and weakness in the foundation is fatal to the superstructure. The officer who fails to exact discipline is not only a failure individually but a certain source of weakness to the whole organization. Men in the military service expect and require leaders—officers in whom they can with safety entrust their lives if need be. Men are willing to submit to discipline if they have confidence in their superiors in rank. Discipline is not confined to the attitude of one inferior in rank toward a superior. It begins with the head of the Guard and descends through all the gradations. An imperfect descent is like a broken cog, thereby seriously impairing the whole.

(See L. & R. I. N. G., I-V.)

CAMP OF INSTRUCTION.

The Camp of Instruction will be in all respects what it is in name, and to that end the earnest and persistent efforts of all officers are requested. Let every one become a student and instructor in order that the next encampment may be by far the best yet held.

Organization and Tactics, Security and Information, by Wagner, should be given special study.

DRILLS.

To the end that precision in all drills may be attained, company drills will be supervised by regimental officers, and battalion and regimental drills by higher authority.

COMPANY BOOKS AND PAPERS.

It has been observed that regulations have not been complied with in the matter of papers passing through channels. Hereafter no communications or papers of any nature will be received by the Adjutant-General or Quartermaster-General of the State unless they are in full and proper form. Special reference is made to pay-rolls. It has been detected that pay-rolls have been submitted for drills when commands were absent from station, and is instanced that money has been drawn therefor; also that names of men not mustered into service have been certified to and pay drawn. This is not only a breach of military law, but also of the civil law. Company books should be brought to the encampment and inspected. Proper care and training should be had in the keeping of books according to regulations.

FULL PAY FOR OFFICERS.

The encampment is paid for by the Federal authorities, officers receiving the pay and allowances of the Army, hence the necessity of meeting the requirements of the A. R. The government expects full returns for money expended. In order to give full measure it will be necessary to be active in mind in preparation at all times, and, as occasions offer, to instruct subordinates and men fully, to the end that Indiana may have a Guard that will be fully proficient in all requirements of the soldier as well as being equipped. There will be no joint maneuvers in which the I. N. G. will participate during the present year.

JOHN R. WARD,
Adjutant-General.

" "u"—Report of Major Eugene Hawkins, Surgeon 1st Infantry 348

PART I.

REPORT No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Nov. 1, 1904.

To the Adjutant-General, State of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to submit my report on the Annual Camp of Instruction, held July 27, 1904, to August 5, 1904, inclusive, pursuant to G. O. No. 6, A. G. O., 1904, at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Lawrence, Indiana.

On account of the comprehensive character of this report, I have taken the liberty of subdividing it into two parts—the first comprising the field work of the Camp of Instruction proper, including practice marches, and the second part covering exclusively the tactical exercise of August 3 and 4, 1904.

Reports of sub-commanders on both sides of the Attack and Defense Problem are designedly appended as fully as possible, so that those participating may learn the important lesson of the "point of view" and analyze the entire situation deliberately and retrospectively, in order to extract the instructive essence. All these reports show partisan prejudice and bias, because they were written at the time, practically in the excitement of the hour. The contemplation at this time is the more interesting and valuable.

The reports of staff officers have been given special predominance, because every officer of the staff had been urged to special efforts in his department in preparation of this Camp, and their reports reflect the application which resulted so profitably to the military establishment of the State of Indiana on this occasion, according to universal testimony. I take pleasure in attaching hereto the reports of First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, A. D. C. and A. A. A. G.; First Lieutenant Guy A. Boyle, A. D. C. and A. A. I. G.; Lieutenant-Colonel Frederick R. Charlton, Chief Medical Officer; Major Carroll B. Carr, Chief Quartermaster;

Major W. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary of Subsistence; Major David I. McCormick (retired), Range Officer; Major Frank E. Strouse, Engineer Officer, and Lieutenant John N. LeHew, commanding Signal Corps, as showing earnest and painstaking work on their part.

Part II of this report includes the reports of Colonel Harry B. Smith, Second Infantry; Colonel Geo. W. McCoy, First Infantry; Colonel Edwin P. Thayer, Third Infantry, and Major Frank E. Stevenson, Artillery Battalion, together with copies of the special reports on practice marches forwarded to these headquarters during the tour. Maps in explanation of the marches are also attached.

The presence in camp of a battalion of the Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel R. T. Yeatman, was the source of most beneficial and instructive influence. The grateful appreciation of helpful assistance on the part of the officers and many non-commissioned officers of this battalion is due from the Indiana National Guard. It would indeed be difficult to select for special mention any of the officers who exerted themselves in our behalf. As a matter of fact, the regular battalion was at times left under command of non-commissioned officers, owing to the interested professional zeal of the officers. The special credit due in certain lines of activity will be found amply acknowledged in the several sub-reports hereto attached. This also applies to those other officers of the regular establishment who did us the honor to serve voluntarily with this command throughout the tour.

Special honor was also conferred upon this service by the visit of Brigadier-General Fred D. Grant, U. S. A., commanding the Department of the Lakes, and a part of his staff, including Major Hunter Liggett, A. A. G., U. S. A., who was Adjutant-General Maneuver Division at West Point, Kentucky, October, 1903; Major Blanton Winship, U. S. A., Judge Advocate Department of the Lakes, whose presence with this command was of special value during the Camp of Instruction of 1903, and Second Lieutenant Kenneth P. Williams, First Infantry, U. S. A., General Grant's personal aide. General Grant devoted much time and attention to a very careful inspection of the troops in quarters as well as under arms.

His Excellency, Governor Winfield T. Durbin, did honor to the Guard by his presence in Camp and his active interest in the work at all times.

ORGANIZATION OF CAMP.

Preliminary work and execution of detail were covered by L. S. No. 5112, and G. O. Nos. 3 and 4, 1904, these Headquarters, and movements of the entire command as such were controlled by G. O. Nos. 5 and 6, 1904. Of all these orders copies are hereto attached. (Appendices "A," "B," "C," "D" and "E.")

The preparatory work on the grounds for camp, rifle ranges, etc., was planned and carried out under the direction of Brigadier-General Oran Perry, Quartermaster-General, whose report undoubtedly covers all detail regarding same. Special thanks are due Captain B. F. Cheatham, Quartermaster U. S. A., Constructing Quartermaster of Fort Benjamin Harrison, whose courtesy and kindness were without limit. The entire army reservation, with the exception of fields of standing crops, was placed at the disposal of this command for tactical purposes.

The location of camps and ranges are indicated on attached map marked Appendix "H." This same map is also utilized to show route of the practice march, Second Infantry, described in Report No. 15.

The camp site was undoubtedly a fine one in every respect, and fulfilled all the requirements of a military encampment, with the possible exception of water supply. As a matter of fact, however, the troops have hitherto been accustomed to wasteful extravagance in the use of water, and with due economy there would have been no shortage. As it was, there was no serious complaint, and the supply was as ample as would ordinarily be found under favorable conditions in actual campaign. The careful and economic use of water is one of the important lessons to be learned by troops in campaign.

SCHEDULE OF EXERCISES.

In preparation for this tour of duty, a Schedule of Exercises had been prepared for the purpose of accomplishing a maximum of professional work within a minimum of time. This schedule in its original form and with the explanatory comment accompanying it, will be found attached hereto, as Appendices "F" and "G," respectively, and explain themselves. The scope of the work planned is evident, and it affords the greatest pleasure to report that this schedule was executed in every essential detail, exactly as planned. All the work laid out was accomplished and the only variations to be noted were the changes in destination of practice marches. Instead of "Broad Ripple Park," the objective of these marches was made indefinite to the northeast, covered in Special Memorandum Orders, and the site of bivouac left to the discretion of the commanding officers. The selection proved to be excellent in every respect and the work was executed to the very best advantage, as will be shown by the special reports and maps attached to the general reports of regimental commanders.

In every other regard, the Schedule of Exercises was worked through as planned, and proved an eminently practical method of organizing a Camp of Instruction. It must be acknowledged, however, that the entire tour was exceptionally favored by the very best weather conditions that could have been wished for.

RESULTS.

There appears to be a unanimity of opinion among all officers of the Guard, that the results of this tour were highly satisfactory. This was undoubtedly due, principally, to the sense of accomplishment, the greatest reward of painstaking work. The task set by the Schedule of Exercise seemed formidable indeed, and it was excusable that there were some misgivings about the execution of it. This was practically true of the plans for teaching the construction of hasty entrenchments, gun-pits, etc., and the development and final solution of the tactical problem as a climax to the instruction of the tour. The reports of the Chief Engineer and Part II of this report will demonstrate how thoroughly these purposes were accomplished.

In all the subordinate reports are found expressions of satisfaction with the results of this Camp, and, as it would be manifestly impossible to introduce such comment in full, a selection is made from the report of Major T. B. Coulter, First Infantry, as typifying the general feeling on the subject:

> The spirit and morale of the troops seem constantly to improve. And in this Camp especially, the feeling the men had that they were really doing something worth while and something that advanced them in their fitness as soldiers, made their work and spirit very different from that evidenced by the uninteresting monotony of successive drills. It is true that the work was hard and that they were kept pretty constantly at it, but the willingness and earnestness with which they turned from one task to another, though wearied, induces the liveliest hopes for the future. All in all, the Camp seemed very like the tour at West Point, Kentucky, October last; and it does not seem too much to say that if anything it was more beneficial. The experience at West Point awakened the interest and paved the way for study and investigation, which showed its good results in this Camp.

It will be noted that Major Coulter grasped the significant point in his reference to the West Point Maneuvers. It was the purpose of these Headquarters to apply the lessons of the West Point experiences to our service, with such modifications as would make them applicable. The results of this Camp should convince all observers that the great work and expense of the Kentucky tour were a profitable investment, as far as our participation was concerned; and that we secured our proportion of the benefits.

LESSONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

The principal lesson to be learned from this tour of duty is that men will do the hardest kind of work providing it is interesting and produces tangible results. It is fortunate that the work most necessary to the education of a soldier is also the most interesting. All officers report that their men derived great satisfaction from target-shooting, constructing trenches and earthworks, practice marches, and the service of security and information. If the spirit and enthusiasm of our National Guardsmen can be aroused by such methods, it appears plainly our duty to keep up the interest once aroused by consistent "following up" of these impressions with more of the same kind. The traditional and proverbial "esprit de corps," it has been once more demonstrated, can be awakened with comparative ease; and when it is maintained you have an efficient, well organized, well disciplined, working force for militia tasks. The necessary constant, incessant, stimulation to accomplish this object, must find its source in the supreme command, and its impulses will be imparted through the ramifications of organization to the rank and file. It is most respectfully suggested that means be adopted for organizing systematic work of this nature, and that the creation of a board of officers for the purpose be authorized with some understanding regarding the financial resources to be placed at its disposal for publication and mailing of such literature as may be thought necessary, and for whatever other methods may be adopted to keep the entire command "tuned up" to its work.

The work on the ranges during the Camp of Instruction under Major David I. McCormick (retired), Range Officer, was good as far as it went, and awakened great interest. Unfortunately the time at our disposal was entirely inadequate to get the best results. It goes without saying that rifle shooting must be cultivated in our service and encouraged in every way, and that the interest taken by the men should not be permitted to die out by neglecting the provision of means for constant practice. Sighting and gallery practice in armories is not sufficient, and it is most earnestly urged that careful and practical attention be given to the problem of giving our Guardsmen a chance to shoot and perfect themselves in marksmanship. Other States have permanent ranges to which companies are sent for several days at a time for target-firing. This should certainly be possible in Indiana as well. The idea promulgated in Memorandum Orders during the Camp, that the scores would be used to select regimental teams, and from them, by competition, a State team, should be made a reality; so that the Indiana National Guard may participate in interstate contests, and do so with credit to the State.

Very respectfully,

WILL J. M'KEE,
Brigadier-General Commanding, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "A."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 14, 1904.

L. S. No. 5112,
COMMANDING OFFICER.

.....

Sir—You are respectfully directed to serve each member of your company with formal orders to attend the Annual Camp of Instruction at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Indianapolis, July 27th to August 5th, inclusive, stating in same the hour and day of assembling for departure, together with instructions as to wearing apparel and equipment with which each man must be provided.

In the movement of your company, the best of order and discipline must be preserved at all times. Quiet must be maintained in the armory prior to departure from home station, and men must be orderly at all times without noisy demonstration of any kind. While on the train men must not be permitted to leave the car in which they belong, nor allowed on platforms. All rough and noisy play must be prevented, as well as all "chaffing" with bystanders.

Cars must be loaded and unloaded promptly and in order, and men in train must be seated in squad order.

Every care must be taken to prevent annoyance to citizens traveling on train with troops.

Company commanders will not permit liquor to be taken on train, nor allow men to leave train or ranks to procure same while en route.

Company officers must travel on same train as their men, and must remain with their companies en route.

Care must be taken to prevent any member of the National Guard from bringing discredit upon himself or the uniform he wears.

Company baggage must be marked with letter of company and number of regiment; officers' baggage must be marked with name of officer, letter of company and number of regiment.

The prescribed baggage allowance must not be exceeded.

Very respectfully,

WILL J. McKEE,
Brigadier-General Commanding.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "B."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 14, 1904.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 3, 1904.

I. The Annual Camp of Instruction for 1904 will be held at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Indianapolis, from July 27th inst., to August 5th prox., both dates inclusive; and subordinate commanders will hold their commands in readiness to report by route and at time hereafter designated.

II. The following clothing and equipment, in addition to arms and accoutrements, is prescribed for camp tour, viz.: Regulation blue blouse and trousers, khaki blouse and trousers, campaign hat, leggings, dark blue flannel shirt, blanket, shelter halves, canteen, haversack, meat can, knife, fork, spoon, tin cup, poncho, two suits underclothing, strong shoes, two pair socks, towel and toilet articles. In addition, boxes of cleaning material and field desks with record books will be brought, together with necessary stationery.

III. Field ranges and cooking utensils for use during the encampment will be issued each command for temporary use upon proper requisition, upon arrival in Camp, the same to be turned back upon completion of tour.

IV. Company commanders will see that all men have strong, suitable footwear for the tour of Camp, and that same are uniform as to color throughout each company; all black or all tan. Preferably, the shoes should not be new, but should be in good repair for ten days' hard usage.

V. The "Manual of Tent Pitching" prepared by a board of officers of the Tenth U. S. Infantry and issued by the Quartermaster-General of the State, is prescribed for use of the Indiana National Guard and will be observed.

VI. All officers entitled to mounted pay will be required to have available for use upon beginning of tour, a single mount with equipment. Officers will not be permitted to ride any animal furnished by the Quartermaster's Department for use during the Camp; the same being for the exclusive use of the authorized enlisted men.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieutenant-Colonel and A. A. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "C."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 26, 1904.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 4, 1904.

I. During the annual Camp of Instruction, 1904, will be as prescribed in Army Regulations, paragraphs 443 to 448, both inclusive, regimental consolidated morning reports being handed to the Assistant Adjutant-General by 10 o'clock a. m.

DAILY SERVICE.

(a) Reveille will be sounded at 5:30 a. m.
Call to quarters at 10:00 p. m.

(b) Regimental commanders and the commanding officer of the artillery battalion will prescribe hours for service calls in conformity with Army Regulations, the same to include at least three drills aggregating four (4) hours in duration and will embrace fifteen (15) minutes careful instruction in the "Set-up Exercises," preferably divided about equally to each drill; also in same way same time to "Position and Aiming Drill Exercises."

(c) Two school hours of at least twenty (20) minutes each will also be prescribed for officers and for non-commissioned officers daily.

(d) Instruction will embrace extended order, estimating distance, fire discipline, advance and rear guard, outpost duty, security and information as well as close order drill.

(e) Particular attention will be given to interior guard duty; the commanding officer of each camp making such detailed orders as in his judgment will bring about the best results, and will also prescribe system for camp police and sanitation to conform to general plan for disposal of garbage and refuse.

(f) For instruction in entrenchments, hours and instructors will be designated in later orders from these headquarters and each command will be sent out for two days' practice march, orders for which will follow.

II. Regimental commanders and the commanding officer of the Artillery Battalion will establish summary courts immediately upon arrival in Camp.

III. Regimental commanders will submit reports of camp tour by the last day of August proximo, such reports to be accompanied by reports of battalion commanders. The commanding officer of the Artillery Battalion will submit similar report within time named, accompanied by battery commanders' reports. All officers of the Headquarters Staff and the commanding officers of the Hospital Corps and of the Signal Corps will submit similar reports within the same time.

IV. The strictest discipline compatible with the service will be maintained throughout the tour of duty, and subordinate commanders are charged with the enforcement to the letter of all laws, rules and regulations of the State and the United States; exacting the fullest compliance with military customs and usage.

V. Attention is called to the sixteenth Article of War. Issues of ammunition will be carefully counted to each man, to be accounted for as expended under orders or shortage charged against the individual. Attention is also called to paragraph 405, Army Regulations, and the same will be impressed upon all subordinates.

TARGET PRACTICE.

VI. A limited number of shots will be allowed each officer and man at the short ranges, with possibly an opportunity for those qualifying, to fire at the midranges and extra hours will be devoted by each battalion the day before designated to go on the range to the preliminary instruction contemplated by the Firing Regulations.

VII. The following assignments are announced, viz.:

First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, A. D. C., as Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

Lieutenant-Colonel Frederick R. Charlton, M. D., as Chief Medical Officer.

Major David I. McCormick (retired) as Range Officer.

First Lieutenant Guy A. Boyle, A. D. C., as Acting Assistant Inspector General.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

A. B. SCHANZ,
First Lieutenant and A. D. C., A. A. A. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "D."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 31, 1904.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 5, 1904.

I. Commanding officers will form their commands in readiness to march out at 4:45 p. m. this date, at the sounding of "To the Colors" for review by the Commander-in-Chief.

II. Troops will be paraded in service uniforms without equipment beyond arms, belts and bayonets.

III. The review will be on the field, west of the camp of the Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry. Formation will be in line of masses facing east, in the following order from right to left, viz.:

Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry.
Signal Corps, I. N. G.
Second Infantry.
First Infantry.
Third Infantry.
Artillery Battalion.
Hospital Corps.
Ambulance Corps.

IV. For the review camp guards will be reduced to the lowest possible number necessary to protect property. The two reliefs off post will parade with their respective companies.

V. Commanding officers will make customary field returns immediately upon returning to camp.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

ALFRED B. SCHANZ,
First Lieutenant and A. D. C., A. A. A. G.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "E."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 4, 1904.

GENERAL ORDERS,
No. 6, 1904.

I. At reveille, 5:30 a. m., Friday, August 5, 1904, bed sacks will be emptied at a designated place in each regimental (battalion or corps) camp, well shaken, folded in regulation fold and turned in to Battalion Quartermasters together with such other temporary issues of quartermaster's stores, camp and garrison equipage, except tentage, as will not be needed for remaining hours of camp tour.

II. All sinks will be filed up; sunken water barrels dug up and holes filed; water barrels and garbage cans thoroughly cleaned. Grounds will be left thoroughly policed and leveled as neatly as possible wherever excavated. Commanding officers will make personal inspection of their entire camp grounds to see that this is done.

III. Morning drill-call and guard mount at hours prescribed in regimental (artillery battalion) schedules of service will be observed as usual.

IV. At 9:00 a. m. all contract horses will be turned in to the contractor at the artillery picket line. Battery commanders will arrange with the contractor time and place of final delivery of contract animals.

V. At 9:30 a. m. all tent pegs except the four corner ones will be pulled and packed in readiness to be turned in to the Battalion Quartermasters.

VI. At 10:00 a. m. "The General" will be sounded at Camp Headquarters and taken up simultaneously by each regiment and the artillery battalion, and at the firing of one gun five minutes later, all tents will be struck. All pegs will be carefully collected, packed in original boxes and turned in. Tents must be shaken out, folded, and tied in same manner as when they were issued, and tent poles tied together in bundles.

VII. Mess call (dinner) will be at 11:30 a. m. Companies leaving on an early schedule may arrange their mess hour accordingly.

VIII. As quickly as possible after dinner, the mess furniture, cooking utensils, etc., issued for camp use, including field ranges, will be turned in to the Battalion Quartermasters. All utensils must be properly cleaned before being turned in and Battalion Quartermasters are strictly charged to see that this is done.

IX. Camp guards will be maintained until the schedule of departure makes it necessary to relieve same, when relief will be ordered by Regimental Commanders. Brigade guard will be maintained until relieved by orders from these headquarters.

X. Troops will leave camp as per schedule of departure. They will be orderly and quiet en route and no ungentlemanly conduct permitted.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

REPORT No. 1. APPENDIX "G."

EXPLANATORY COMMENT ON THE SCHEDULE.

By First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, A. D. C.

General Remarks. It goes without saying that this sheet makes no pretense to be an artistic job of correct lettering. It is off-hand work by an amateur, and if it is clean and readable that is all that is claimed or expected. The form has many apparent advantages. It is probably the only way in which to harmonize all the various propositions without conflicting in either time or place. Complete, it gives the Commanding General a quick oversight over the entire command, and tells him instantly where to find any subdivision and what it is doing. Imagine the sheet cut into vertical slices and you have complete time tables for the tour for each regiment, battalion, battery and signal and hospital corps. Copies of these separate programs or time tables could be furnished the respective commands. Of course the exact hours remain to be inserted so as to harmonize with camp routine of duty. This schedule is supposed, for the main, to cover only work and drill hours, and, generally, not to interfere with routine formations, such as roll calls; or ceremonies, such as guard mounts and parades. The latter are supposed to take place whenever possible. The endeavor has been made to give every command about the same amount of work in practice marches, extended order drills, advance guard and out-post formations, and entrenchments, and the same proportionate time on the rifle-ranges. This complex problem appears to have been fairly well solved. If any changes suggest themselves, there is still considerable elasticity in the arrangement, without disturbing the general plan in its essentials. Conditions of weather during the tour may make a demand for readjustment.

Assemblies of all Officers. It will be noticed that meetings of all officers have been scheduled for four evenings. If there be guests and official visitors from the regular service, such assemblies would afford opportunity for listening to very valuable comment and instructive criticism. Papers and reports could be read and discussed. It would be necessary, in order to carry this out, to make a requisition on the Q. M. G. for a tent with seating capacity for 200. (Note requisition for assembly tent.) Possibly an arrangement of plain lumber benches in the open air could be made to suffice.

Inspections. It will be noticed that the inspection of the Artillery Battalion is scheduled for the second day of camp. This was made necessary by the desire to have the batteries in turn take part in practice marches, and the second day was the only one on which it could be arranged to have the entire battalion in camp. One day is set aside for the inspection of each regiment in quarters and in the field.

Practice Marches. The time for practice marches had to be cut down in order to gain time on the ranges. Wheel transportation for longer marches would have been difficult to arrange. Each regiment and battery get practically two days out, and only one-third of the whole command is out of camp at any one time. It is desired to use some wheel transportation for these marches and the best thing to do would be to use the regular wagons owned by the State in order to give them a trial and do things in something like regular campaign manner. The State is supposed to own six wagons which have been on hand for years. It is the desire of the Chief Quartermaster to give some instruction in loading wagons during this tour, and this would make homogeneous vehicles almost necessary to get any practical results. (Note requisition for wagons.) A necessary consideration in planning practice marches was to fix on a destination not too far away. Broad Ripple Park is about seven miles from camp, and use of part of it for one night bivouac could no doubt be obtained. The objections to it would probably apply to almost any place available, and at all events would supply a good test of discipline. Another destination that might be used is the Fair Grounds, where we camped heretofore, about eight miles from camp. It will be noticed that the Practice March of the Second Infantry on Wednesday and Thursday, August 3 and 4, is broken off. The idea is to have this regiment ostensibly march out to make exactly the same march as the other regiments, and start its commander out under such orders. This would be to avoid any leakage of the real plans. Subsequent orders are to be sent out by a special courier to head off the column and deflect it to the old Fair Grounds northeast of Lawrence, a very pretty grove with water. Thence this column is to deploy to the east and northeast at dawn Thursday, making an attack on the camp. It was considered desirable to have a surprise attack in order to test and teach eternal vigilance, but in this way the dangers of a night attack are avoided and the same purpose no doubt can be accomplished.

Rifle Ranges. For ordinary short range firing the best this schedule could allow in time was one day per battalion on the range. Using both ranges, this would put two battalions on the ranges every day. It may be desirable to have every man in the brigade have fifty shots during the tour, but it is impossible, figuring a possibility of 500 shots per day per target. Two thousand men at fifty rounds would be 100,000 rounds—eight days straight shooting at 12,500 shots per day. This would require twenty-five targets at 500 shots per target per day, and 250 men in the ranges all the time. How many shots can be gotten in by the men under this schedule depends upon the number of targets available, but it will probably be impossible to allot any more time for the short ranges, and do everything in other lines. Qualified marksmen on higher ranges can be detached under this schedule, and some elasticity must be allowed for bad weather. Twelve targets under the schedule as it stands, would give each man fifteen rounds at the short ranges. In this connection, it should be mentioned that the artillery ought to have sub-caliber cartridges for both the 3.2-inch field pieces and the Hotchkiss two-pounders. The battalion commander should make requisition if he has not already done so, and steps taken to push this through. (Note Requisition for subcaliber.)

Entrenchments. Under this head it is intended to give the men by battalions a little elementary instruction in hasty entrenchments under the Chief Engineer. It would be desirable to have each regiment construct its own piece of trench and use the battalions as reliefs per schedule. Probably not more than enough tools can be supplied for one battalion at a time (Note Requisition for entrenchment tools)—200 picks, 200 spades, 200 long-handled shovels; also a little lumber for erecting profiles, some 1x4 stuff. Possibly the idea could be worked out to have the First Battalion dig a shelter trench lying; have the Second Battalion deepen it to one kneeling, and the Third Battalion work it down to one standing. It might be possible to give a little idea of revetments if a competent instructor could be found. As far as the sites for digging are concerned, it is suggested to select them, if possible, on the line of resistance in the attack and defense exercise scheduled for Thursday morning, August 4th.

Security of Camp. This is outpost exercise. The Second Infantry has a day for outpost work to offset its abbreviated practice march. On Wednesday afternoon it is suggested that the command of the camp west of the dividing road be turned over to the senior colonel in camp, probably the colonel of the First Infantry, and assign to him also the two batteries in camp. (Note plan of camp on attached map.) He would then receive orders to establish his service of security toward the west and southwest, as if in an enemy's country in danger of attack. Also to establish his outposts well out, determine on his line of resistance and organize patrol service and frequent reliefs. All this would be in preparation for the attack by the Second Infantry, but need not be announced. In order to keep this plan secret, it would be well to remove the program as it now appears on the schedule and substitute a memorandum for a practice march, same as the other regiments. The other dispositions would then be made by the C. G. in his own way and at his own time.

Orders. It will be noticed that after the schedule is completed with indications of hours—say in red ink, the preparation of orders covering the exercises will be greatly simplified.

REPORT No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE OF THE AIDES-DE-CAMP,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., November 1, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report:

The Schedule of Exercises for the Camp of Instruction, July 27 to August 5, 1904, was prepared in advance under the direction of the Commanding General, who also authorized the preparation and publication of Circular No. 1, Headquarters I. N. G., 1904, of which a copy is attached marked "Appendix I."

By General Orders No. 4, Paragraph VII, Headquarters I. N. G., 1904, the undersigned was detailed as Acting Assistant Adjutant-General for the Camp Tour, and assumed the duties of said office upon reporting at Field Headquarters, Fort Benjamin Harrison, July 27, 1904. The office equipment and civilian clerical assistance was a great improvement over that obtainable at the West Point Maneuvers, but the clerks were all untrained to the work, and it took several days before any of them were competent to afford any relief from the burden of detail. It goes without saying that it would be a great help to the Assistant Adjutant-General's office if a permanent civilian clerk could be authorized and kept under salary the year round in charge of books and records, ever in readiness to take a well-organized office equipment into the field at a moment's notice, complete for any administrative business demands that may be made upon it. To break in new clerks every year for a few days' tour is a very unsatisfactory and uneconomical method of procedure. At least one permanent clerk in addition to a competent stenographer would appear to be a necessity for these Headquarters.

The mechanical arrangement of the Schedule of Exercises made it a comparatively easy task to prepare Field Orders for the execution of the great mass of detail, but the clerical output of the A. A. G. O. was undoubtedly far greater than ever before in time of peace.

During the tour the new sets of Company and Regiment books, conforming to those of the regular establishment, were issued, and Lieutenant-Colonel Yeatman, of the Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry, at great sacrifice of his personal time and convenience, gave great help in explaining their uses and the correct methods of keeping them.

REPORTS AND MAPS.

By special direction of the Commanding General to report as to the effect apparent from the publication of Circular No. 1, I am pleased to say that there has been a very great improvement in all the detail appertaining to reports, although there is still unlimited room for further betterment. One or two isolated cases of inexcusable delay and the manifest neglect of some officers to read the circular at all, or at any event to follow its suggestions, must unfortunately be noted. It appears particularly difficult to impress upon some of our officers that a report on a tour of this kind should not be made the medium of complaints or accusations against soldiers or fellow officers, in matters for which the Army Regulations and the Articles of War provide specific remedies. If in any command there is an infraction of discipline, a neglect of duty, or a disobedience of orders, worthy of any notice or action, it should be promptly made the subject of specific charges. Again, a recommendation, for example, asking that an officer be reimbursed for money advanced en route for meals, or asking that a certain man or officer be kept on the pay-roll for service extending beyond the Camp Tour, are properly subjects for special communications through these Headquarters to the Adjutant-General, but should not be made part of a report on the Camp Tour; if for no other reason than that they should be insured prompt disposition.

Such extraneous matters have been omitted from sub-reports edited for the attention of the Commanding General.

Attention is most respectfully called to the praiseworthy efforts made by the Adjutant of the First Infantry, to facilitate the preparation of field reports and insuring their containing all essential facts. He had report blanks printed at his own expense in the form of a carbon duplicating note book, which appeared to work out practically. These blanks are undoubtedly very excellent for field notes, but hardly in proper form to be forwarded as reports. The separate company reconnoissances of the First Infantry were of undoubted value for the company officers, and the outpost maps submitted deserve commendation, because, though mostly crude, they appeared to be original, not tracings from unreliable publications. They certainly proved that all officers should make topography, outpost and road sketching a special study, as giving particular training in the powers of observation, estimating distances, etc., all essentials of a soldier's education.

The company reconnoissance reports of the other regiments were not as commendable as those of the First. There appeared to be a tendency to select officers of special talent or professional experience for this sort of work, instead of having all responsible company officers do the best they could along those lines. Inadequate results should prove a stimulus to further study and effort in preparation for better work next time.

It must be apparent that perfunctory reports and the copying or tracing of published maps instead of depending upon actual original observations in the field, are of no practical value. This is particularly true where the published maps are as unreliable as were those of the field of operations at this camp. Some of the published maps showed roads not now open, and did not show some of those actually traveled by troops, without these discrepancies being discovered by our topographers. The reconnoissances by companies should have been consolidated by Regimental Adjutants, or special staff officers detailed for the purpose, before being forwarded to these headquarters. Many inconsistencies would then have become apparent, instead of causing great confusion later on.

The map prepared to accompany this report has undoubtedly many errors in it, as it depended upon company reconnoissance maps, which did not agree very well as to facts.

The maps and reports of the Captain commanding Battery C deserve commendation, though the maps were not drawn to scale and were therefore distorted. The painstaking effort is what deserves encouragement.

As a model reconnaissance report, I have the honor to call your attention to that of Major Conde, Second Infantry, covering a battalion reconnoissance from Camp to Oaklandon. Second Lieutenant W. R. Scott, Seventh U. S. Infantry, was topographer on this occasion, and made the road map with the cavalry field-sketching case. It is recommended that this report and map be appended as models for the attention of the National Guard, of special value as covering familiar territory. (Appendices "J" and "K.").

Very respectfully,

ALFRED B. SCHANZ,
First Lieutenant and A. D. C.; A. A. A. G.

REPORT No. 2. APPENDIX "I."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 14, 1904.

CIRCULAR,
No. 1, 1904.

The following memorandum instructions prepared by First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, A. D. C., are published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

During the forthcoming tour of duty at the Camp of Instruction, special attention is to be paid to the matter of reports. Practice in the prompt rendition of accurate and complete reports is an essential part of an officer's education. The purpose of requiring reports prepared with the utmost attention to important details is to give training in accurate observation, develop the sense of locality and time, and practice the exercise of calm judgment.

Commanding officers will keep a careful diary of the events of each day during the tour, or detail an officer to do so under their direction. It would be well to enter accurate notes covering each day in a blank book, to keep them all together. Chiefs of staff departments will keep similar records of matters relating to their several departments.

When on field duty, the commanding officer of each regiment, battalion, company or detachment, acting separately or independently, will make an accurate report with full detail to his next superior commander (through his adjutant). A regimental commander also makes such report when acting as part of a larger force. In case of a mixed column in the field the reports of sub-commanders will be made to the next senior officer with the column, irrespective of the organization to which the sub-commander may belong. Commanding officers of details and detachments will report to the officer making the detail or detachment.

Reports should include the following:

1. Orders—Give number and series of order under which action is taken. In case of field orders, give text in full; verbal orders will be repeated. Mention exact time of receipt of order, and exact time of compliance—not "at about 9:30," but "at 9:37." Careful comparison of watches is necessary to prevent misunderstanding or controversy.

2. Strength—Give constituents of force, names of organizations, exact strength, officers, men, wheel transportation and animals; also order of march, formation or disposition.

3. Narrative—Give facts as to what actually occurred, and avoid exaggeration. Caution enlisted men, scouts, skirmishers, etc., to be sure of what they see and report. At the West Point Maneuvers, flankers of the organized militia columns reported back hundreds of hostile cavalry, when only a small troop opposed them in widely separated squads. Be particular to describe localities exactly, so they may be recognized, if possible, by reference to a map.

4. Conclusions—It is here permissible to express a carefully considered and well-founded opinion regarding the results of the work done, with critical comment that may be of value to the superior commander. This should not, however, be made the medium of petty complaints and quibbles—never under any circumstances attacks against other officers. There are other means of securing the proper adjustment of differences, neglects of duty, or infractions of discipline.

5. Recommendations—May include special mention of acts of conspicuous merit on the part of officers and men; also practical recommendations for improving the service, all based on the "narrative" or the "conclusion," the lessons learned by experience.

6. Maps—Reports of tactical exercises, practice marches, reconnoissance, etc., should be accompanied by original maps, drawn by some officer with the command detailed for that purpose. However crude mechanically, such maps should be prepared in accordance with the rules of military map-making, and be accurate enough to fulfill the purpose intended.

Reports should be concise and precise. All officers should bear this in mind and prepare themselves accordingly. With careful attention to the instructions herein, daily reports can be prepared with ease and dispatch, and final reports of the tour will be made without delay. The hitherto perfunctory character of this work will be supplanted by effective and valuable results.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieutenant-Colonel and A. A. G.

REPORT No. 2. APPENDIX "J."

CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FT. BENJ. HARRISON,
NEAR INDIANAPOLIS, July 28, 1904.

The Adjutant, Second Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor, in compliance with instructions from Headquarters Indiana National Guard (Schedule of Exercises, Camp of Instruction, and Circular No. 1, 1904, Headquarters Indiana National Guard, dated July 14, 1904), to report a reconnoissance by the First Battalion, comprising Companies A, C, D and H, Second Infantry, taken in the direction of Oaklandon, Marion county.

The Battalion under command of Major H. T. Conde, Second Infantry, with a strength of twelve officers, 150 men, no transportation, left camp via Millersville and Broad Ripple road at 2:55 p. m., July 28, 1904, marched east to the Pendleton Pike. Upon leaving camp, advance guard formation was taken up, Company C, Captain Power, forming advance guard.

The column marched without interruption via Pendleton Pike to Oaklandon, arriving at that point at 4:10 p. m., where column halted.

Inquiry from inhabitants and close observation of surrounding country failed to indicate any immediate presence of the enemy. The advance party promptly seized the railroad station, telegraph and telephone offices. The inhabitants were all without exception friendly and appeared willing to render any assistance.

At 4:30 p. m. the Battalion marched via Germantown road to return to camp. The formation of the advance guard was changed (Company H, First Lieutenant Smith, as advance guard). After advancing one mile, the right flankers from advance party reported presence of a supposed small cavalry patrol to the north and west. A careful investigation proved that the mounted men were not the enemy, but friendly farmers.

The column continued without further incident to camp, arriving, with men in good condition, at 5:38 p. m.

Distance Covered.....Seven miles.
Time.....Two hours, 48 minutes.

Accompanying report is map prepared under direction of 2nd Lieut. W. R. Scott, 7th U. S. Infantry. (Appendix "K.")

Reconnaissance of country given under following heads:

Roadway.....Gravel—Width, 14 ft.; condition, good; passable for all arms of service.
Gravel and material for repair close at hand.
Grades—None difficult.
Fences—Rail and wire.
Commanding Positions—At frequent intervals.

Bridges.....One on Pendleton pike, one on Germantown road. Both truss, iron, single span, wooden floors, good condition; can carry artillery; could be easily destroyed, but streams readily forded.
Length, 40 ft.; width, 12 ft.
Height above water, 10 ft.
Abutments, stone.

Rate of March.....Nothing to prevent regulation rate.

Town.....Oaklandon. Population, 400.
Houses—Mostly frame; streets, gravel; enclosures, none.
Quarters for Troops—One brick school, 1 frame church, 1 brick church, 3 large houses. Quarters for 600 men.

Country.....Partly wooded; alternating cultivated fields of grain; high and rolling.

Camping Grounds.....	Along stream near junction of Millersville and Pendleton road.
	Water supply, limited. Space, sufficient.
	Fuel, rail fences and standing timber.
Railroads	Big Four—Cleveland Division; single track; excellent condition; standard gauge.
	Electric Railroad—Union Traction Line, Indianapolis to Anderson; single track; standard gauge; level; well ballasted; parellel Big Four.
	No rolling stock visible; ¼-mile siding; Big Four at Oaklandon.
Telegraph and Telephone Lines..	Telegraph lines on Big Four Railroad and Pendleton pike; Indianapolis to points northeast.
	Telephone lines on Pendleton pike, Indianapolis to Anderson and points northeast; private line on railroad right-of-way Union Traction Line.
Notes.....	Meshwork wire fences and barb wire used for fencing at frequent intervals; could be used for entanglements.
Live Stock	Farms well stocked with horses, cattle, hogs and sheep.
	Farms well kept and prosperous.
Farm Wagons.....	Light escort pattern to be had at every farm.

Respectfully submitted,

H. T. CONDE,
Major Second Infantry.

REPORT No. 3.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE OF THE AIDES-DE-CAMP,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 31, 1904.

The Commanding General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to Paragraph III, General Order C. S. No. 4, dated Headquarters, Indiana National Guard, July 26th, 1904, I have the honor to submit the following report:

Arriving at the Camp of Instruction at noon July 27th, and receiving the above mentioned order, I assumed the duties of Acting Assistant Inspector-General in compliance therewith and this report pertains thereto.

The "Schedule of Exercises" prescribed Battalion and Regimental Inspections for each of the infantry organizations, the former "in quarters," the latter "in heavy marching order;" and similar inspections for the battalion of Field Artillery, the Signal, and Hospital Corps. These were each made at the prescribed hour. The Acting Assistant Inspector-

General endeavored to visit all the camps each day, as well as to observe as many formations and exercises as was possible; an effort was also made to accompany the regiments, making practice marches, a short distance from the camp for the purpose of noting their advance and rear guard formations and general precautions taken for security and protection, the marches being conducted as in an enemy's country.

The percentage of attendance was as follows:

Organization.	Strength in Camp.
Artillery Battalion	66⅔ per cent.
First Infantry	71⅓ per cent.
Second Infantry	75⅓ per cent.
Third Infantry	67½ per cent.
Signal Corps	83¾ per cent.
Hospital Corps	83 per cent.
Unassigned Company	89⅞ per cent.

Total in camp, officers and enlisted men, 2,096.

COMMENT AND CRITICISM.

Taking the organizations in the order inspected.—First, the Artillery Battalion. This inspection occurred the second day of the Camp, and hardly sufficient time had elapsed for the thorough arrangement of their camp, or for the proper adjustment of harness, still the quarters were in splendid condition, the kitchens well cared for and streets thoroughly policed. In some of the men's quarters articles of wearing apparel were hanging on lines started across the tents and on the poles. In the band quarter this was especially noticeable. It is probably pardonable there, if anywhere. Many of the band instruments are bulky and difficult to care for, and it is, in the opinion of the Acting Assistant Inspector-General, advisable to issue large "Sibley's" for the use of the band.

The esprit de corps and military courtesy of the Artillery Battalion was particularly good; deserving and receiving warm commendation. The latrines were cleansed every day by covering the bottom of trench with straw, spraying crude petroleum thereon and burning, then a slight cover of fresh earth. Latrines throughout the Camp were in splendid sanitary condition.

The Artillery stables were the best that ever came under the observation of the Acting Assistant Inspector-General, being equal to, or even better than, troop or battery stables at army posts. The animals were all well cared for and in fine condition. The public animals furnished were, as a whole, much better than usual, but the credit for clean and wholesome condition of the horses and stables is due almost wholly to the energetic and untiring work of the Veterinarian, although much praise is due every officer of this Battalion for the willing manner in which they performed their prescribed duties.

The mounted inspection was executed with precision and thoroughness; almost amazing when it is remembered that about the only opportunity for mounted drill is at the Annual Encampment with green animals; the field pieces were in fairly good condition. The only criticism to be offered on equipment is regarding harness. A better method for caring for this during the period between Annual Encampments should be devised.

The Signal Corps made an excellent showing, considering the opportunities for assembling of the men at other times than at camp, together with the fact that many of the men were the rawest of recruits. All are experienced in some branch of the Corps work, however. Being enlisted with particular attention paid to their ability in civil life as telegraph and telephone operators, linemen, etc., these men are, therefore, able to immediately assume some of the duties of the Corps, although possibly lacking in real military training. Yet the Corps, taken as a whole, show the result of diligent and careful work of their officers.

Almost the same may be said of the Hospital Corps; the officers and non-commissioned officers being practicing physicians, as are a number of the privates, and all are educated to some extent in medicine or chemistry, and the great majority, in fact practically all, are, in civil life, in some vocation that befits them for the Hospital Corps work.

During the Second Infantry inspections little was noticed to be criticised. The officers and men seemed studious and alert on all occasions. The sanitary condition was good; the quarters well policed, the kitchens clean and wholesome, and showed a thorough effort on the part of the officers to keep the camp in proper condition.

The Separate Company was attached, during the Camp, to the Second Infantry and paraded as a part of it. This was the strongest company, numerically, in Camp. The percentage of their total strength present in Camp was also greatly in excess of any other company. Company A, of the Second, had what might be well called a "model kitchen," and comment to that effect was made by the Acting Assistant Inspector-General at the time. The latrines were well disinfected and the garbage cans were the best cared for in the Camp, being emptied, then cleansed with boiling water and afterward washed with milk of lime. The Regimental Commander gave his personal attention to the proper care of sinks and garbage cans each day, and while such action can not be followed by all Regimental Commanders, yet it is highly commendable and commanding officers can, if unable to attend to such matters in person, cause some officer to do so, and thus procure the sanitary effect necessary to the health of the Camp.

The Band in Camp with the Second Infantry was one contracted for and not a part of the Militia, and as it was their first time in Camp, the condition of their quarters was not up to the standard desired, still there was nothing more serious than a careless appearance of their quarters.

The Third Infantry was located with a heavy growth of weeds on the west side of their Camp, and it was with considerable difficulty that the Regimental Commander kept this locality properly policed, as also the First Infantry had a deep ravine just beyond the color line, and the latrines were there placed, and throughout the time of the Camp the men persistently failed to use the latrines on all occasions, to the unsanitary condition of the ravine. This condition was corrected each day and the ravine policed, but the succeeding morning found the same condition prevailing; a permanent guard would have stopped the nuisance. The latrines in the Third and First were in fairly good condition and so maintained during the Camp. Garbage cans were properly cared for and the kitchens were, as a general rule, in good condition, although in some instances provisions were not all cared for as well as could have been, but cooks and assistants were willing and anxious to immediately carry out any and all suggestions of the Acting Assistant Inspector-General as to better methods of preserving their rations.

The rations furnished were ample and wholesome, and the Acting Assistant Inspector-General heard no complaints. There were some few "kicks" on the Quartermaster's Department, namely, shortage of straw, and fuel for kitchen fires. This, however, was found to be the fault of either company commanders, or the Regimental Quartermaster and was corrected as soon as complaint was made.

Military courtesy and discipline was, as a general rule, very good, being possibly augmented by the presence of the regular troops in Camp with the Guard.

In your Inspector's opinion, faults exhibited by the enlisted men can be traced directly to their immediate officers and their omissions to the Battalion and Regimental officers. Closer attention to detail on the part of the officers will do a great deal toward bringing about the desired end. The enlisted men are all willing and anxious, and would, if properly instructed, attain a marked degree of efficiency.

During the inspection of the First Infantry the men were paraded in service trousers and blue flannel shirts, as was prescribed in the order for the formation. The field and staff were so dressed, but many of the company officers appeared in complete service uniforms and notice of the fact was not taken until the inspecting officer mentioned the matter. It was also noticed that the color guard came to the quarters of the Regimental Commander, removed the colors from the stands in front and marched to their places in column. The Regimental Commander was not present, nor was any other officer of the regiment, and the guard failed to salute when "taking" the colors. Many such errors were noticeable, all showing a lack of close attention to detail, for it is hardly possible that the commander of this regiment knew not of such errors.

The water supply at the Camp was limited, and far a while almost a famine prevailed. This was owing to the failure of a large well that had been drilled for the supply of the Camp. The situation was relieved by hauling water in wagons laden with barrels, which produced a sufficient supply, although at no time was there an abundance. Bathing was only possible at some points in the creek a mile away, and the animals also had to be taken there for water.

TRANSPORTATION.

Transportation of both troops and equipage to and from the Camp was not the best, although the foresight of the Quartermaster-General in having all camp and garrison equipage taken to the Camp some time in advance, prevented a delay at the start. The removal from the Camp was exceedingly bad. The Interurban Railway Company in charge was totally inefficient in the number of cars provided, as well as method of handling the matter. This was caused, no doubt, by the inexperience of the employes in charge. However good the excuse, the fact remains that the transportation company was seventy-two hours late in the completing of their contract, and the distance covered hardly exceeded twelve miles.

But few real infractions of the law or order were committed by the members of the Guard and such were immediately dealt with in a summary manner.

Company commanders should be made to understand the proper size for mess chests. A large per cent. of those now in use are "man-killers," being two and three and some even four times as large as prescribed, and are a source of great annoyance to Quartermasters; their use is also a violation of General Orders.

An unfortunate situation met at Camp was the absence of company books, some of the more important ones being left at the home stations, and, as usually is the case, those left are badly wanted. Many company commanders were unable to furnish the Inspector with the "total strength of the company" and were also unable to render the regular monthly return, which fell due during the tour. The field desk is brought to Camp and all company books should be therein. The absence of a part of the company records, as well as a lack of thorough knowledge on the part of the company officers, regarding the methods of keeping records and papers, brought considerable criticism, and it is respectfully suggested that if more frequent inspections of the companies at their home stations were made with more attention paid to records and the manner of keeping them, this fault would be greatly eliminated.

The Camp was situate in the eastern portion of the new U. S. Army Post, to northeast of Lawrence, Indiana, and in many ways was ideally located. The entire reservation was tendered by the Government, through the courtesy of the Constructing Quartermaster in charge, for use in maneuvering. The territory lying to the northeast was used by permission of the private owners, as was also some farms lying to the southeast of the Post.

Taken as a whole, the Encampment was, in the opinion of the Acting Assistant Inspector-General, the best and productive of the most results, of any the State has ever held.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GUY A. BOYLE,
First Lieutenant and A. D. C., A. A. I. G.

REPORT No. 4.

HEADQUARTERS I. N. G.,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF MEDICAL OFFICER,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 25, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to make report relative to sanitary conditions prevailing in recent Camp of Instruction held at Post Benjamin Harrison, July 27th to August 5th, 1904, inclusive. I also attach hereto a copy of the report of Captain E. F. Sommer, Assistant Surgeon in charge of Brigade Hospital (Appendix "M").

A general comment would be that this camp has been an improvement on any previously held, yet in every detail there is room for more improvement and it is with this idea of continual betterment that I shall refrain from any special commendation and point out only some of the more apparent errors where we can and must make immediate correction.

(1) Casualties.—There need be little comment on the actual sick and wounded, their total only numbering forty (40), and these cases being almost always of ordinarily unavoidable character. They were cared for at Brigade Hospital without fatality in any case. It is recommended that the Brigade Hospital Corps and equipment be enlarged and raised to the standard of U. S. Field Hospitals. It is thoroughly practicable and can be made highly creditable to the State. Detachments from Hospital Corps, equipped for field service accompanied every expedition going on bivouac, march or maneuver. Dispositions were made nearly as possible as if under conditions of actual warfare. Medical officers were constantly in attendance. Dressing stations were established on firing lines, and communication theoretically maintained with Field and Base Hospitals. This was not always accomplished, as for example, on the morning of the maneuver of attack and defense of camp, the officer commanding the defense gave direct orders without consultation with his Chief Surgeon, to Hospital Corps squads, who in consequence could not find their stations until after the close of the action. Such confusion should not be permitted to occur.

The general health of the camp was exceptional.

(2) Sinks.—The advisability of using portable latrines of sheet iron or other material after the plan of the Ohio National Guard is discountenanced. Almost if not quite the most important thing to an army in the field is the proper disposal of human excreta. Typhoid, the most common and terrible scourge of armies, arises from this source, to say nothing of the numerous lesser ills and the unpleasantness of stench and filth. Once such an epidemic is started there is little chance of stamping it out. The only open and rational course is one of prevention. This may only be accomplished by sinks properly constructed and cared for, and impressing upon the men their individual responsibility. The latrines of an army in the field must always be trenches, and with this understanding it is thought best to adhere to our present system of sinks. At this camp, owing to a misunderstanding of orders, there was little uniformity of construction of sinks and some tardiness in their sanitary supervision. The company sink, as covered by small tent, should be at least two feet wide, four feet long, six feet deep. Sufficient lumber should then be promptly issued to build substantial and comfortable seats. At this camp, fence rails, branches of trees and odds and ends in general were used, and proved to be a source of continual dissatisfaction and chagrin. Lumber of special sizes should be purchased for this purpose, and any policy of false economy or indifference deserves severe condemnation. Let the companies for their own instruction construct their own sinks and care for them under proper direction, and let this be understood as the first important duty to be attended to upon establishment of a camp. In this respect the camp just closed was far short of what it should have been.

(3) Water.—There was a complaint of lack of sufficient water and of its quality when furnished. There seemed to be no definite system of distribution, some organizations having more water than needed, while others were almost at the point of water famine. This, it is believed, was due to lack of system among civilians employed to haul water from the wells to the kitchen lines. There was always plenty of water available, the fault being that it was not equally distributed. Its quality is believed to have been good at all times. Civilian drivers in an effort at flippant humor, spread the report that they were hauling it from the neighboring creek, and this was undoubtedly the origin of the entirely unfounded rumor of bad and unsafe water.

Separate wells are advocated for each organization, where possible, rather than a central supply with uncertainties of distribution.

(4) Company Sanitation.—The following recommendation by General Otis H. Marion, M. V. M., is most heartily approved and indorsed: "The detail is suggested in each military company of an extra sergeant to be known as Sanitary Sergeant, and, if this be possible, in any case the detail of a man as Acting Sanitary Sergeant, to be instructed in and have special charge of the sanitation of the company and its surroundings. His duties will include the personal hygiene of the enlisted men of his command, the hygiene of quarters, clothing, equipment and food, and the conduct of the sick or injured men of the company. In each regiment a school should be held under the direction of a medical officer for the instruction of the Sanitary Sergeants of the several companies, in order to fully qualify them for the work assigned to them."

(5) Avoidable Faults.—The adverse criticisms of this camp could all have been obviated and made unnecessary. The faults were all due to unpreparedness, to misunderstanding or no understanding. Every detail should be planned and understood by every man concerned before camp is reached, material supplied promptly, work started and completed without uncertainty or delay whatever. No stronger, clearer suggestion along this line has ever been offered than that described by Mr. George Kennan, war correspondent, in The Outlook of August 13, 1904, on "War by Pre-Arrangement." It would be a wise expenditure for the State to place a copy of this article in the hands of every officer of the Guard, for it is of such superlative importance that its value should not be lost. It is the "taking it for granted," leaving something to some one else, waiting for things "to turn up" that renders our service loose and unmilitary and in precisely that measure inefficient. This article, it is believed, would make men to see and appreciate what should be done in the way of preparedness, pre-arrangement.

Respectfully,

FRED R. CHARLTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief Surgeon.

REPORT No. 4. APPENDIX "L."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, July 16, 1904.

CIRCULAR No. 3,
1904.

The following memorandum instructions prepared by Major Frederick R. Charlton, Medical Department, are published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

The care of your men is the first article of military law. Nothing in the way of drill, tactics or the maneuvering of men approaches it in importance. The successful handling of men in camp, or in the field, depends upon their physical welfare and ability to perform duty of whatever character. Sick men are not only unavailable; they are worse than that. They require the attention of well men, so that it has been estimated that in the field one sick man will require the more or less constant aid and attention of two well men. Viewed from this standpoint one sick man is a far greater menace to the success of a military campaign than the dead man killed in battle in proportion of one to three.

The fault has been in the past that officers have not understood and apparently have not cared what sanitation meant and that they were required to answer personally for the entire efficiency of their commands. They themselves must see that they are properly fed, clothed, housed and provided for. They are their own sanitary executives and not the surgeons. Surgeons are not scavengers to run about cleaning up the filth of others. They are inspecting officers, and their position an advisory one. Always the company commander is responsible for his own derelictions.

The Inspector-General at West Point, Ky., after concluding his inspection of one of the best drilled battalions in the Indiana Guard, and yet finding their camp dirty and ill-kept, a discredit to them and to the State they represented, exclaimed impulsively, "My God, do these officers think that their only duty is to teach a man to shoulder arms?' Any intelligent set of men will teach themselves the manual.

The capability and all-round efficiency and value to the service of an officer is tested along the lines of his kitchens and sinks. More definitely this may be appreciated if the following facts be borne in mind:

Mexican War.—More than 33 per cent. of General Scott's entire command lost from disease.

Civil War.—Union losses: 93,969 killed or died from wounds; 210,400 died from disease and other causes. Confederate losses (estimated): 50,000 killed or died from wounds; 150,000 died from disease and other causes.

During the one year, 1863, in the Union Army alone, one man in every sixteen died from disease.

Let it be remembered that "when a soldier is from any cause below par in his physique, he breaks down under influences which otherwise would have but little effect on him." Good personal hygiene, as understood more or less well by all intelligent people, that is, the care of the individual, is the same at home or in camp, only modified in camp or field by such considerations as—

(a) Unusual and prolonged exposure not experienced in civil life.

(b) Lack of conveniences of personal comfort and cleanliness.

(c) Carelessness and recklessness of men as to food and drink when assembled together in their camps, that commonly does not apply to the individual at home.

With this understanding of the superlative importance of this subject, a few brief suggestions are offered that pertain to the approaching Camp of Instruction.

1. The food furnished the company commanders will be of first-class quality. Its proper preparation and service will be a personal responsibility upon that company commander. This means the employment of good cooks and uncompromising cleanliness at all points. There must be no rubbish or accumulations of filth of whatever sort. "There must be a place for everything and everything in its place." The usual morning excuse for slovenliness that "we haven't cleaned up" will not be tolerated at this camp. Your kitchens must be inspection proof at any hour, day and night. The use of mosquito netting to guard against flies about kitchen and mess quarters is encouraged. The better prepared and better served the mess, the better will be the prevailing spirit among the men.

2. There will be no running water furnished in company streets. Water will be delivered in barrels at regular intervals daily. It will be the duty of company commanders to see that "no slopping" be permitted about these barrels. It is the intention that water be freely used for all purposes, but wastefulness is discountenanced, since it will mean merely the accumulation of mud about quarters, a disorderly appearance, and an actually depressing influence on the spirit of the men. A non-commissioned officer should be held personally accountable for such enforcement.

3. Sinks are being dug and will be ready when the companies reach the ground. Responsibility for their cleanliness will be immediately assumed. No scattered paper or other rubbish or nuisance of any kind can be excused about these sinks, nor are they to be used as repositories for camp refuse. Crude oil, or lime, will be at once provided and its proper use demonstrated. It is urgently recommended that each company provide itself with a few brackets and rolls of toilet paper. This can be done at an outlay of a few cents, and will contribute materially to the cleanliness about these quarters.

4. Large tin cans will be provided for the kitchen refuse—one for solid, the other for liquid contents. It is expected that cooks and helpers will be made to realize the uses of these cans before camp, in order that no single offense against cleanliness be committed.

5. Men should be instructed as to the care of bedding, a proper airing being secured every day that permits.

6. Personal cleanliness must be demanded and proper changes of underwear and socks ordered, and this particularly when from whatever cause they have become wet and consequently unhygienic. One non-commissioned officer may well be instructed as to this oversight.

7. The spirit of a company is reflected at sick call. A company properly officered and properly fired with incentive to show efficiency in every line of duty, usually sends few men to sick call and these men are sick and require attention. The company that is poorly officered, doing its every duty in a slovenly manner, as a rule, sends most of its members to sick call. Some of them are malingerers (dead beats) and most of the rest victims of dissipation and recklessness.

8. Men should be cautioned against overeating and drinking. Vigorous outdoor exercise and exposure to a hot sun is conducive to these excesses. If men can be held in check during first few days, they then adapt themselves to the changed environment, and little trouble is experienced afterwards. This should be made clear to each individual member of the Guard.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

REPORT No. 4. APPENDIX "M."

HOSPITAL CORPS, I. N. G.,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FT. BENJAMIN HARRISON,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August, 5, 1904.

The Chief Surgeon, Camp of Instruction, I. N. G.:

Sir—In pursuance of your orders and in compliance with Paragraph 1571, A. R., 1901, I have the honor to render the following sanitary report for the period of July 27th to August 5th, 1904, inclusive.

The Brigade Hospital is located upon the incline of a slight knoll at the northeast corner of the camp with a natural drainage to the northwest. All ground in the vicinity is well drained, as evidenced by the absence of mosquitoes. Said ground is heavily sodded and in all respects a first-class site for a military hospital.

The tentage is in good condition and has been ample for the number of patients received.

The food supply for the men has been of good quality and well prepared. The sanitary condition of the kitchen has been excellent.

The supply of water has been ample and with the exception of being quite hard, its quality is good. The source is from a deep driven well and hauled to the hospital in tank wagons. As an added precaution all water for drinking purposes is boiled twenty (20) minutes and then iced.

The garbage is deposited in two large tight galvanized iron cans, which are kept about ten yards back of the kitchen and contents burned once a day. Garbage cans are kept elevated from the ground and are scalded out every day.

The latrines are situated about thirty yards back of the kitchen and are treated three times a day, or oftener if necessary, with fresh earth, and whitewashed thoroughly once a day. Stools from patients suffering from camp diarrhoea and typhoid are disinfected with milk of lime before being thrown into the latrines.

The personnel of the Hospital Corps is excellent. Their clothing is of good quality, and consists of one uniform of blue and one of khaki. For sanitary reasons it would be advisable to supply the corps with at least one extra khaki uniform, so as to allow laundering and more frequent changes during the hot weather.

E. F. SOMMER,
Captain and Assistant Surgeon in Charge.

REPORT No. 4. APPENDIX "M1."

HOSPITAL CORPS, I. N. G.,
INDIANAPOLIS, August 5, 1904.

The Chief Medical Officer, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit report on completed cases in the Base Hospital during the tour of the Camp of Instruction at Fort Benjamin Harrison, July 27 to August 5, 1904, inclusive. This report consists of extracts from the regular tabulated report made on the official blanks provided for that purpose, and transmitted herewith.

The total number of cases admitted to the hospital during the tour was forty. No sick and wounded report has been prepared by the regimental surgeons of the slight injuries and ailments of the men in their commands who were treated in quarters. All cases of any consequence whatever have been sent to this hospital.

A brief classification of cases treated is as follows:

1. Contracted Prior to Leaving Home Station—

General debility, from various causes	4
Urticaria, with rheumatic tendencies	1
Ulcer of right leg, from trauma	1
Epididymitis and orchitis	1
Typhoid fever	1
Total	8

Note.—Of the above cases, one of general debility of tubercular history and the case of typhoid fever were sent to home stations. The rest were returned to duty.

2. Contracted in Line of Duty—

Dislocation of phalangeal articulation	1
Acute bronchitis	2
Acute diarrhoea	16
Heat exhaustion	2
Acute constipation	1
Acute indigestion	6
Fever, possibly malarial	1
Lacerated wound of eye, by stepping on stick	1
Vesicle due to cantharides plaster	1
Contusion of right lumbar region, caused by fall	1
Total	32

Note.—Of the above cases all were returned to duty, except the one of contusion, that of Major H. T. Conde, Second Infantry, who had a severe fall while returning to quarters from officers' assembly, and struck himself on a folding chair carried by him. This case was returned to home station.

The total mean strength of the command in camp was 170 officers and 1,928 men, and the aggregate number of days lost from sickness was seventy-eight, which of course includes the loss of those who came to camp suffering from disorders previously contracted. The loss is exceptionally low, and testifies to the excellent sanitary conditions prevailing in this Camp of Instruction.

Very respectfully,

E. F. SOMMERS,

Captain and Assistant Surgeon, I. N. G., Commanding Hospital Corps.

REPORT No. 5.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 30, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to Paragraph I, S. O. No. 76, c. s. Headquarters I. N. G., your Chief Quartermaster officially established depot for annual Camp of Instruction at Fort Benjamin Harrison at 12:01 p. m., July 25th. As a matter of fact the movement of supplies from the State House had begun on Saturday, July 23d, and the force of civilian employes of the Quartermaster's Department had been put to work at that time.

By an arrangement made by the Quartermaster-General, the traction company had laid a temporary spur from the main line at Day's Crossing to a point selected for the depot about three hundred yards south of the Indiana National Guard Headquarters. One large tent had been erected here by the Quartermaster-General as a base for the depot. Promptly upon the arrival of the first train load of equipment from the State House, hospital tents were erected sufficient to shelter all property invoiced to your Quartermaster.

The Traction company did not strictly comply with their agreement as to the furnishing of cars. This delay had been foreseen, however, hence the establishment of the depot prior to the officially authorized time, and such delay was not an unmixed evil, as it enabled your Quartermaster to have all equipage properly assorted as fast as unloaded, and practically ready for issue.

In compliance with Paragraph II, S. O. No. 76, c. s. Headquarters Indiana National Guard, all Regimental and Battalion Quartermasters, with the exception of the Quartermaster of the First Infantry and the Quartermaster of the Third Battalion, Second Infantry, reported to your Chief Quartermaster at 9 o'clock a. m. July 26th. In some instances, notably that of the Artillery Battalion, the prescribed detail of enlisted men were not reported on time, but by afternoon all details were complete.

Wheel transportation was ample and efficient, and by 1 o'clock p. m. on the 27th a first issue, based on five hundred men to the regiment had been made and was out of the depot and in the regimental camps. The Quartermaster of the Artillery Battalion and the Quartermaster of the Hospital Corps had submitted estimates of equipment needed, but the absence of such estimates from the other organizations had rendered necessary the making of an issue upon a purely arbitrary basis. Supplemental issues were made as soon as Regimental Quartermasters could make proper requisition based upon troops actually in camp.

No serious complaint was made of shortage in equipment. Your Quartermaster was able to fill all proper requisitions except for camp tables and camp chairs, and, upon one or two occasions, for gasoline. Complaint was made that in the Third Infantry only two cots had been issued to each company. The attention of the Quartermaster of the Third was called to the fact that one cot had been issued to each officer in the regiment, and the cause for this complaint was removed.

The public animals furnished by the contractor were probably the best ever furnished for the use of the Guard. They were cared for by the organizations to which they were issued, instead of by the contractor, as heretofore, and much of the dissatisfaction and confusion that has always existed was thereby avoided. A notable improvement was noticed in the Artillery Battalion in the matter of the handling of and care for their horses. For this, much credit is due the Veterinarian of the Artillery Battalion, who had active charge of the stables of the Battalion. At the same time it was evident that some instruction, at least theoretical, had been given the enlisted men in hippology. The yelling at and pulling, hauling, jerking and kicking of the cattle, that has heretofore been so prevalent in this organization, was marked by its almost entire absence.

The return of equipment by the Regimental Quartermasters to the depot was accomplished expeditiously and as properly as the existing conditions (or, rather, customs of our service) will permit. By 10 o'clock p. m. August 5th, the last Regimental Quartermaster had closed his accounts with the Chief Quartermaster. Under the arrangement with the Traction company freight trains were to be furnished, beginning at 2 p. m. August 5th. Not a single car was furnished, however, until Monday morning, August 8th. Nor was this the worst of it, for the officers of the Traction company, beginning Friday noon, were continually promising a train "within an hour," thus preventing any systematic arrangement of the time spent in waiting.

Saturday evening, acting upon instructions from the Quartermaster-General's office, the force of civilian employes were discharged, with instruction to return to work Monday morning. This was a serious mistake, as these employes returned to the city for Saturday night and Sunday, and practically all of them failed to report again Monday, feeling, probably, that there was only one or two more days' work, and that of the hardest kind, and that the game was hardly worth the candle. However, sufficient help was secured to handle the equipment, and beginning at 6 o'clock Monday morning, when the first train arrived at the depot, all expedition was used, with the result that the last train load left the Reservation at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday, August 9th.

The difficulties met with by your Quartermaster during the tour of duty were generally of a minor character and could more properly be spoken of as petty annoyances, generally caused by lack of knowledge of proper methods of procedure upon the part of complaining officers. Regimental commanders and their Quartermasters were too much inclined to assume that it was the duty of your Chief Quartermaster to anticipate their needs and to make issue to them upon his own volition. As an instance, in one regiment it was noted that cooks were cutting fuel from the woods, when, as a matter of fact, no requisition for fuel had been made upon your Quartermaster who had an ample supply on hand.

In the Third Infantry a number of Company Officers applied direct to your Quartermaster for cots, not seeming to understand the proper method of procedure in cases of short issue. Another very common practice upon the part of Quartermasters was to send an enlisted man to Depot with an order for certain property or supplies and expecting such order to be filled by the Sergeant or clerk there in charge.

It is the opinion of your Quartermaster that many complaints concerning his department emanate from officers and are not caused by solicitude for the men of their commands but are made in an effort to promote the officer's own personal comfort. Because of this opinion, and for other reasons that will readily suggest themselves, he would respectfully recommend that only such issue be made by the Quartermaster's Department to officers of the Indiana National Guard as are made to officers in the regular establishment; that due notice be given each officer of such decision; and, further, that transportation will only be furnished for the prescribed allowance of baggage.

In three annual reports your Quartermaster has commented upon the failure of Company Commanders to comply with the regulations governing company baggage. During the tour just closed but four companies in the entire Brigade strictly complied with such regulations, and by more than half the companies mess boxes were brought to Camp that required the services of from six to twelve men in handling. Your Quartermaster would respectfully recommend that before the next Camp or tour in the field a general order be issued interpreting the regulations governing the allowance of baggage.

For the betterment of the service, a change is essential in the manner of making and the composition of Quartermasters fatigue details. Orders covering the reporting and subsisting of such details for the beginning of camp were explicit enough and were generally complied with. But details given Quartermasters for use in turning back State property to the Depot were satisfactory in no particular. No arrangements were made for the subsistence of such details nor for their transportation to home stations. The result was a hurry and skurry in order to join company before its departure and generally the men on such detail missed their dinners because they could not be present when mess was first called, and cooks were naturally anxious to clean up and turn in their utensils.

The entire detail for the First Infantry, which had been made from one company, was ordered by the company commander to join the company when it entrained, leaving the Regimental Quartermaster absolutely without the services of a single enlisted man, with the exception of his sergeant, to complete the transfer of property in his possession. This action was taken, it was stated, in spite of the protest of the Regimental Quartermaster in command of the detail, and in the opinion of your Quartermaster such breach of discipline should not be passed over without further action.

In a number of cases, details were left on the ground in charge of Company or Battalion baggage and absolutely no provision made for the subsisting of such details by the officer making the detail.

Your Quartermaster would respectfully recommend that in future orders issuing for details for fatigue duty returning property to depot be based on a general order providing for the pay, subsistence and transportation of such details.

In all contact with Quartermasters or with Commanding Officers your Chief Quartermaster was made aware of the desire upon the part of all to make the best use of opportunities and to perform all duties in an earnest and correct manner. In but few cases were errors committed through willful negligence, but more generally through a lack of knowledge that experience would do most to correct.

Very respectfully,

CARROLL B. CARR,
Major I. N. G., Chief Quartermaster.

REPORT No. 5. APPENDIX "N."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 19, 1904.

CIRCULAR No. 4, 1904.

The following memorandum instructions prepared by Major Carroll B. Carr, Chief Quartermaster, are published for the information and guidance of all concerned.

That the Quartermaster, especially at the making or breaking of camp, is the most harassed individual in the organization goes without saying. An equable temper a courteous manner an ability to work and work hard, but in well directed lines, and a disposition to discount difficulties and grasp opportunities, are prerequisite qualities of a satisfactory quartermaster. But all these will be worthless without a thorough knowledge of the Rules and Regulations, especially as they refer to the Quartermaster's Department, and as the exigencies of the militia service may occasionally modify them. See article LXVIII, A. R. and paragraphs 628 to 632, inclusive, Rules and Regulations, Indiana National Guard.

The attention of all officers is called to paragraphs 876, 877, Rules and Regulations, Indiana National Guard, relating to allowance of baggage. Mess chests that require more than two men to handle are not authorized.

At least five days before coming to camp, the Chief Quartermaster should be furnished with an estimate by each Regimental Quartermaster of the property necessary to properly equip his organization. To make this estimate as accurate as possible, the Battalion Quartermaster should secure from each company commander a written statement as to the number of men he expects to bring to camp. These statements should be used by the Battalion Quartermaster as the basis of his estimate furnished the Regimental Quartermaster.

The Regimental Quartermaster should endeavor to have these estimates fit their actual needs. Should it develop when the troops arrive in camp, that he has underestimated, shortages will be promptly made up upon proper requisition. On the other hand, an over issue means either the labor of double handling and the immediate return to the depot, or the responsibility and accountability for unused property. Issues to Company Commanders must be based upon the actual stength of the command.

All property temporarily issued by the Chief Quartermaster in packages or boxes, must be returned in the original packages. Shovels, axes, etc., are issued tied in bundles of an equal number, and must be returned in same way. Field ranges have been inspected and are issued with complete outfit of utensils, and must be returned in same way or shortages covered by certificates. Certificates in triplicate to cover shortages of any kind must be furnished before leaving camp.

Forage for officers' horses can only be obtained from the Regimental Quartermaster, who shall make proper requisition for the same of the Chief Quartermaster. The Regimental Quartermaster is charged with care of public animals and warning is given all officers against the unauthorized use of such animals.

It should be clearly understood and fully realized that the responsibility for the care and protection of public property devolves not only upon the accountable officer, but upon all officers having the use thereof or access thereto. Any stray animals or lost or misplaced property should be taken up by any officer having knowledge thereof. An officer knowing of the defacement or abuse of public property and not stopping and reporting the same, is equally responsible for such partial or entire destruction.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieutenant-Colonel and A. A. G.

REPORT No. 6.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE CHIEF COMMISSARY SUBSISTENCE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 12, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report relative to this department during the last Camp of Instruction at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Lawrence, Indiana:

Pursuant to paragraph III, S. O. No. 76, A. A. G. O., July 15, 1904, the Chief Commissary was at Fort Benjamin Harrison at 8:00 a. m., July 25, 1904, and proceeded to establish a commissary depot. The facilities for the transportation of supplies were not the best in the world, and the difficulties encountered and the problems to be solved in handling rations were greater than at any previous camp. In solving these problems and overcoming the difficulties much valuable knowledge was gained. The handling of rations by the Company Commanders and Quartermaster and Commissary Sergeants was better than at any previous camp, and while there is still much hard work to be done in the way of improvement, the outlook is more encouraging. If the company commanders can be made to realize their responsibility and the importance of proper handling of rations issued to them, half the battle will be won. The improvement along this line was very noticeable.

But two complaints of shortage in rations were received by this office, and upon investigation through Regimental Commissaries, these were found to be groundless.

No extra rations were issued toward the close of Camp, as has been necessary in previous years.

While in many cases but slight attention was given by Company Commanders to the instructions given in Circular No. 2, A. A. G. O., July 14, 1904 (Appendix "O"), the good results obtained by those who did follow out these instructions warrants the belief that the circular did not fail entirely of its intentions. Attached hereto, and marked Appendix "P," will be found copies of the reports of the Regimental Commissaries and the Commissary Officer of the Artillery Battalion, showing the Company Commanders who did and those who did not comply with these instructions.

Personal investigation by the Chief Commissary of the First Separate Company (Kokomo), the Hospital and Signal Corps, showed that the Kokomo Company had complied in the main with instructions of Circular, but neither the Hospital nor Signal Corps had given the matter any consideration. The Quartermaster and Commissary Sergeant of Hospital Corps has been in the regular army, and of his own volition was conducting the company mess and handling the rations in a satisfactory manner.

In the camp of the Twenty-seventh Infantry, U. S. A., while camped at Fort Benjamin Harrison, the Quartermaster-Sergeant's tent (in which all commissary supplies are kept) was the second tent in line of company tents. This brings the supplies next to the First Sergeant's tent. They are brought closer to the Commanding Officer's notice and farther from the cook's. In the I. N. G. the Quartermaster-Sergeant's tent is the last tent in line of company tents, the farthest removed from the officers quarters, and being next to the cook tent is very easy of access by cooks who have a tendency to help themselves. It is recommended that the location of Quartermaster-Sergeant's tent be changed to correspond with that of the regular army.

The belief is entertained that much progress was made relative to the affairs of this department at the late Camp of Instruction.

Very respectfully,

W. H. KERSHNER,
Major and Chief Commissary of Subsistence.

REPORT No. 6. APPENDIX "O."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 14, 1904.

1904.

The following memorandum instructions prepared by Major Wm. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary of Subsistence, are published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

To a very large degree commissary officers and company commanders are responsible for the health of the command to which they belong. They should be held responsible for the efficiency of their subordinates in handling the details in caring for the same.

A well-fed command is a good natured command, and a good natured command does good work. The health of the men depends in a great measure on the care and preparation of the food served to them, and the matter is of too great importance to be passed over lightly.

To each commissary officer and company commander has been issued by the Quartermaster-General, a copy of the "Manual for Army Cooks." This book contains much valuable information and if thoroughly studied, and the knowledge thus gained be applied, the company mess can not be far wrong.

Special attention is called to the matter contained on pages 39 (messing) to 54, inclusive, which should be modified to suit the exigencies of the company mess.

Before coming to camp each commissary officer and company commander, and the non-commissioned officers concerned will make themselves thoroughly familiar with so much of the contents of this book as above mentioned, and apply the same, so far as possible, in conducting the company mess during the coming Camp of Instruction.

Each company Quartermaster-Sergeant should receive adequate instruction regarding his duties along this line, from his commanding officer, who will be held responsible for the efficiency of his subordinates.

All officers and non-commissioned officers concerned must be thoroughly familiar with the ration table on pages 47-48, "Manual for Army Cooks," and a copy of the same must be kept at hand at all times during the tour of duty at Camp of Instruction.

Company Quartermaster-Sergeants will make daily issue of rations to the company cooks, who will not be allowed access to any rations except such as are issued to them daily.

A bill of fare covering the entire tour of duty (see page 51-54, inclusive, "Manual for Army Cooks") should be made up by the company commander before reaching Camp. A copy in the hands of the Quartermaster-Sergeant will enable him to act intelligently in making issues.

The rations issued will be amply sufficient if properly handled, and company commanders are warned to see that no shortages occur.

The following articles of the ration will be issued, as per table, pages 47-48 "Manual for Army Cooks," during the coming Camp of Instruction:

	Per cent.		Per cent.
Fresh beef	80	Bacon	20
Fresh bread	80	Hard bread	20
Beans	50	Rice	50
Potatoes	80	Onions..... 10 Tomatoes....	10
Coffee	80	Tea	20
Dried apples or peaches.....	50	Prunes	50

Sugar, vinegar, salt, pepper, soap, candles and ice.

Fresh meat and fresh bread will be issued daily.

The following table of approximate weights and measures will be of value where scales are not accessible:

1 quart sifted flour	1 lb.
1 pint butter	1 lb.
1 quart granulated sugar	1 lb. 9 oz.
1 quart dry beans	1 lb. 14 oz.
1 quart rice	2 lb.
1 quart dried prunes	about 1 lb. 7 oz.
1 quart coffee (not ground)	about .... 12 oz.
1 peck potatoes	15 lb.
1 peck onions	11 lb. 4 oz.

Eight quarts equal one peck.

Commissary and company officers, commissary and quartermaster-sergeants will prepare themselves for examination during the coming Camp of Instruction upon subjects relating to their duties as indicated by the foregoing circular.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

F. W. FRANK,
Lieutenant-Colonel and A. A. G.

REPORT No. 6. APPENDIX "P."

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA,
August 9, 1904.

Major W. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary of Subsistence, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report on Circular No. 2, in compliance with verbal orders:

The Artillery Battalion as a whole complied with Circular No. 2 in the main. The men being well fed and healthy throughout the whole camp, having but one sick man during the ten days tour of duty.

Battery A's quartermaster-sergeant was unable to be in camp, therefore their acting quartermaster-sergeant was not as familiar with the work as he might have been.

Battery C's sergeant was all that could be asked, and with but one exception he allowed the cook to sleep with his provisions for two nights. However, after Captain Glascock's attention had been called to it the second time it was corrected.

Battery B fared better, I think, than any other Battery, owing to the fact that they had an enlisted cook who served for six years in the regular army.

The Band also had an enlisted cook who did not prove so satisfactory. After two days in camp he deserted. Through the courtesy of Battery B the band lived well the remaining days in camp.

There was no bill of fare for each meal, with the exception of Battery C.

I would most respectfully recommend that the commanding officers see that the day's rations are issued day by day and not allow the cook to draw as he sees fit.

There was an officer at each meal to inspect same, and as a whole from the commissary standpoint it was the most successful camp that it has been my privilege to attend.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

E. H. BURFORD,
First Lieutenant and Commissary Artillery Battalion.

REPORT No. 6. APPENDIX "P."

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, INDIANA,
August 4, 1904.

Major W. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.:

Sir—I have the honor to report that I personally interviewed the company commanders and Quartermaster-Sergeants of the Third Regiment.

A. The Quartermaster-Sergeant of Co. A has a copy of the manual for army cooks. He makes a daily issue to the cook, who does not have access to the rations. The company commander did not make out a bill of fare.

B. The Quartermaster-Sergeant of Co. B has a copy of the manual for army cooks. He makes no daily issue to the cook, who has access to the food at all times. No bill of fare was made out by the company commander.

C. The Quartermaster-Sergeant is not in camp with Company C. There is only one commissioned officer in camp with this company. The acting Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for cooks. No daily issue of the rations was made, the cook having access to the food at all times. No bill of fare was made out by the company commander.

D. The Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for army cooks. No daily issue was made, the cook having access to the food at all times. No bill of fare was made out.

E. The Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for army cooks. A daily issue is made to the cook. No bill of fare was made.

F. The Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for army cooks. No daily issue of rations was made, the cook having access to the food at all times. No bill of fare was made out.

G. The Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for army cooks. A daily issue was made to the cook. The bill of fare was made out.

H. The Quartermaster-Sergeant has a copy of the manual for army cooks. A daily issue was made to the cook. No bill of fare was made out.

I. Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for army cooks. No daily issue of rations was made, the cook having access to the rations at all times. No bill of fare was made out.

K. Quartermaster-Sergeant has no copy of the manual for army cooks. No daily issue of rations was made, the cook having access to the food at all times. No bill of fare was made out.

L. Quartermaster-Sergeant has a copy of the manual for army cooks. A daily issue of rations was made. Cook did not have access to the food. No bill of fare was made out.

M. Quartermaster-Sergeant has a copy of the manual for army cooks. A daily issue was made. The cook has access to the food. A bill of fare was made out.

In conclusion, I would state that there is a tendency upon the part of company commanders to let the Quartermaster-Sergeant use what quantity of rations he thinks best. In many cases the Quartermaster-Sergeant allows the cook to use his own judgment in regard to the use of rations.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES M. GAAR,
Captain and Commissary, Third Regiment.

REPORT No. 6. APPENDIX "P."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION NEAR INDIANAPOLIS,
August 5, 1904.

Major W. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report as to arrival of companies of the Second Infantry. A, C, D and H at 7:00 a. m. E at 1:00 p. m. M at 10:30 a. m. L at 1:05 p. m. K at 8:35 a. m. G and I at 12:45 p. m. F at 1:00 p. m., and B at 1:30 p. m.

Rations were ready for companies upon their arrival, but none of the companies had any mess until after 2:00 p. m.

I also asked commanding officer of each company the following questions and have set oposite their names their answers?

1. Have you studied army cook book?
   Yes.—A, C, E, G, H, I, M.
   No.—B, D, F, K, L.
2. Has Quartermaster-Sergeant received instruction before coming to camp?
   Yes.—A, C, E, F, G, H, I, K, M.
   No.—B, D, L.
3. Do Quartermaster-Sergeants issue rations to cooks?
   Yes.—A, C, F, G, H, I, K, L, M.
   No.—B, D, E.
4. Do cooks have access to rations not issued?
   Yes.—E.
   No.—A, B, C, D, F, G, H, I, K, L, M.

5. Was the bill of fare for tour of duty made out before coming to camp?
Yes.—A, C, G, I.
No.—B, D, E, F, H, K, L, M.

Very respectfully,
H. B. MAHON,
Captain and Commissary Second Infantry.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
August 3, 1904.

Major W. H. Kershner, Chief Commissary, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to report that I have talked with the commanding officers of the respective companies of the First Infantry, I. N. G., relative to the manual for army cooks, and find that all have studied the same before coming to camp, though some not to the extent perhaps desired.

In my examination of the Company Quartermaster-Sergeants I received the following answers to questions:

1. Did you study manual for army cooks before coming to Camp?
Answered "Yes"—A, B, C, D, E, F, G..... 7
Answered "No"—H, I, K, L, M, Band..... 6
2. Does Quartermaster-Sergeant issue rations to cooks?
Answered "Yes"—A, B, C, E, F, G, H, L..... 8
Answered "No"—I, D, M, K, Band..... 5
3. Do cooks have access to rations?
Answered "Yes"—C, K, I, D, M, K..... 6
Answered "No"—B, G, A, F, H, E, Band..... 7
4. Was bill of fare prepared before coming to camp?
Answered "No" in all companies.
5. Is Quartermaster-Sergeant familiar with ration table for company?
Answered "Yes"—B, E, G, L, D, H..... 6
Answered "No"—G, A, C, F, I, K, M, Band..... 7

Find all companies satisfied with rations and enough to eat.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
E. F. BRANCH,
Captain Commissary First Infantry.

REPORT No. 7.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE ENGINEER OFFICER,
ROCKVILLE, INDIANA, August 29, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Sir—In pursuance with G. O. No. 4, concerning report of camp tour, beg to submit the following:

The schedule of exercises prepared for the Camp of Instruction, 1904, was carried out to the letter, and the battalions and batteries spent their time on entrenchments and gun-pits, as follows:

July 28—Morning—1st Batt. 2d. Inf., 1st Batt. 3d Inf.
July 28—Afternoon—2d Batt. 2d Inf., 2d Batt. 3d Inf.
July 29—Morning—3d Batt. 3d Inf.
July 30—Morning—3d Batt. 2d Inf., Battery A, Batt. B.
Aug. 2—Morning—1st Batt. 1st Inf.
Aug. 2—Afternoon—2d Batt. 1st Inf.
Aug. 3—Morning—3d Batt. 1st Inf., Battery C.

Having been informed of the plans of the attack and defense of the Camp for Thursday, August 4, I had the entrenchments constructed with this in view, as nearly as practicable, having to take into consideration that no land should be disturbed that had a good stand of grass. The locations of the trenches, gun-pits and earthworks are shown in blue upon the contour map accompanying Report of Tactical Exercise, Appendix "A." Notice will be taken that there are two roads leading to camp from the west, from which direction Col. Smith's command was to attack the camp. These roads have open country to the north of them, where upon an elevation of 850 feet, commanding the country for over a mile in front, the entrenchments were constructed. Between the two entrenchments is the Spees ravine, thickly wooded and almost impassable. The trenches, gun-pits and earthworks were located on the military crest as shown on the contour map. The earthworks were about 2,000 feet northwest, while the trenches along the Robert's road were about one mile northwest of Brigade Headquarters. The German gun-pit constructed by Battery A on the road 400 yards west of Brigade Headquarters, commanded a range from 800 to 2,000 yards, and in every direction. The trenches north and south of the earthworks were 515 feet long and were for men lying, kneeling and standing. (See sketch and photographs.) (Appendix "Q," "R," and "S.") The trenches along the Robert's road consisted of 370 feet of shelter trenches for men lying, which were transformed into trenches for men kneeling. This made a total of 885 feet of trenches. The total amount of trenches constructed, had they not been transformed, would have made a continuous trench of 1,820 feet.

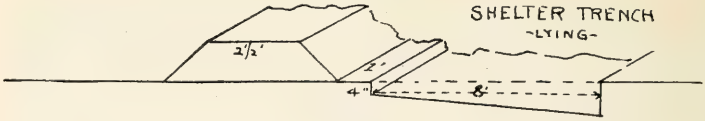
The gun-pits constructed were as follows:

Battery A—German and Austrian.
Battery B—German and Austrian.
Battery C—French and English.

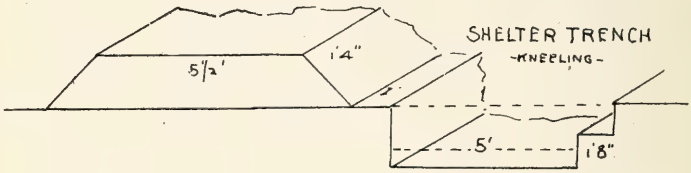
The section of earthworks was 22 feet long and covered a distance from the rear of the trench to the front of the glacis of 57 feet. (Note sketch and pictures. Appendices "T" and "U.")

For revetments we used gabions; and for the wattling material, small bushes and grapevines in the ravine near by. Attached is a picture of one of these gabions. (Appendix "I.") It required considerable time to build this piece of earthwork on account of being able to work only a limited number of men at a time, and the soil being so hard that picks had to be used to loosen the earth for shoveling. I made no effort to keep the exact time put upon any particular piece of work, nor the number of men, but utilized all the men and time in doing some work. We worked the men in reliefs, and while some were in the trenches, others were at the earthworks and others assisted in making the gabions.

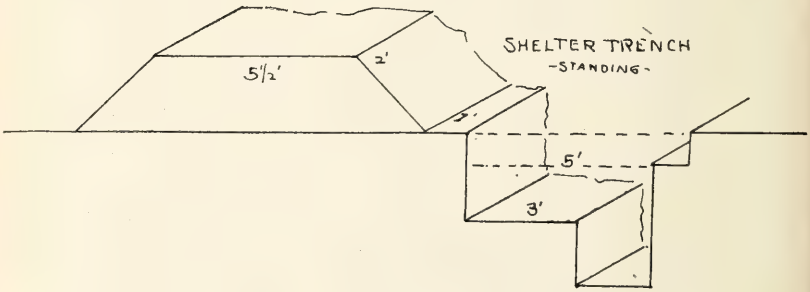
On two occasions we timed small sections of the work, and in each instance it was constructed in less time than that estimated in Beach's Manual of Military Field Engineering. Especial care was taken in placing the loose dirt in front of the trenches, so that a man firing would have entire command of the field in front of him to within a few feet of the trenches. After covering the loose dirt with weeds, grass, etc., the men were put in the trenches and instructed in their uses. The guns were placed in the gun-pits to test the height. We had at our disposal 50 picks, 50 mattocks, 50 spades and 50 long-handled shovels.



I desire to express my appreciation for the kind assistance rendered by Lt. Ralph McCoy of the 27th U. S. Inf. He was not only capable, but very willing to assist in the work when not on duty with his battalion.



There was unusual interest taken in the work by both officers and men.



I would respectfully recommend that sufficient money be appropriated to fully equip an engineering corps, and that it be organized in time for the next Camp of Instruction.

Very respectfully submitted,

FRANK E. STROUSE,
Major and Engineer Officer.

REPORT No. 8.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF RANGE OFFICER,
INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA, December 9, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I submit the following report of rifle practice had during the Annual Encampment of the Indiana National Guard held at Fort Benjamin Harrison, July 27 to August 5, 1904.

Attached hereto are the tabulated averages by companies, marked Appendices "V1," "V2," "V3" and "V4;" also two photographs showing targets used in this work (Appendices "V5" and "V6.")

A short time previous to the encampment, Quartermaster-General Perry procured ten Laidly or sliding targets from the Ordnance Department, U. S. A. These targets are the best of the various kinds furnished by that Department: they are very substantially built, work easily and rapidly, and when properly protected from bullets seldom require repairs. (See Appendices "V5" and "V6.")

Capt. B. F. Cheatham, U. S. A., selected the locations for these targets —six of which were located west of Mud Creek near the northwest corner of the reservation. (See Report No. 1, Appendix "H.") An elevated point of ground rising between the forks of Fall Creek and Mud Creek served as a stop for the bullets. Only two hundred yards range could be had at this location, which was designated officially as the "West Range." Four of the targets were placed east of the point, which, on this side also served as a stop for bullets fired from the one, two, three and five hundred yards range. This was designated as the "East Range." Ten companies could engage in practice at the same time. Practice commenced on the morning of July 28. Instructions received from the General Commanding were that all officers and enlisted men who could do so were required to spend one day at practice, and to repeat their scores as often as possible. Thus some of the organizations were able to fire through twice at one, two and three hundred yards. Those firing at any range were required to make sixty per cent. of the possible, in order to fire at the next longer range. After firing through at the different ranges, practice was again resumed at the one hundred range, where all were required to participate regardless of their previous scores. In this way some of the companies were able to repeat their fire at one, two and three hundred yards, two and three times.

The reduced range ammunition was used for one, two and three hundred yard firing. There was no wind at any time during the firing and it is our opinion that the scores were about as high as if the service ammunition had been used. Although there was much complaint among the men about the inaccuracy of the ammunition, it was noted that experienced men could make good scores with the same rifles and ammunition, and under the same conditions in which the inexperienced failed. It is natural for the inexperienced rifleman to find fault with his rifle, the sights and the ammunition, and in fact, he attributes his low scores to everything but his own inefficiency.

In July previous to the encampment the reduced range ammunition was used on the East Range by an experienced officer of the U. S. A., an enlisted man of experience and myself, at three hundred yards, while the wind was blowing ten or twelve miles an hour, and it was found that results were entirely unreliable under these conditions, and no arrangement of the sight would overcome the inaccuracy caused by the wind. At the request of the Commanding General, Lt. Col. R. T. Yeatman, 27th U. S. Infantry, detailed one officer and three enlisted men from that organization as instructors on each of the ranges. All of them were men of experience, their services were of the highest order, and in every way most valuable. That "coldness" which is sometimes said to exist between those of the regular establishment and the volunteers, was entirely absent; and it was noticed that in most cases the guardsmen were anxious to learn and the regulars anxious to teach. We feel that we voice the sentiment of the entire Guard when we say that their work was entirely satisfactory.

Following is a statement of the number of men firing, their scores, the per cent., the first class, second class, third class and fourth class, as contemplated in Par. 148, page 99, Small Arms Firing Regulations, all the provisions of which we are unable to comply with, owing to the fact that a season's course could not be had up to this time.

AGGREGATES.

	Number Firing at all Ranges.	Total Score.	Per Cent. of Scores at all Ranges.	First Class.	Second Class.	Third Class.	Fourth Class.
First Infantry	642	10,662	41	2	1	338	496
Second Infantry	662	14,464	53.42	.....	.....	350	429
Third Infantry	689	16,996	54	.....	.....	332	501
Separate Infantry Co.	54	1,959	56.78	.....	.....	54	25
Artillery Battalion	182	3,685	54.24	.....	.....	109	145
Hospital Corps	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	53
Signal Corps	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	43

When all the conditions are considered the exhibit shown by the tabulation is very satisfactory.

Until February of this year no systematic effort was made to advance rifle practice. Acting on instructions received February 24, last, I visited all the companies of infantry, except one, and the three batteries, remaining with them from one to three nights, instructing officers and men in the positions, aiming and sighting drills, also including a talk on the use and care of the rifle, the flight of bullets, the trajectories, the effect of the atmosphere, the effect of the wind, and the importance of learning to estimate distance. Those who attended these schools were enthusiastic on the subject of the shoot, and when they went on the range during the annual encampment, they manifested a great amount of interest, and worked very faithfully for the very best results, under adverse circumstances. They were hampered by want of practice, some of the men having never fired a military rifle, and most of them had never received instruction on the range. In addition to the want of practice in aiming the piece from the shoulder the men were all subjected, while in camp, to a very strenuous tour of duty, including aside from the regular routine, practice marches and constructing earthworks.

The conditions resulting from these exceptional exertions were such that even had these men been experienced riflemen, their scores would have been comparatively lower than usual. A consensus of opinion of those whom we have heard express themselves, is that in this particular attainment of the soldier such progress has not been previously made in so short a time by the Indiana National Guard. It is respectfully recommended that this instruction be continued, until all the officers and enlisted men have become proficient in the use of the rifle and have learned what is required of them in all that pertains to rifle practice.

Very respectfully,

DAVID I. McCORMICK,
Major, Retired, Chief Range Officer.

REPORT No. 9.

HEADQUARTERS SIGNAL CORPS,
WARSAW, IND., August 20, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report on the work of the Signal Corps at the Camp of Instruction held at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Lawrence, Indiana, July 27 to August 5, 1904, inclusive.

In accordance with Special Orders No. 76, Headquarters Indiana National Guard, 1904, left home station on Monday, July 25, at 10:08 a. m., arrived at Union Station, Indianapolis, at 2:40 p. m. Proceeded to Signal Corps Armory, making the necessary arrangements for the corps to proceed to the Reservation. Arrived at camp with a detail of five enlisted men and one cook, and at once commenced the work of establishing a telephone system throughout the entire camp, connecting the several headquarters and depots with the city of Indianapolis. This work was completed at 3:30 p. m., July 27, and a perfect telephone system was constructed and maintained during the entire period of the camp.

A detachment of the Signal Corps was detailed Wednesday, July 27, at 3:30 p. m., to proceed to the rifle ranges and wire them for score signaling. This work was finished and the detachment returned at 6:30 p. m. to their quarters.

On Thursday, July 28, School of Instruction was held, telephone lines improved and quarters policed. As per schedule of exercises the Signal Corps was inspected in quarters at 5 p. m.

On Friday, July 29, per Memo. Orders No. 5174, a detachment of the Signal Corps, consisting of two sergeants, one corporal and twenty-two privates under command of First Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood, reported to the commanding officer of the First Infantry for orders. The requirements were to maintain a system of communication between camp and a marching column. The flag system was used, and it required nine flag stations to reach the permanent camp from the field bivouac at the end of the practice march. These stations were installed after much hard labor, as the country was hilly, and covered mostly with trees and underbrush, which made it difficult to establish a flag line. In spite of obstacles, nevertheless, the line was completed and messages sent to and from both camps. The remainder of the corps remaining in camp was given instructions and prepared for the next practice march on Monday, August 1.

On Saturday, July 30, First Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood and twenty-five enlisted men were still out with the First Infantry, returning at 5 p. m. The remaining members of the corps policed quarters and received instruction in signaling and line work.

On Sunday, July 31, in compliance with Memo. Orders No. 5206, the Signal Corps prepared for inspection, in quarters, by the Commanding General and Staff. For some reason the inspecting party omitted to inspect the Signal Corps and the men were dismissed by a verbal order from the Acting Assistant Adjutant-General. In accordance with General Orders, No. 5, 1904, the Signal Corps participated in the Review of the Guard by His Excellency, the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, Winfield T. Durbin. As per Memo. Orders, No. 5208, the officers of the Signal Corps made their official call on the Governor on the evening of this day.

On Monday, August 1, in compliance with the schedule of exercises, a detachment of the Signal Corps, consisting of one sergeant, two corporals and twelve privates, under the command of First Lieutenant John N. LeHew, reported to the commanding officer of the Third Infantry at daybreak for orders to proceed on practice march. Left camp at 7:52 a. m., starting north and constructed a telephone line, building it on the Farmers Telephone Company's poles, lance poles, trees and fences, or, in fact, anything that would hold a porcelain and the wire. At a distance of about three and one-half miles from Fort Harrison, the supply of wire gave out and put a stop to building the line further on, it being then necessary to retreat about one half mile to the farm house of George W. Bolander, with the object of tapping the Farmers Telephone Company's wire. After the necessary arrangements were made with the manager of the company, the line was tapped and this gave us a direct line to the bivouac camp of the Third Infantry near the Teale house and also to all farm houses in that section of the country. This gave us a great deal of desirable information. Messages were transmitted to and from both camps, as well as to the city of Indianapolis. The connections were kept open all night and until 2:45 p. m. the next day, August 2, and then the work of taking down the wire was commenced. Wire and poles were taken down and the detachment were in their quarters at 5:10 p. m.

On August 3, in compliance with Memo. Orders, No. 5231, a detachment of the Signal Corps, under the command of First Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood, reported to the commanding officer of the Second Infantry for orders regarding the establishment and maintenance of communciation on practice march. The march was conducted as per Memo. Orders, No. 5230, to the Lawrence Fair Grounds. Under verbal orders, through First Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood, a detachment of the Signal Corps, under command of First Lieutenant John L. LeHew, undertook to establish a line of communication from Fort Benjamin Harrison to the old Lawrence Fair Grounds. As we neared the camp of the Second Infantry, we were halted by outposts, were taken prisoners and held until 4:30 p. m., when we were released by command of the Commanding General. The line was then completed and the instrument installed at the headquarters of Colonel Smith commanding the Brown forces, whereupon the detachment returned to camp. This line of communication was a telephone line and was built with the utmost care, the object being to hide the wire and deceive any one that might want to destroy the line and break communication between the camps. Barbed wire fences were used to a certain extent, the wire being changed at intervals up and down on the fence, and from the fence through culverts by use of insulated wire.

On the morning of August 4, the command of Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood with the Brown force, took an active part in the attack on the Blue positions although it was almost impossible to use the flag station on account of the powder smoke.

On Friday, August 5, the Signal Corps followed the schedule of exercises, including Memo. Orders, pertaining to breaking camp, and at 2:30 p. m. the telephone system of the camp was dismantled and the lines taken down and packed up. A detail was sent to rifle range to take down the wire and pack the same.

I would recommend for the betterment of the service, the adoption of the buzzer system, which has a great many advantages over the present field telephone. The buzzers can be used as telephone or telegraph just as desired, and the lines for the buzzers can be constructed in much less time than the lines for the field telephone. I would therefore earnestly recommend that the buzzers be purchased, especially for the field work of the corps.

Respectfully,

JOHN N. LEHEW,
First Lieutenant Commanding.

REPORT No. 10.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Nov. 19, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, State of Indiana, City:

Sir—I have the honor to report that in compliance with General Orders No. 3, series of 1904, I arrived at the Camp of Instruction, Fort Benjamin Harrison, on Wednesday, July 27.

The day was spent in the establishment of Camp and as per schedule of exercises assigned for that day. In the afternoon of Wednesday, July 27, the new Infantry Company at Kokomo, Indiana, was assigned to my regiment, and by me assigned to the Third Battalion under command of Major John H. Tarlton. The strength of my command including this company, was as follows:

Officers	49
Men	581

The band at Auburn, Indiana, had been contracted for and reported to me for duty on this date.

The Schedule of Exercises, as outlined from your headquarters, was followed throughout the entire Camp. Particular attention was given to all paragraphs and various orders received from your headquarters, more particularly those pertaining to and looking toward the sanitary condition of the Camp.

It is my opinion that there has never been a Camp held since I have been a member of the Guard, in which there was the attention paid to the kitchens, to the sanitary condition of the mess outfits, the cooking and latrines, as at this time. The greatest care was exercised in regard to the supervision of the mess and the policing of the quarters.

The Camp was held in the open, there being no shade trees at this point. I believe that this was more beneficial than our former camps which were held in groves. The health of my command was better than ever before, and I herewith quote from the report of Major Homer I. Jones, Senior Surgeon of my regiment, as being worthy of endorsement:

"I think that in the future company commanders, who generally are men that have gone into Camp several times, should be directed to instruct the men as to the things to be avoided. They should instruct the men to avoid overeating and overdrinking, especially when they are very warm. The men should be taught to avoid the lemonade and such things which they purchase at the sutler's tent. I think if the men could be instructed concerning these things previous to leaving their home stations they might be saved quite a good deal of stomach and bowel trouble, which usually follows indulgence in this direction. Company commanders who are responsible for the welfare of their men, should see that such instructions are given.

"While there was not so much of this trouble as in former years, I think it might be still farther reduced.

"The ground was admirable for camping, and the Camp being in the open was conducive to the health of the command. The water was obtained by hauling, was of good quality and sufficient quantity. No sickness was noticeable as a result of the change in water among the men of my command. The food was of good quality and sufficient in quantity. The company cooks throughout the regiment were proficient, and the food was both well cooked and well served.

"The hygiene and sanitary regulations were thorough and well enforced. The company kitchens and quarters were always clean and well policed. The substitution of garbage cans for old barrels and trenches, I regard as a decided improvement. The absence of old broken down barrels half filled with decaying garbage clinging to the barrel staves, made a decided improvement in the odors usually found in this part of the Camp.

"The sinks in the rear of the Camp were more carefully attended to than has been the case at any previous encampment. I regard the digging of sinks in the ground, which is to be permanently used for camping purposes, as unhealthy.

"I wish here to recommend the use of a cast-iron sink, such as is used in the camp of the Ohio National Guard. This sink is so made that the tank can be taken out of the frame, which forms the seat, and can be hauled away and emptied and cleansed. Ten or twelve of these tanks can be hauled on a wagon, and by having that many extra ones, a clean one can be substituted for the dirty one each morning. When the clean tanks have been placed in the tents and the wagon has been filled with dirty ones, these can be taken away, emptied, and cleansed, and then can be used to replace others which need to be emptied.

"Having these extra tanks it is possible to change all of them each day, and yet no tent will be left without a sink ready for use. They can be changed in much less time than is necessary to burn out and lime the sinks. They are covered and the lids close tight automatically when one gets up from the seat. It is impossible to soil the seat and the flies can not get inside the tank, and thus carrying of infection from sinks to food is positively prevented. These tanks also have an arrangement for use as a urinal attached to them, and soiling of the ground around can thereby be prevented.

"Several companies of the regiment did not bring an ice box with them, neither did they procure one during the encampment. I think company commanders should be instructed to see that an ice box of some kind be provided.

"The health of the regiment was better than any previous camp. The number of men reporting at sick call seldom exceeded four or five, and some mornings there were none. Of those coming at sick call, more came as a result of minor accidents or blistered feet, than from other causes. Some few reported because of venereal disease. Company commanders should be instructed to leave such men at home, as they are a source of danger to other men.

"Looking at the encampment as a part of the Medical Corps, I regard it as a much better encampment than has ever been held previous to this time. Both officers and men were careful in carrying out the sanitary regulations, and the members of the Medical Corps found their work much easier than heretofore. It was my pleasure to inspect the camp of the Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry, in company with Dr. Mabrey, and in my opinion the camp of the Second Regiment, I. N. G., compared very favorably with theirs in all particulars.

"I think some improvement could be made in the manner I have suggested."

The attention given by the men to their duties and the interest which they took in the work as outlined, is to be commended. The work of the officers was never better, and each one seemed to bring an earnestness into his work, and a desire to do all that was required of him, with a spirit which has not heretofore been shown.

The march on August 3 to the old Lawrence Fair grounds and the bivouac there for the night, and the attack on the Camp of Thursday, August 4, were experiences which the regiment had not had at any camp of the Guard heretofore, and were the main features of this Camp of Instruction. My special report submitted at the time covers these exercises. (Report No. 15 and Appendices.)

During the Camp the commissary supplies furnished were sufficient in quantity and of excellent quality. There was a shortage of water during the first few days on account of the failure of the wells which had been driven to furnish the water supply. This was remedied, and the water furnished was of an excellent quality.

It is the opinion of the undersigned that a better system could be inaugurated in the assignment of wagons to the various regiments. At this Camp we were required to drop our own work at any and all times, and turn over our wagons to the Quartermaster Department, which interfered with the work and the routine of duty.

My thanks are due to the officers of the Twenty-seventh Infantry for information and advice given during the entire tour of duty.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

H. B. SMITH,
Colonel Second Infantry, Indiana National Guard.

REPORT No. 11.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY,
INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
VINCENNES, IND., August 18, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the tour of duty of this regiment at the Camp of Instruction of 1904:

I left home station at 6:30 a. m. of July 27 and arrived at Camp about noon of the same day. Company I arrived at 5:30 p. m., being the last organization of this regiment to report.

The attendance was as follows:

	Officers.	Men.
Field and staff	17	..
Non-commissioned staff	..	8
Band	..	23
Company A	2	41
Company B	3	47
Company C	2	38
Company D	2	43
Company E	2	42
Company F	3	43
Company G	3	39
Company H	3	31
Company I	3	33
Company K	3	31
Company L	3	40
Company M	2	57
	48	514
Aggregate		562

Hours of service were prescribed subject to the general Schedule of Exercises.

Lieutenant-Colonel Jas. F. Fee was designated as Summary Court Officer, Captain E. F. Branch was put in charge of the camp guard duty, and First Lieutenant Wm. R. Davidson, Assistant Surgeon, was designated to supervise all matters pertaining to the policing and sanitation of the camp.

The regular routine of duty was taken up on the morning of the 28th and faithfully carried out during the entire tour.

A very noticeable improvement in the work of the regiment was noticed in all respects. The officers, especially, showing a decided improvement over their work of previous years. Some improvement was shown from a sanitary point of view, but better work along this line could have been done. According to the general plan of the camp there was only one sink for two companies, which in some cases did not work well, and it would be far better for each company to have its own sink, which would make it easier to place the responsibility for any neglect of care of same.

The ration issued seemed to be wholesome and satisfactory in quantity, and beyond some minor troubles at first, no complaints were made. There seemed to be a shortage of straw for bedding at first but when attention was called to the matter it was soon remedied.

The work accomplished during this tour was in every way the most satisfactory and more progress was made than in any camp in my experience in the Guard. The discipline of the command showed a very gratifying improvement, and it is hoped we may be able to continue to advance in this line as in others.

I would respectfully recommend that the State issue shoes to the enlisted men or in lieu thereof make a cash allowance yearly of $3.00 per man.

I left camp at noon on the 5th of August and arrived home at 9 p. m. of the same day.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. McCOY,
Colonel.

REPORT No. 11. APPENDIX "W."

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, July 29, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the practice march of this regiment, under Memorandum Order No. 5174, Headquarters I. N. G., 1904, carried out July 28 and 29, 1904:

The column consisted of the First Regiment of Infantry, I. N. G., Battery C, I. N. G.; a detachment of the Signal Corps, and a detachment of the Hospital Corps with an ambulance; total strength—47 officers, 470 men. The train consisted of five wagons and ten animals.

The order of march provided for an advance guard, main body, and rear guard, with necessary flankers, and was as follows:

Advance Guard—Companies H, D and I, Major T. J. Louden, commanding.

Artillery—Battery C, three Hotchkiss guns, Captain J. L. Glascock.

Main Body—First Infantry, I. N. G., Colonel Geo. W. McCoy.

Ambulance—Detached Hospital Corps under Captain Guthrie, Assistant Surgeon, First Infantry.

Wagon Train—Under Captain Bierhaus, Quartermaster First Infantry.

Rear Guard—Company B, First Infantry, Captain Dudley.

The head of the column was ready to move at 7:00 a. m., but was delayed half an hour by Battery C. The line of march was as indicated on accompanying map (Appendix "X") via A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, L and M, to a camp site selected in a field owned by a Mr. Teal, west of the road between M and N, and opposite Mr. Teal's house. The last of the rear guard arrived at 10:57 a. m., and the command at once went into bivouac, pitched shelter tents, and established camp. The Second Battalion under Major Wm. J. Coleman, was ordered to establish outposts at once, and covered territory in a semi-circle from beyond N on the east to F on the west. The artillery took position just north of N on a swell of ground, in the edge of timber, and commanding the entire front in range to west and south, where they constructed gun pits.

The two remaining battalions of infantry were sent north during the afternoon of July 29, for practice in out-post formation and drill, and were recalled at sundown.

A picket post directly south of the "Broken Bridge" (see map) was attacked at 12:15 a. m. July 29, by about thirty men and a piece of artillery. The attack was repulsed by the out-post, but before the unimportance of the attack was discovered, the regiment was formed at 1:01 a. m. It was moved toward N ready to deploy for defense, but was not needed.

The opposing artillery fired several shots, but were in such position that they could have done no damage, and as the fire appeared haphazard and tentative, probably to develop our own well protected artillery position, it was not allowed to draw a return fire from Glascock's guns.

One prisoner, a lieutenant-colonel, doing independent scouting stunts, was captured on our extreme left by Capt. Burrows.

The rear of our positions was defended by Lieutenant-Colonel Fee with three companies, but this was merely a precautionary measure.

"Recall" was finally sounded at 2:45 a. m., and the men were given a chance for a restful sleep.

On July 29, at 8:00 a. m., the companies moved out to make reconnoissances, returning at 11:00 a. m. Their routes were indicated and all were required to make road maps with as much topographic detail as possible, the entire reconnoissance covering an area within a radius of two miles in all directions from the bivouac.

Camp was broken at 1:30 p. m. and the command moved out promptly at 2:00 p. m., the advance guard being under Major Coulter. The artillery marched with the rear reserve. Company K, Captain Rutledge, formed the rear guard. It was found more practicable to return via N, O, P, Q and R. The rear guard arrived in permanent camp at 4:55 p. m.

Some mistakes were made and attention called to them, which makes it improbable that the same will occur again. Great interest was taken in the several exercises by every one, and on the whole, the march was very beneficial to all.

Respectfully,

GEORGE W. McCOY,
Colonel commanding First Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 12.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
GREENFIELD, INDIANA, August 31, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indianapolis, Ind.:

Sir—Pursuant to General Orders No. 4, 1904, Headquarters I. N. G., I have the honor to submit herewith a report of camp tour of the Third Infantry, I. N. G., at the annual Camp of Instruction at Fort Benjamin Harrison, near Indianapolis, Indiana, from July 27 to August 5, 1904, both dates inclusive.

In compliance with Special Orders No. 76, 1904, Headquarters I. N. G., the regimental and battalion quartermasters, the regimental and battalion quartermaster-sergeants and a fatigue detail of eight (8) enlisted men reported for duty to the Chief Quartermaster at 9 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, July 26.

The regimental commissary and regimental commissary-sergeant with a fatigue detail of two (2) enlisted men and one (1) cook reported for duty to the Chief Commissary of Subsistence at 10 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, July 26.

On July 27, 1904, at 7:38 a. m., I left home station, Greenfield, Indiana, accompanied by Major O. E. Holloway, surgeon, and First Lieutenant Frank W. Selman, assistant surgeon, via Indianapolis and Eastern and Union Traction Railway, arriving at Camp of Instruction, Fort Benjamin Harrison at 10 o'clock a. m. Captain W. O. Bragg, adjutant, having preceded me by an earlier car by same route, arrived at Camp at 8 o'clock a. m.

On my arrival in Camp I found regimental headquarters established and the quartermaster and commissary departments prepared to make issues to the several companies promptly on their arrival.

ARRIVAL OF COMPANIES, JULY 27, 1904.

Company C, Captain J. L. Boyer and 36 men, at 9:40 a. m.
Company M, Captain L. M. Wilcox, 1 officer and 38 men, at 10 a. m.
Company A, Captain Pearl Bogue, 2 officers and 51 men, at 10:30 a. m.
Company G, Captain S. N. Markly, 2 officers and 40 men, at 12:15 p. m.
Company E, Captain G. C. Groll, 2 officers and 42 men, at 12:30 p. m.
Company L, Captain J. P. Wason, 2 officers and 42 men, at 12:45 p. m.
Company D, Captain J. L. Birely, 2 officers and 40 men, at 12:47 p. m.
Company H, Captain O. B. Kilmer, 2 officers and 45 men, at 1 p. m.
Company I, Captain C. F. Holtzendorff, 1 officer and 30 men, at 1 p. m.
Company F, Lieutenant C. B. Calvert and 35 men at 1:30 p. m.
Company B, Captain E. S. Kemery, 2 officers and 38 men, at 5:30 p. m.
Company K, Captain J. R. McDowell, 1 officer and 38 men, at 5:30 p. m.

HOURS OF SERVICE.

Immediately after establishing camp, I issued an order prescribing the hours of service, a copy of which was forwarded to Brigade Headquarters.

INTERIOR GUARD.

At 6 o'clock p. m. interior guard was established by a detail of one captain, officer of the day; one first lieutenant, officer of the guard; one second lieutenant, supernumerary officer of the guard; two sergeants, three corporals, one musician, twenty-eight enlisted men, one of whom was detailed to Regimental Headquarters as orderly.

On the morning of July 28 we began our tour of camp duty as per "Schedule of Exercises" issued from Brigade Headquarters, and adhered carefully to the same during the entire encampment. The work was taken up with enthusiasm by officers and men.

The change in the programme for camp, from the old style regimental drills to the modern method of teaching a man to be a "Soldier for Duty" under actual war conditions, has worked wonders in the interest shown by every member of the Guard.

There is one thing I deem of great importance, and earnestly recommend to the consideration of the commanding officer, that is "Physical Culture." Every officer should thoroughly understand the "Setting up Exercises," and other methods of calisthenics and be able to properly impart such knowledge, so that the men of the Guard will have a good "Set up," be robust and physically sound.

During our practice march on August 1 and 2 (a report of which was forwarded to your Headquarters, copy attached hereto marked Appendix "Y"), I observed that many men showed fatigue after traveling but a short distance. Such is wholly out of place in a soldier, and could be almost entirely done away with, by proper athletic training.

Success in future war depends upon the mobility of troops, endurance, and ability to strike first and hardest. The trained athlete will be vastly superior in such warfare to the inexperienced man. Not only greater ability to fight, but the good health in a command brought about by regular and scientific training will vastly enhance the "esprit de corps" of the army and render its fighting ability the greatest attainable.

The encampment of 1904 made great advancement in the direction of military attainment and if the same policy prevails in the future, the money expended by the State and Nation will have been well spent. Although peace is desired there is always a possibility of war, and as our people have a right to hope and expect success, it is our duty to see that they are not disappointed.

The results accomplished during this encampment were so decidedly favorable, that officers and men returned to their home stations with an enthusiasm heretofore unknown in the National Guard. With our encouragement has come a most earnest desire to continue to improve. May this meet with realization.

I am, yours respectfully,

EDWIN P. THAYER,
Colonel.

REPORT No. 12. APPENDIX "Y."

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, August 2, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—Pursuant to Memorandum Order No. 5222, the Third Regiment, I. N. G., moved out from camp at 7:45, July 30, 1904.

STRENGTH.

The strength was 41 officers and 376 enlisted men. Captain Cleary reported with battery B, I. N. G., 3 officers and 38 men, making a total strength of 44 officers and 414 men.

MARCH.

The column proceeded from camp via R, A, B, C, D, E, F, G, L, and to the Teal farm, arriving there at 10:40 a. m.

CAMP.

Camp was established at 11 a. m. on the Teal farm, shelter tents being pitched by the companies.

PROTECTION.

Cossack outposts were immediately established on a line extending from the southeast, thence to the west, thence to the northwest, thence to the north, forming a three-quarter circle at a distance of 700 yards from camp. Major Kuhlman was placed in command, using his battalion. The front covered was about one mile. The information was received that the rear was protected by friendly forces, but to prevent raids in that direction, a series of patrols under command of Major Harrison, patrolled that country for a distance back to the road L-G.

ALARM.

At 6 p. m., on receipt of rumors of a night attack, the commanding officer deemed it advisable to change the location of camp. Placing Lieutenant-Colonel Bowman in command of the regiment, he proceeded to make a personal reconnoissance, taking with him Adjutant Bragg, Lieutenant Fulmer of the Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry, and Lieutenant Austin of the First Regiment, I. N. G. A suitable tract of ground being located, return to camp was made.

CHANGE OF CAMP.

At 7 p. m. camp was broken and the column proceeded south to point N, thence east one mile to a woods known as McConnell's grove, where camp was established. No lights were permitted, silence was commanded and the greatest secrecy was enjoined in every movement.

PRECAUTION.

Camp McConnell being established, cossack outposts were thrown out on a line extending from a point north of the camp on the road running north, thence on a line running in a westerly direction around the west side of the camp, thence south, continuing southeast, thence east to a point south on the road immediately east of the camp. Major Kuhlman with his battalion formed the cossack outposts on the northwest, west, and southwest. Major Blum established cossack posts on the south and east of the camp with one company in reserve at the crossroad. Patrols were sent to the east, north and south, by Major Harrison. The establishing of the outposts was done in a manner strictly conforming to Wagner. Majors Kuhlman and Blum personally supervised the same, performing the duty in a most creditable manner. The patrolling under Major Harrison was thorough and effective, he taking personal command in several instances. The camp was guarded in such a manner as to be thoroughly protected against a surprise.

NIGHT ALARM.

At 1:45 a. m., July 31, word was sent to Major Blum, from the outposts in the south, that a suspicious noise had been heard in their front at a distance supposed to be 400 yards from their position. The commanding officer of the camp, upon receiving this word from Major Blum, had the men to fall in with the least possible noise. At 2 a. m. a shot was fired by a Hotchkiss gun, from what was supposed to be the enemy, in the south. From the flash of the gun, Captain Cleary of Battery B was able to determine the position of the enemy. He was ordered to fire two shots upon the enemy for the purpose of perfecting range. These shots were answered and immediately Captain Cleary opened fire upon the enemy, firing seven shots, and it was decided that the enemy were put out of action as no response was made after the sixth shot.

MARCH BACK TO CAMP.

The return to camp began at 2:08 p. m. The disposition of the forces was made as for a column passing through an enemy's country. On account of the bad condition of the road from O to T, practically impassable for artillery, it was decided to move by the way of O, P, Q, R. The time of arrival in camp was 4:10 p. m.

INTERIOR GUARD.

Guard was immediately mounted upon establishing camp on the Teal farm. On establishing the new camp at McConnell's grove, Company F was taken for the guard, as it was thought better to use an entire company on this important duty, thereby getting the benefit of company pride. Company F, under Second Lieutenant Calvert, performed this duty in a most creditable manner.

ARTILLERY.

The battery, under command of Captain Cleary and his lieutenants, was handled in a most effectual and soldierly manner.

SIGNAL SERVICE.

The signal service was satisfactory as far as communication was concerned.

INTEREST.

The interest shown by officers and men was very great, every one entering into the movement with the greatest of enthusiasm.

TOPOGRAPHY.

The ground covered to point R is level—from there to D, very rough and broken. The country E, F, G, L, to M, is slightly rolling. The roads are very good, with the exception of that from the turn east on the road running north from R. This is extremely sandy and is difficult for artillery.

OFFICERS.

Lieutenant Fulmer, Twenty-seventh Infantry, U. S. A., accompanied the command. His suggestions were of the highest value and were greatly appreciated. Lieutenant H. H. Austin, First Infantry, I. N. G., accompanied the column as guide. His work was of the very best and his assistance most valuable.

WATER.

The troops experienced but little difficulty in obtaining water during this march; the farmers being friendly to our cause, permitted the men to fill their canteens and the horses to be watered.

COMPANY RECONNOISSANCES.

As by direction of Memorandum Order No. 5222, on the morning of Tuesday, August 2, each company was sent out to make a reconnoissance The reports of the commanding officers of the several companies are hereby transmitted.

CHRONOLOGY.

Left Camp of Instruction 7:45 a. m. Arrived at R, 7:50, at A, 8:10. Halt at 8:14 for 16 minutes; moved toward D at 8:30, opposite C at 8:45. Flankers fired upon by a farmer armed with a shot gun. Arrived at D at 9:10; at E, 9:20; halt at 9:30; moved at 9:35; arrived at F, 9:40; at G, 9:50; midway between G and L at 10:00, halted for water, placed guards over gates; arrived at L at 10:24; at M, 10:40.

RETURN.

Left Camp McConnell at 9:45 a. m., July 31, 1904; halted at 10:15 for five minutes; arrived at O at 10:45. Here had noon mess. Left this place at 2:08 p. m.; arrived in Camp of Instruction at 4:10 p. m.

Respectfuly,

EDWIN P. THAYER,
Colonel, Third Infantry.

REPORT No. 13.

HEADQUARTERS ARTILLERY BATTALION, I. N. G.,
ROCKVILLE, INDIANA, August 17, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—In compliance with G. O. No. 3, A. A. G. O., July 14, 1904, I have the honor to make the following report:

I departed from this station at 9:55 p. m., July 26, arriving at Indianapolis at 9 o'clock a. m. over the Vandalia Lines, and took trolley for Fort Benjamin Harrison, arriving at 2 p. m., Wednesday, July 27, and reported to the Brigade Commander as soon as his flag appeared at staff.

The percentage of attendance in the artillery battalion was not as large as I had hoped, owing to the inability of the men to get leave from business at the end of the month. Each battery commander gave this as his excuse for the short roster.

July 27, 1904, Battery A reported at 2:30 p. m. with three officers and thirty-five men. Battery B at 11 a. m. with three officers and thirty-five men, but owing to poor railroad facilities their guns did not reach the gun park till 10 o'clock p. m. Battery C arrived at 10:30 a. m. with two officers and forty-five men. Band arrived at 2:00 p. m., with twenty-four men.

Our camp routine was at once taken up as published in Orders No. 16, these headquarters. The first gun was fired by a section of Battery A at retreat, July 27. Park and stable guard was mounted at 5 o'clock p. m. The horses were a good average lot, but we were not furnished enough of them. It would have been a matter of economy for the State if extra horses were supplied so it would not be necessary to take out a horse which was out of condition, thereby laying ourselves liable to damages, which a day's rest of the horse would avert.

Summary court was established by Captain Cleary, Battery B, and officers' school was conducted by the battalion adjutant.

July 28, 1904. Inspection in quarters was held on Thursday morning, July 28, by First Lieutenant Boyle, A. A. I. G. No recommendations were made by the inspecting officer to the battalion commander. Mounted drill was held at 9:30 a. m. and from this time forward the printed schedule was complied with except where it conflicted with orders. Mounted inspection on the review parade was held at 2:30 p. m. of the whole battalion. At night all the officers attended the lecture at the assembly tent given by Lieutenant Mabrey, Twenty-seventh Infantry, U. S. A.

July 29, 1904. On this date Battery C was detached and reported to the commanding officer, First Infantry, for practice march. Mounted battery drills were held by A and B and in the afternoon combined drill by same batteries under battalion commander. I am of the opinion that as much had been accomplished in mounted drills up to this time, as we generally get out of the whole of a camp tour. This was partially due to the ample size of our drill grounds and we had no colts to break, as every horse given us had been worked—the first time in my experience that this has been the case. Officers' school was conducted by the Assistant Surgeon Artillery Battalion along the line of camp sanitation and care of men.

July 30, 1904. Saturday, Batteries A and B constructed gun pits under the direction of the chief engineer officer, building French and Austrian models, which were very creditably done. We lost our combined drill, mounted, owing to the change in time of the official arrival of the Governor and staff and General Frederick D. Grant, U. S. A. Four guns under Captain Heiskell fired the salute upon the arrival of the Governor.

July 31, 1904. Battery C reported back to the battalion at 5:30 p. m., Sunday, July 31. Inspection in quarters by General Frederick Grant and the brigade commander. A half hour of sacred music was then participated in by the entire battalion. Took part in the review of the brigade by the Governor and General Grant. Officers called in a body on the Commander-in-Chief in the evening.

August 1, 1904. Battery B, Captain Cleary, reported to commanding officer Third Infantry, for practice march. Batteries A and C were on the west range; the firing of the officers and men was reported very satisfactory. During the absence of the batteries the camp guard was given in charge of the band. Officers' school was conducted by Lieutenant Burford on the line of duty in his department.

August 2, 1904. Drills were conducted in Batteries A and C. Battery B reported back in camp at 3 p. m. Officers attended discussion at the assembly tent in evening.

August 3, 1904. Battery A reported to the commanding officer Second Infantry, Battery B reported to the range officer, west range, and then to the commanding officer First Infantry at 9 a. m. Battery C constructed gun pits and then reported to commanding officer First Infantry, as part of the "Blue" forces.

August 4, 1904. During the attack on the Camp beginning at 4 o'clock a. m., I rode the lines in the staff of the brigade commander as a spectator. The batteries reported back to commanding officer Artillery Battalion at 11 o'clock a. m. Discussion on the attack and defense of camp at the assembly tent in the evening was attended by all officers.

August 5, 1904. Battery B was relieved from duty with the battalion at 10 a. m.; Battery C at 10:30 a. m.; band at 11 a. m., and Battery A at 12 m. The battalion commander left camp at 12:30 p. m and arrived at home station at 7 o'clock p. m., over the C., H. & D. R. R.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

I would recommend that horse sheds be made large enough to give horses twice as much room as they had at the camp just completed, with swing poles between the horses. It is also absolutely necessary that better hitching facilities be had, and I would suggest that, in addition to the 2x4 as used in the last stable, a picket rope be run through the stable, making a secure place to tie the horses. Swing poles could be hung by wire at a very slight expense, greatly lessening the possibility of kicks; in fact, the damage to one horse kicked would possibly be double the cost of the poles. I would also suggest that the paulin covers of the sheds be fastened on with wooden strips, making them secure against wind, and thereby lessening the liability of a stampede when the canvas is blown about. Again I would recommend that extra horses be provided, so that it may be possible to rest a horse out of condition. As the artillery furnished mounted orderlies for Brigade Headquarters during the camp, an extra mount should be allowed for this purpose, so as not to interfere with the non-coms attending their drills.

Our blacksmith's outfit should be replenished with some necessaries, as we were compelled to borrow tools with which to do our shoeing. Enough lumber should be provided to raise feed from the ground, although not particularly needed at the last camp. Had there been much rain, the feed would have been greatly injured. As the camp schedule consumes so much time, it would be much better to have water near the stables for the horses, and save the one hour and a half which was necessary to water at our camp. This would have saved much also in the way of grooming owing to the dust. It is my desire to express my appreciation of the interest the officers of the Twenty-seventh U. S. A. Infantry took in our battalion. They were much in our camp, and we enjoyed the pleasant association.

I wish also to mention specially the most interesting illustrated lecture given by Chaplain George D. Rice, Twenty-seventh Infantry, U. S. A., to our battalion on the effect of mountain battery fire on Moro forts, showing one hundred views of the action of the Twenty-fifth Battery, Field Artillery, on the fort of the Sultan of Bayan, and the action of the Twenty-fifth and Seventeenth Batteries, Field Artillery, on the fort of the Sultan of Bacolod.

Very respectfully,

F. E. STEVENSON,
Major Artillery Battalion.

PART II.

REPORT No. 14.

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND, November 1, 1904.

The Adjutant-General, State of Indiana:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report on the Tactical Exercise "Attack and Defense" of August 4, 1904, forming part of the work of the Indiana National Guard at its annual Camp of Instruction.

The entire plan of the Camp of Instruction was devised to culminate in this maneuver, and the instruction and practice of the first eight days was expected to be of value as preparation for this final problem. The results seem to indicate that application was made, in its solution, of all that had gone before, so that the outcome may be contemplated with satisfaction.

The execution of the comparatively crude field exercise of the previous year, good enough to deserve serious consideration and comment at the hands of Colonel Arthur L. Wagner, U. S. A., undoubtedly the best authority in the military service of our country, made it appear that we were reasonably well prepared to take some advanced steps in our practical military education. The experience of this command at West Point, Kentucky, added to our preparedness, and these facts should furnish an excuse, if such be needed, for departing from the usual routine of former encampments, and assuming the responsibility for devoting practically all the time of the present camp to field work in all its details.

THE PROBLEM.

As indicated in the "Comment on the Schedule" (Report No. 1, Appendix "G"), all entrenchment work was done so as to be available in camp defense on this occasion. The First Infantry and Third Infantry, together with Batteries B and C, had been out on practice marches, so that it was considered advisable to give them the comparative rest of defensive dispositions, leaving the burden of active offense to be assumed by the Second Infantry and Battery A. For this reason the two regiments first mentioned, together with the artillery in camp, were placed provisionally as a "Blue" force under the command of the senior colonel, Colonel George W. McCoy, who was charged with the defense of the camp. Colonel Harry B. Smith's regiment, the Second Infantry, and Battery A, were scheduled for a practice march, and constituted a Brown force, in order to combine the march with the tactical exercise.

The "Browns" being inferior in strength, and yet expected to attack a stronger enemy in a partly entrenched position, it was necessary to assume a constructive situation that might warrant so anomalous a transaction. The problem resulting from these conditions was as follows:

TACTICAL PROBLEM.

Attack and Defense—General Situation.

A Blue force of two regiments of infantry with a platoon of two 3.2 field pieces and a foot battery of three Hotchkiss guns, total strength estimated at 1,500 men, is encamped west of the road 13-14, forming outpost of a corps advancing toward Indianapolis. They have begun entrenching on their west front, to hold their position until corresponding advance points, north and south, can be similarly occupied, whereupon the advance is to be continued all along the line.

Indianapolis is inadequately defended by a division of Browns, and it becomes necessary at all hazard to delay advance of the enemy on this front.

SPECIAL SITUATION—BLUE.

A brigade of two regiments infantry with a platoon of 3.2-inch field pieces and a battery of three two-pounder Hotchkiss guns, forming advance guard of Army Corps, threatening Indianapolis, has advanced on August 3d from Greenfield westward to the road 13-14; where at 5:00 o'clock p. m. they received orders to occupy the heights on both sides of the Spees Ravine, throw up hasty entrenchments and construct gun-pits, to hold the position until corresponding advance points can be occupied to the northwest and south. They are directed to establish a line of observation, pickets, patrols and Cossack posts on their front in the general direction northwest, west and southwest, taking precaution also to protect their flanks, in readiness to establish connection with other troops of the Brown army on arrival of the alignment.

SPECIAL SITUATION—BROWN.

The General commanding the defenses of Indianapolis has inadequate forces, but reinforcements are en route from the west. Information of a general advance of the enemy has been received, and the Second Infantry with a platoon of 3.2 field pieces and a detachment Signal Corps has been sent out with orders to proceed from Millersville in the direction of 1, 4, 5, 18, 17, 13, north to Indian Creek Road, and thence eastward, on a general reconnoissance to discover and develop the enemy's advance. This column leaves 13 on the morning of August 3, and is marching with every precaution and on the alert for the enemy on the Indian Creek Road eastward. Information has been received by the Brigade Commander at Millersville that the advance of the Blues, consisting of a brigade of two regiments of infantry and a battery of artillery is advancing westward in the direction of the position 13-14. This information is at once communicated to the Colonel commanding reconnoitering force, warning him of his danger of being cut off and ordering him to retreat via Fall Creek Pike, 12, 11, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 18, south to 21, and thence south to the old Lawrence Fair Grounds. There he is to bivouac for the night, scouting toward the northeast, in the general direction toward the line 15-16.

The Brown scouts on the evening of August 3, report that the advance force of the Blues is preparing to occupy the heights both sides of the Spees Ravine, and have located his positions. This information is sent back to the Brigade Commander at Millersville, who orders the Commanding Officer of the Reconnoissance to make an attack at 4:00 o'clock a. m. August 4, on the Blue position, in order to interrupt the entrenching, drive back the outpost if possible, and delay the enemy's advance until reinforcements can arrive.

Memorandum Orders from these Headquarters and Field Orders, ostensibly from "Brown" and "Blue" Headquarters were issued in proper form, and will be found as appendices to the reports of the respective commanders of the "Brown" and "Blue" forces.

UMPIRES.

Lieutenant-Colonel R. T. Yeatman, Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry, kindly consented to act as Chief Umpire.

First Lieutenant Ralph McCoy, Second Lieutenants O. R. Cole and Wallace McNamara, all of the 27th U. S. Infantry, acted as umpires with the Brown forces.

First Lieutenant E. O. D. Murphy, Twenty-seventh U. S. Infantry, acted as umpire with the Blue forces.

The task of an umpire is an ungrateful one in all sorts of games, and the requirements of ubiquitous presence and infallible judgment render it exceptionally trying in field maneuvers. The officers of the regular establishment who assisted us in this way are entitled to an expression of special appreciation for their self-sacrifice. At the same time the recommendation of several sub-commanders that "more umpires be provided" and that "they be present from the beginning of the exercise" is undoubtedly well founded as a most highly desirable condition, but unfortunately most difficult to attain. Even in the joint maneuvers of the Regular Service and Organized Militia it has so far been impossible to accomplish this end.

COMMENT.

As regards a decision in a tactical problem, it is a well established principle that the arbitrament of the bullet can not be satisfactorily replaced by that of the deadly umpire. The best that can be done is to submit to the student of tactics the topography of the field of operations, the reports of the respective commanding officers and the comment of umpires, and let him decide for himself. The purpose of these maneuvers is to give officers and men experience in meeting, to an extent, the conditions of actual warfare, and particularly to give them instruction in the art of self-preservation and fire discipline. In addition, the higher commanders obtain some practice in the study of topographic conditions, the selection and occupation of tactical points of vantage, and the tactical disposition of troops. Actual defeat or victory can only be decided where the losses of actual strife form a function in the equation.

A topographic map of the field showing final dispositions has been drawn by my aid, First Lieutenant Alfred B. Schanz, from information extracted from the various sub-reports and it may be said that it was extremely difficult to harmonize the apparently incongruous statements and maps. The very material differences demonstrate the relative importance of the point of view and unavoidable bias of judgment. The map referred to is attached as Appendix "a."

The reports of Colonel Harry B. Smith, Commanding the "Browns," and Colonel George W. McCoy, Commanding the "Blues," with their respective sub-reports as exhibits, are appended hereto as fully as possible, so as to throw all possible light on the situation. It is a source of regret that the reports of the officers of the Third Infantry and of the Commanding Officer of Battery B, are entirely inadequate and add nothing of value to the history of the exercise. The artillery report referred to is devoid of all essential detail, giving no ranges and no objectives.

It is impossible not to note two very remarkable omissions in all reports of the Blue officers. It will be noted that the Browns signalled readiness for attack by rockets and answering rockets. The service of security of the Blues did not discover these signals, or, at all events, did not report them. The other omission refers to the opening of the attack by artillery fire from a Brown field-piece screened in the woods on a precipitous eminence west of "15." This fire continued for some time without reply and before rifle fire opened, and yet no Blue report makes mention of it.

In general it may be assumed that the Browns had a very difficult, if not impossible, task. The elements of surprise, outflanking movement on the north, and simultaneous energetic attack of three sides, might have outweighed some of the Blue preponderance, especially if the capture of the Blue battery on the right wing be assumed in harmony with the rules of maneuvers. On the other hand, Colonel McCoy reports that not more than one-third of his command was under fire, and Captain Glascock says his battery was captured by the ghosts of men just slaughtered. It may be a question whether the holding in reserve of so large a portion of his command by Colonel McCoy at the time of the violent onslaught was wise or not, especially in view of the surprise of his right flank.

The attached reports will no doubt furnish sufficient material for analysis. The map references therein have been harmonized to apply to the topographic map above referred to (Appendix "a"). The following quotations from the umpire's reports may help to elucidate some points at issue.

ATTACK.

With reference to conditions on the left flank of the Blue position, the Chief Umpire says:

Some of the Brown forces in advance were ruled out by me as being under fire apparently from their own artillery west of 15 on the map, as well as from Blue infantry in the trenches and Blue artillery in their pits. This was an error, as Brown artillery had changed its fire upon the pits in such a manner as to have caused almost if not quite total loss of Blue artillery before the latter arrived in its gun pits. This fact I could not see at once. Owing to the screen of trees around Brown artillery position, it appeared to continue firing at infantry in trenches. The loss of this Brown force would have been very large, however, as it not only was exposed to fire from trenches while standing, but also while moving by the flank at close range.

The first Blue company to reinforce trenches advanced to them in columns of fours and changed direction under artillery fire within distinctive range. Blue forces also appeared from the ravine north of trenches and marched northward while enfiladed by Brown infantry at close range and Brown artillery nearly in rear. The conditions here noted would never have occurred in actual combat, as projectiles would have given warning of positions of forces which were ignored here.

In commenting on the advance of the right wing of the "Brown" forces, Second Lieutenant Wallace McNamara says:

When the Brown artillery west of 15 opened fire on the entrenchments of Blue forces, one battalion of the Second Infantry (Major Tarlton's) occupied a line from 15 to the schoolhouse, and advanced under cover of the artillery fire, using fire at will. The company officers gave no orders for firing, and there seemed to be no definite point of attack, nor were the trenches occupied at this time by the Blues. When the Blues moved forward to occupy the trenches, firing by the Browns had practically ceased, with exception of the artillery, which directed its fire upon the opposing artillery before the latter had taken up its position. A few of the Browns had advanced meanwhile to within 200 yards of the Blue line. There were no officers with these advanced troops, and the remainder of the battalion was upon its original line inactive and for the most part exposed to the fire of the Blues, both artillery and infantry. The close of the engagement found the Brown battalion in this position.

Reporting on the operations of the center of the line of Browns, Second Lieutenant O. R. Cole says:

At 4:00 o'clock a. m., or the time of the opening of the engagement, the center consisted of one battalion of the Second Infantry, I. N. G. (Major Backman's), and one 3.2-inch gun, and extended along a line northeast from the schoolhouse, with the gun at F facing the Blue earthwork. This line moved forward under cover of its own fire until at the close of the engagement it occupied the line indicated on the map, with the 3.2-inch gun still at F. During the early part of the engagement a line of Blues was seen to march out of the woods to the north of the line of entrenchments and remain several minutes at nearly right angles to the Brown line. At the close of the engagement a second line of Blues occupied a similar position to the first line mentioned above.

Concerning the left wing of the "Brown" attack, First Lieutenant Ralph McCoy says:

At 4:00 o'clock a. m. an advance to the eastward was ordered and deployments made at proper distances. Two Blue picket posts were captured on right of the road 17-13, having attempted to hold their position after they should have been drawn in. It would seem that the duties of these posts were accomplished when they learned of the general advance of the Browns. A battery of Hotchkiss guns was captured during this advance. It was stationed near the road 17-13, and was not supported by infantry. It appeared to be the intention of the Blues to sacrifice their guns, hoping that their loss would be more than compensated for by the damage they would inflict before capture.

The advance up to this point would have cost the Browns a loss of perhaps 5 per cent. The country over which they passed was rough and broken, affording good cover, of which these troops availed themselves.

The Blue line was encountered on high ground to the right of the road 17-13, in a position capable of good defense. The ground between Brown and Blue afforded good cover and the effect of fire at this stage should not have been great. To the left of the road was high ground, heavily wooded, which afforded an excellent position for a flank attack on the Blues. The first battalion Brown (Conde) was placed on this ground, but presumably at considerable loss. Could they have maintained this position, the Blue would undoubtedly have been compelled to retire, which would have allowed the second battalion Brown (part of Backman's battalion) to take the high ground occupied by the Blues.

Positions selected by both Browns and Blues in this action were tactically correct. The result of the engagement would probably have been favorable to the side which could have brought into action the strongest reserve at the time the halt was ordered.

DEFENSE.

First Lieutenant E. O. D. Murphy comments on the defense of the "Blue" position as follows:

The Browns attacked the outposts at about 4:00 a. m., driving the battalion on outpost duty from their entrenchments by a frontal attack and flanking movement, capturing the Hotchkiss guns and several prisoners. The prisoners evidently stayed too long on the line of observation. This initial attack, however, owing to the ground operated on, etc., would probably under real conditions of warfare, have cost both sides from 5 to 10 per cent. losses. After leaving their entrenchments, the line of resistance fell back to the heights in the rear of their former position, and found a new line extending in a northeast and southwest direction from a point near Captain Cheatham's residence to the wooded ravine, which runs into the center of camp (Spees ravine). A Brown battalion advanced through the wooded country north of the road 17-13 and formed along it. After a heavy fire had been exchanged with the Blue left, the Browns left the shelter of the woods and formed for a charge across the open field against the Blue left, ignoring the Blue right and the Blue reserve battalion, which had arrived while they were forming in the woods and was in position to move against the charging force flank and rear. Owing to the close approach of the troops to each other, further action was here stopped. The tactical dispositions of the opposing forces were in the main good. Volley firing was not used as much as could be desired, but fire discipline was good.

Very respectfully,

WILL J. McKEE,

Brigadier-General Commanding I. N. G.

REPORT No. 15.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
August 5, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to report the following, as per the Schedule of Exercises, of Camp of Instruction, under date of Wednesday, August 3d, and Thursday, August 4th, 1904.

Memorandum Orders No. 5230 and No. 5232 were both received by me August 2d, and a meeting of all the officers of my command was held, and said orders were read to them and especial attention was called to the last paragraph in No. 5232.

The commanding officers of the Signal Corps and of Battery A, and a detail with ambulance from Hospital Corps, were ordered to report at my headquarters at 7:30 a. m. on August 3d ready to march out fully equipped as per order No. 5230. The strength of my command, which consisted of a detachment from the Signal Corps under command of Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood; Battery A, under command of Captain W. W. Heiskell; and the Second Infantry, Indiana National Guard, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Feaser, was as follows:

	Officers.	Men.
Signal Corps	1	18
Battery A (two guns and caissons)	3	31
Second Infantry	46	527
Total	50	576

I was accompanied by Lieutenant Fulton of the Twenty-fourth Infantry and Lieutenant Scott of the Seventh Infantry, U. S. A.

The column left camp at 7:57 on the morning of August 3d and proceeded on the road running north via "R" to "A" (see road map attached to this report) where it was halted, and advance and rear guard was here formed and the march proceeded as in an enemy's country. At this point I was overtaken by Lieutenant Boyle of the commanding general's staff. This point "A" is also designated on the revised topographical map as the "Day house" just south of point "12."

A copy of the tactical exercise of "Attack and Defense" was received by me at this point.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, BROWN BRIGADE,
MILLERSVILLE, IND., August 2, 1904, 10:30 P. M.

FIELD ORDERS,
No. 10.

2nd Infantry,
Battery "A,"
Detachment S. C.,
Ambulance Corps,
Wagon Train.

I. The enemy is reported advancing from the northeast.

II. Colonel Harry B. Smith, with force composed as per margin, will proceed via 1, 4, 5, 18, 17 to 13, arranging to arrive at the latter point at 7:30 a. m., August 3rd; thence he will proceed north to the Indian Creek road, following the latter to the eastward and seeking to discover and develop the advance of the enemy, finding contact in reconnoissance if necessary to attain purpose. A general engagement must be avoided, and the Commanding Officer will retreat stubbornly in direction of base, if superior forces be encountered.

By command of Brigadier-General Brown.

A. B. WHITE, A. A. G.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY, BROWN BRIGADE,
MILLERSVILLE, IND., August 3, 1904, 8:00 A. M.

FIELD ORDERS,
No. 11.

1. Information has been received that the enemy is advancing from Greenfield westward along the road to 13 in superior force.

2. The commanding officer of reconnoissance on Indian Creek, to avoid being cut off, is directed to retreat via Fall Creek pike 12, 11, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 18, 21, thence south to old Lawrence Fair ground, there to bivouac for the night, covering his front to the northeast in the direction toward the line 15-16, making efforts to ascertain positions of the enemy and watching his movements, but avoiding contact.

3. Reinforcements will be sent if obtainable.

By command of Brigadier-General Brown.

A. B. WHITE, A. A. G.,
Commanding Officer Second Infantry on Indian Creek road.

Following instructions contained in orders, more particularly in Field Order No. 11, I proceeded north beyond point "12" to the Newkirk Ford. An examination of the creek showed us a new bridge at a distance of about 300 yards down stream, but as this bridge had not been accepted by the commissioners of the county and was private property, together with the fact that there were no approaches on either side, it was not deemed advisable to attempt to use the same. At this point I had an examination made of the ford and the officers reported to me that in view of the fact that the men would have a long march ahead of them, that it was not wise to ford the creek. I, therefore, ordered my quartermaster's wagons unloaded, brought them up, and securing the services in addition to these, of two farmers with teams, the entire command was taken across the creek at this point.

The command proceeded via the route designated in Field Order No. 11 and went into camp as directed at the old Lawrence Fair Grounds.

Outposts were established covering the front to the east and north. These outposts were established immediately on my arrival at the Lawrence Fair Grounds, which occurred at 11:00 a. m.

At 1:53 p. m. outpost No. 3 reported that they had captured a detachment of the signal corps of the Blues who were engaged in stringing telephone wires and they were ordered brought into camp and were held until 5:00 p. m., when they were released on parole by orders from Brigade Headquarters.

At 4:50 p. m. a scouting party consisting of two commissioned officers and ten men, mounted, were sent out to reconnoiter the territory lying immediately south and west from points "15" and "16." This party returned at 7:00 p. m. with information showing approximately the position of the outposts of the Blues extending along this line, and also a rude sketch showing the various elevations along this line.

Mess was had at 6:00 p. m. and taps were sounded at 9:00 p. m. and the men bivouaced for the night.

A consultation was held between the commanding officers of Battery A, the Signal Corps and Commanding Officer and Battalion Commanders of the Second Infantry; and it was decided that in view of the extremely small force which constituted my command and the large force of the Blues, together with their intrenched position, that our best opportunity of carrying out our orders was in a flank attack.

In pursuance of this decision, the First Battalion under command of Major H. T. Conde left camp at 1:00 a. m. His further movements are given in his report, a copy of which is hereto attached.

The second detachment consisting of the Second and Third Battalion, Second Infantry; Battery A and Signal Corps left camp at 2:00 a. m. August 4th, and the reports herewith submitted show their subsequent actions. Company E under command of Capt. E. L. Middleton was detached and placed as support on the right of the gun under command of Capt. W. W. Heiskell of Battery A. Copies of the reports of these two officers are hereto attached. Four members of the Signal Corps under command of a sergeant, were assigned to each of the battalions.

At 8:00 p. m. August 3d, the following communication was received from Brigadier-General Brown:

HEADQUARTERS BROWN BRIGADE,
MILLERSVILLE, IND., August 3, 1904, 7:00 P. M.

Commanding Officer, Brown Forces at old Lawrence Fair Grounds:

Sir—Your report that a brigade of the enemy, consisting of two regiments of infantry and a battery of artillery, have occupied the heights both sides of the Spees ravine north of 15 and is preparing to entrench, is acknowledged.

You will make every effort to ascertain strength and positions of the enemy, and make an attack at 4 o'clock, tomorrow morning, August 4th, with all the force at your command—the purpose being to interrupt the enemy's entrenching work and make every effort to drive him back and delay his advance until our reinforcements can arrive.

By command of Brigadier-General Brown.

A. B. WHITE, A. A. G.

The instructions given the various commanders were to take position as outlined in Order No. 11 and from the communication received from Brigadier-General Brown, and to hold themselves in readiness for the advance, which was to begin at 4 o'clock. At that hour the position of the various parts of my command was as follows:

Company E, Captain Middleton, to the west of the road "15," "16," at point designated on the map as "A."

One gun under command of W. W. Heiskell of Battery A at a point on the high bluff immediately west of "15" at point "B."

Three companies of the Third Battalion on a line extending from the left of Captain Heiskell's position to a point about midway toward "16" designated as "C" "C" "C."

The Second Battalion under command of Major Backman in a line designated as "D" "D" "D."

The Third Battalion under command of Major Conde at points designated "E" "E" "E."

The signal for the advance was to be a rocket sent up from my headquarters near point "16" to be answered by the First Battalion; then by the Third Battalion; this in turn by a rocket sent from the extreme left. This signal from my headquarters with the Second Battalion was given by the Signal Corps at 4:01, answered by the First Battalion at 4:02, by the Third Battalion at 4:03½, and by the separate points at 4:05.

The advance was made along this entire line and the center of the Blues driven back until we were enabled to post the second gun of Battery A, under command of Lieutenant Tyndall, at a point marked "F." Reports sent to me from the various detachments showed that the outposts of the Blues were driven in and our entire line occupied the positions originally held by the outposts of the Blues.

The position taken by Captain Heiskell was perfectly masked and had an elevation sufficient to sweep all the trenches and gun pits.

Particular attention is herewith called to the report of Major J. H. Tarlton of the Third Battalion as to his position and as to the firing of this gun under command of Captain Heiskell. After the fourth shot from this gun the center of the command, under Major Backman, was pushed forward and the brow of the hill at a point near "16" was secured. When the center advanced at this point the men in charge of and supporting the three Hotchkiss guns of Battery C abandoned their pieces and they were secured by the Second Battalion, before one of the piecs had fired a shot, and only four shots were fired altogether by this battery.

The operations of the troops on the right and the center were under my direct observation. The movements of the First Battalion under command of Major Conde, which constituted my extreme left are outlined in the report submitted by him and made a part of this report. (Appendix "f.")

At 4:50 "Cease Firing" was sounded by order of the umpires and at that time the position of my troops was, as shown on the enclosed map No. 2, on a line extended and marked "X X X X," the right of the Second Battalion having connected with the left of the Third, and the right of the First Battalion having connected with the left of the Second.

The commanders of the various battalions had been cautioned to exercise great judgment in regard to firing and from reports received am glad to say that the men obeyed the instructions implicitly.

During these exercises the marches were made in good order, the men kept well under control and no loitering or straggling permitted. The exercise of "Attack and Defense" was conducted so far as possible along the rules outlined in the text-books furnished us, and the "Service of Security and Information" was readily and intelligently performed. The deployments were made promptly and without confusion, excepting what was necessarily caused by the darkness. The officers in charge of the various detachments carried out the orders literally and are to be commended for their promptness and their thorough control of the men.

I desire to return my thanks to Lieutenants Fulton and Scott for valuable services rendered me on this occasion, also to the Signal Corps.

I enclose herewith as a part of my report, the road maps made as per order.

At 5:15 a. m. assembly was sounded and the entire command marched back to camp, where they arrived at 5:45.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

H. B. SMITH,
Colonel Second Infantry, Indiana National Guard.

REPORT No. 15. APPENDIX "b."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BATTALION, SECOND INFANTRY,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, Second Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—

PRACTICE MARCH.

In compliance with verbal instructions from Regimental Commander the battalion assembled at 7:30 a. m. August 3, 1904, and marched out at 7:57 a. m. with regiment under command of Colonel Harry B. Smith—arrived at old Lawrence Fair Grounds at 10:58 a. m. after marching via road herewith indicated 13, 12, 11, 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 18, 21, and to old Lawrence Fair grounds, a distance of 5½ miles, pitched shelter tents and bivouacked at 11:24 a. m.

ATTACK.

Bivouac camp was broken at 1:30 a. m. August 4, 1904, assembled 1:50 a. m., marched at 1:55 a. m., accompanied by platoon of Battery A with one field piece under command of First Lieutenant Robert Tyndall and one officer and fifteen men; a detachment of Signal Corps under command of First Lieutenant Wallace Sherwood with four men; a detachment of Hospital Corps with ambulance under command of First Lieutenant Ray Newcomb. The force consisted of—

Company B .....1 officer and 34 men.
Company I .....3 officers and 45 men.
Company F .....2 officers and 32 men.
Company G .....2 officers and 37 men.

Attached and Consolidated.

Company L .....1 officer and 29 men.
Kokomo .....3 officers and 58 men.

Under command, respectively, of Captains Youngman, Griffith, Jericho, Brunn and Naftzger. The march was as herewith indicated to 21, 20, 16 and 17 on roads. Advance guard formation was taken up at 21, composed of Companies G and I advance party, under command of Captain Brunn. Companies B and F support, with Signal Corps under command of Captain Jericho; and Companies L and Kokomo Reserve, under command of Captain Naftzger; Platoon Battery A, under command of First Lieutenant Robert Tyndall; and detachment Hospital Corps under command of First Lieutenant Ray Newcomb.

The column was halted when the head reached 17 and accoutrements discarded except rifles and side arms, a guard being left in charge; attack formation made, scouts thrown out and deployment from the center in three lines at 3:55 a. m. with direction to work southeast and cover front of this organization, right to connect with left of Major Tarlton, and left with Major Conde's right as soon as possible. Rocket, as prearranged, was sent up at 3:58 to notify Majors Conde and Tarlton that this organization was ready to advance. Majors Conde and Tarlton signaling by rocket that they were ready, advance was begun at 3:59 a. m. At 4:01 a. m. scouts encountered a sentinel of the outposts of the enemy, a general advance was made, the support was gradually thrown into the firing line, and as soon as the territory was cleared the field piece was brought forward and placed on the highest elevation commanding the front, about midway between 15 and 16 in rear of our firing line and immediately went into action. Enemy was pressed back to line of reserve when final stand was made. Our reserve was brought forward under cover and entered the firing line and the exercise ceased in meadow southwest of Roberts' house.

Commanding Officer, Captain J. L. Glascock, 26 men and 3 Hotchkiss guns of Battery C, and 33 infantrymen, were captured.

Map of the U. S. Army Reservation as drawn for Tactical Exercises August 1, 1903, for Indiana National Guard, is used.

Very respectfully,

JOHN J. BACKMAN,
Major Commanding.

FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, Second Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report of the part taken by this battalion in the practice march of August 3d and the tactical exercises of August 4th, 1904:

The battalion was formed at 7:35 a. m. on August 3d and ready to move. At 7:52 a. m. it moved as the rear battalion of the regiment. (The attached road map will be referred to in this report.) The battalion moved from camp to the Kimberlin house at "13," where the column was halted at 8:12 a. m. At this point an order was received from Colonel Smith to form rear guard with two companies. This was executed as prescribed in Security and Information, page 206—one company (Kokomo) acting as reserve to the rear guard—the other, Company L, forming the support, flankers, point, etc. Rear guard moved at 8:42 a. m. and on reaching Fall Creek at "12" was taken across Fall Creek on guns and caissons of Battery A. On reaching the north side of Fall Creek, rear guard was formed as before and took up the march following in rear of main column on Fall Creek road. After crossing Fall Creek at the Baker bridge the column followed the road running south from "5" past "18" to old Lawrence Fair Grounds south of "21," arriving at this point at 11:35 a. m. and going into camp. The battalion broke camp on the morning of August 4th and moved out at 2:00 a. m. on road running north to "21," thence east to "20," arriving at this point at 3:00 a. m. Here Captain Middleton's command was detached and moved east beyond the Reddick house, and thence northeast across country with a scouting party in advance to a point on the high bluff just west of "15," reaching this point at 3:45 a. m. Captain Middleton then sent forward a skirmish line advancing toward the northeast. At 3:50 he received a few scattering shots from Blue outpost north of "15," and a few minutes later a Blue outpost at schoolhouse fired three or four shots, both outposts immediately retiring. Captain Middleton then pushed forward and formed a skirmish line at 4:00 a. m. extending along the ridge from "15" to the schoolhouse, holding this position until "Cease firing" had been sounded.

The Kokomo Company had been sent with Company H to join Major Backman on time of marching from the bivouac at the old Fair Grounds. From "20" the march was north halfway to "16" where main column was left at 3:22 a. m. From this point we moved east with Company M, forming an advance guard and scouting the high hill in front. The bluff west of "15" was reached at 4:00 a. m., at which time a rocket was seen to our left and we immediately fired our own rocket. The one gun of Battery A immediately moved forward to the high bluff near "15" and Captain Heiskell opened with gun at 4:05 a. m., firing eight shots at Blue trenches near Spees house and at Blue battery going into their gun pits, before any Blue piece of artillery had fired a single shot.

The position of Captain Heiskell's gun completely commanded the Blue trenches and gun pits, having an elevation sufficient to see men in trenches and gun pits.

There were no shots fired by Brown infantry until Captain Heiskell had fired three shots from his gun. The battalion had now formed line of attack on Captain Middleton's line extending from "15" to schoolhouse along brow of ridge, with reserve in corn and high bushes and weeds at foot of high bluff at "15" and directly under cover of Captain Heiskell's gun. At this time a battalion of Blue infantry came out in column of fours and formed line, very leisurely going into their trenches at the Spees house under heavy volley firing from this battalion's line of fire and Captain Heiskell's battery. A very thin skirmish line was sent forward by me into high weeds in front of our line of supports, after the Blue infantry had been fired on by volley while going into trenches.

This was the position held when "Cease firing" was sounded.

The report of Captain Middleton is herewith enclosed as a supplementary report.

Very respectfully,

JOHN H. TARLTON,
Major.

REPORT No. 15. APPENDIX "d."

COMPANY E, SECOND INFANTRY,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, Second Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report of the movements of Company E, Third Battalion, Second Infantry, from 3:00 until 5:00 o'clock a. m., August 4, 1904:

At 3:00 o'clock a. m. I left Major Tarlton's command at the point marked "20" on the map attached hereto, and marched east 300 yards. From there I proceeded in a northeasterly direction, having thrown out one set of fours deployed as skirmishers with intervals of about fifteen paces, as an advance guard. I also directed three men to march in file with intervals of about fifty yards from "20" to "19," and thence toward "15." Advance guard and scouts were directed to halt upon reaching the bluff west of "15," and there await further orders. If the enemy was encountered before reaching said points, they were directed to press on and get around his flank, if possible, but to do so without firing; otherwise they were to halt and send report to me. I reached, with my command, the bluff near "15" at 3:45 a. m. and there found my skirmishers and scouts halted, and the enemy reported to be in our front with outposts at the bend of the road north of "15" and near the schoolhouse. I added another set of fours to my skirmish line which was then formed along the bluff—my right on the road "19-15" and my left opposite the schoolhouse, and advanced, the outposts retiring after firing ten or fifteen shots. I then advanced to the brow of the hill under cover of brow of hill—line extending from bend of road north of "15" to a point near schoolhouse. The men were at this time, 4:00 p. m., lying down and under cover. There was no firing by the Blues at this time and not one shot had been fired by my command. I remained quietly in this position until the first shot fired by Captain Heiskell's gun at 4:05 a. m., when the enemy began to fire a few scattered shots from the field in our right front. I believe that they were fired by scouts sent out from the battalion, which then came out near the trenches in column of fours and formed in close line at a distance of about 300 yards from our position. The right platoon of my command fired three volleys at said battalion in close order, and then began rapid fire and used up all their ammunition on them as they deployed. Company K, Third Battalion, arrived on the firing line and took up position on my right and rear at this time. About 4:12 a. m. two volleys were fired by the Blues from the point of woods to our left front, to which I immediately replied with two volleys by my left platoon. These were the first shots fired by my left platoon. Captain Heiskell had fired by this time about eight rounds with his gun.

About 4:10 the battalions of Blues on our right front deployed as skirmishers, and came forward under heavy fire by Company K, Third Battalion, to within 150 yards of our position, Company K firing at will. About this time the umpires arrived and "Cease firing" was ordered a few minutes afterwards.

From a tactical standpoint in my opinion the battle was over at this point and the enemy scattered and driven back before the umpire arrived.

At the conclusion of the action I rejoined Major Tarlton's command.

Very respectfully,

EDWARD L. MIDDLETON,
Captain Company E, Second Infantry, I. N. G.

REPORT No. 15. APPENDIX "e."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 8, 1904.

Colonel, Second Infantry, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report of my observation at the night attack on Camp Benjamin Harrison, August 3d and 4th, 1904. Major Tarlton's report on the operations of the right wing covers all the movements of Companies F and M. I accompanied Company E, which operated on the extreme right under command of Captain Middleton. Companies F and M left the road at 2:50 a. m. and Company E left the road at 3:00 a. m. at a point "20" about a mile southwest of hill "15," where a section of artillery was to be placed. We marched northeast across country by compass and arrived at hill "15" at 3:45 without having touched the enemy. We took possession of line, the slopes northeast of the schoolhouse, at 3:55 a. m., driving in an outpost of four men who were at the turn of the road north of "15." At 4:05 the first shot was fired by the artillery. Our first firing was done at 4:08 by a volley at some skirmishers in field before the Blue trenches. The bluff occupied by our artillery commanded everything in range, but at 4:15 two sections of the Blue artillery were run into battery in their gun pits, and the horses and limbers left less than twenty yards in rear in plain view. About ten shots were fired at them during the movement.

At 4:25 four Blue companies moved into the open behind the trenches in columns of fours, formed line, then line of skirmishers and occupied the trenches. They were exposed during this movement to volley firing and rapid fire of two companies at 250 yards, and to rapid fire from the field gun at hill (15). Had service ammunition been used the fight would have ended here.

As I have no accurate map, I add one which I drew from memory, showing the approximate positions mentioned in the report.

Very respectfully,

W. R. SCOTT,
Second Lieutenant, Seventh Infantry, U. S. A.

REPORT No. 15. APPENDIX "f."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND INFANTRY,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND., August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, Second Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to report that in compliance with verbal orders of the Regimental Commander, the First Battalion, Second Infantry, comprising Companies A, C, D and H, 13 officers and 155 men, took the following part in the practice march and battle exercise, as per schedule of exercises, Camp of Instruction, 1904, August 3d and 4th.

The battalion as part of the regiment left Camp Army Post at 8:10 a. m., August 3d, marched north, crossing ford at Fall Creek to the Fall Creek free gravel road; thence west on this road to Baker's bridge; thence south on west line or reservation to the old Fair Grounds near Lawrence, arriving there at 11:19 a. m.—a distance of four miles. The battalion as part of the regiment bivouacked until 1:00 a. m., August 4th.

Under orders from regimental commander, the battalion under Major Conde was detached with instructions to proceed to the north side of the Army Post site and attack the enemy's position in flank. The battalion marched by Baker's bridge to a point on the Fall Creek free gravel road oposite the east rifle range, arriving there at 2:20 a. m. The march was conducted in silence, an advance guard having been thrown out 300 yards ahead of the column. The advance party marched south through a lane and cornfield to the edge of the east rifle range, proceeding with great caution. Several of the enemy's scouts were discovered on the range. These scouts retired upon the approach of our advance party. One shot was fired by the commander of our advance party, with hope of developing the enemy's position and strength. No response was made.

Companies C and H were deployed with directions to march through cornfield, south across the range to Fall Creek. Scouts were sent forward to examine the ground, but met with no opposition.

The advance party located the foot bridge across Fall Creek. It was supposed that the enemy would endeavor to prevent our crossing the bridge. This position was reached at 3:20 a. m. Cossack post was stationed by the enemy near the south end of the foot bridge. This post fired two shots but was promptly rushed by the advance party. The men composing the enemy's Cossack post fled without firing again, and so hurriedly that they left behind their blankets, etc.

Our advance party was deployed immediately upon reaching the south side of the Creek and directed to push forward and locate the enemy's position. The ground ahead was cautiously examined for half an hour, the enemy being located in an entrenched position on a hill east of the Yandes house. Our battalion was then brought across the Creek. Companies C, A and D, marched east under cover of the bank of the Creek.

Company H, First Lieutenant A. P. Smith commanding, was directed to engage the enemy on a frontal attack on their entrenched position.

Our position was invisible to the enemy owing to the high weeds and the cover and protection afforded by the creek banks. Our force was in position for attack at 3:55 a. m. At 4:00 a. m. the signal rocket for attack was sent up by the Regimental Commander. We responded with our signal rocket.

Upon firing the rocket the enemy immediately opened heavy fire from their position without any known objective, so far as we could ascertain—our position being secure and invisible to them.

Company A advanced in open order through the high weeds upon their entrenched position on the hill—the remaining three companies advanced under cover of the creek bank to a position about 500 yards on the enemy's right flank. Here they ascended the bluffs to the top of the hills in the rear of the enemy's entrenchment. We advanced through the woods to a position 100 yards in the rear of the enemy's recently entrenched position—the enemy in the meantime having abandoned their position and were now retiring in confusion to the east along the road. Our two left companies poured a volley into the enemy in the road at a distance of 100 yards or less. Our position was concealed by the woods. Our advance up to this time had been without firing a shot from the three flanking companies. The enemy now left the road and ran across the fields, taking a position under cover, facing the northwest. Our force fired repeatedly upon the retreating enemy from advantageous positions along the sunken road and the rail fence on the right. Two companies were deployed in the field joining the left of Major Backman's battalion. Company A remained in a concealed position in the road. Company D advanced under cover through the woods to the left of the road, firing volleys into the enemy's right and into the enemy's support, which were about 400 yards to the rear in close order formation standing. This support was in a position to receive all shots going over the enemy's firing line. At this point an umpire appeared upon the scene and ordered the firing discontinued.

All the companies of this battalion conducted themselves in a most praiseworthy manner throughout the entire action. The men were under excellent control at all times and responded promptly to the directions of their officers.

The service of security and information was intelligently performed, the deployments prompt, the men quick to use all available cover. The fire was at all times under control of the officers.

The action ended on part of our battalion at 4:50 a. m.

Accompanying this report is a map prepared by Private W. T. Boyle of Company D, Second Infantry.

Respectfully submitted,

H. T. CONDE,
Major Second Infantry, Commanding.

REPORT No. 15. APPENDIX "g."

BATTERY A, FIRST ARTILLERY,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

Assistant Adjutant-General, Brown Forces:

Sir—I have the honor to report that Battery A reported to Commanding Officer 2nd Infantry at 7:20 a. m. August 3d with three officers, 31 men, 25 horses and 2 guns and caissons. The battery followed the infantry column leaving the camp on the north road and circling to the left by way of the Fall Creek road and the Baker bridge, and passing to the west of the camp arrived at the site of the old Lawrence Fair Ground at 11:55. The battery went into park and pitched camp with shelter tents on the right of the regiment.

At 4:50 p. m., the captain and Lieutenant Tyndall with one sergeant and ten men mounted as provisional cavalry, reported to commanding officer of the Browns, and were sent out as a scouting party and also to secure information for the commanding officer as to the lay of the country, in order that the commanding officer could intelligently plan his attack for the next day. The scouting party returned to camp at 7:05 p. m. with two officers, 11 men and 13 horses, and the captain immediately imparted to the commanding officer the information secured.

The scouting party was halted by an outpost of the enemy at the intersection of the Spring Valley road and the first east and west road north of the enemy's camp, 1½ miles from camp of enemy. Four shots were fired at the outposts and the scouting party succeeded in getting away safely.

At 2:00 a. m Lieutenant Tyndall reported with one section to Major Backman and proceeded with his column and engaged the enemy immediately west of this position.

Captain Heiskell and one section reported at 2:00 a. m. to Major Tarlton and proceeded northeast with the column and came into action on a high bluff immediately in the rear of the post headquarters.

Both pieces delivered an effective fire beginning at 4:05 a. m., August 4th.

Captain Heiskell and one piece returned to his park direct from his position arriving in park at 5:40 a. m., August 4th.

Lieutenant Tyndall and one piece secured the three pieces of captured artillery and delivered them to the Commanding Officer, Second Infantry, at his headquarters, arriving in park at 6:00 a. m,. August 4th.

Very respectfully,

W. W. HEISKELL,
Captain Battery A.

HEADQUARTERS SIGNAL CORPS,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, Second Regiment, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to report that under verbal orders from the brigade commander I reported for duty to the Commanding Officer, Brown Forces, with a signal detachment consisting of two sergeants and sixteen privates, equipped for work with flags and Coston lights, at 7:30 a. m. of August 3d.

The detachment under the immediate comand of the senior sergeant accompanied the column to its camp in the old Fair Ground north of Lawrence.

When the attacking movement began at 1:00 a. m. of today, squads from the signal detachment were attached to each battalion of the Second Regiment, the remainder of the detachment remaining with regimental headquarters.

Work was done in keeping open communication from the center to the flanks during the fight, by means of flags and verbal communication.

Very respectfully,

WALLACE SHERWOOD,
First Lieutenant Signal Corps, Commanding Detachment.

REPORT No. 16.

HEADQUARTERS PROVISIONAL BRIGADE,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, IND., August 4, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report on the execution of Memorandum Order No. 5233, Headquarters, Indiana National Guard, 1904, received at 9:30 p. m., August 2, 1904. (Copy attached, marked Appendix "i.") At the same hour, I received copies of the Tactical Problem of Attack and Defense, General Situation and Special Situation Blue. Also Field Orders No. 46, Headquarters, First Corps, Blue Army, copy of the latter being attached hereto as Appendix "j."

At 9 a. m., August 3, 1904, I assumed command of the provisional brigade by Field Orders No. 1 and No. 2, these Headquarters (Appendices "k" and "l"). The strength of my command according to morning reports then was as follows:

Infantry	74 officers and	796 men.
Artillery	5 officers and	74 men.
Aggregate	79 officers and	870 men.

The Signal Corps failed to report and the Hospital Corps reported on paper only. The Artillery consisted of Battery B, two 3.2-inch field pieces, 3 officers and 36 men; Battery C, three 2-pounder Hotchkiss r. f. guns, 2 officers and 38 men. The infantry consisted of the First and Third Regiments.

The constructive situation assuming that this force constituted the advance guard of an army corps, halted and become an outpost, dispositions were made accordingly. Major Coulter, First Infantry, with one battalion, First Infantry, and Battery C, under Captain Glascock, occupied the line of observation, forming Cossack posts with supports. The main body, consisting of the Third Infantry, eight companies of the First Infantry, and Battery B, Field Artillery, remained in camp.

On attack on outposts, the Third Infantry was moved to support the right and right center. The First Infantry supported the left and left center. Battery B occupied the gunpits on the left, these positions being taken upon verbal orders. Three companies of the First Infantry and one battalion of the Third Infantry were held in reserve and were never under fire.

I have the honor to attach hereto the reports of Colonel Edwin P. Thayer, commanding Third Infantry; Major A. L. Kuhlman, Third Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonel James F. Fee, commanding First Infantry; Major Thomas B. Coulter, First Infantry, commanding the outposts; Major Wm. J. Coleman, First Infantry; Major T. J. Louden, First Infantry; Captain William C. Cleary, commanding Battery B; Captain J. L. Glascock, commanding Battery C, and Major Eugene Hawkins, Surgeon First Infantry.

The outposts came into actual contact at 3:55 a. m. The main body was formed quietly and moved deliberately to their designated positions. "Call to arms" was not sounded until all company commanders had been notified. The first "Cease firing" was sounded at 4:25 a. m. on the right of the Blue line by direction of an umpire. The final recall was sounded at 4:58 a. m. At no time was the entire command under fire.

Owing to the fact that no decision was received from the Chief Umpire, it is impossible to state concerning the "missing Battery C," but in the face of instructions that infantry firing cease at 200 yards and opposing forces hold their positions until decision of an umpire can be obtained, it is difficult to understand how this battery was captured. The line of resistance of the Blue infantry was well chosen. The commands moved promptly and quietly to their positions and were at all points under excellent control. The positions were well under cover at the same time necessitating the exposure of the opposing force on the "sky-line."

It is recommended that in the future more umpires be appointed and that they be urged to be on the ground at the beginning of action.

Very respectfully,

GEORGE W. M'COY,
Colonel First Infantry.

REPORT No. 16. APPENDIX "i."

HEADQUARTERS INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON,
August 2, 1904.

MEMO. ORDER, No. 5233.

Colonel George W. McCoy will assume command of all troops remaining in camp at 9 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, August 3, 1904, consisting of First Infantry, Third Infantry, Battery B, Battery C, Signal Corps, Hospital Corps, and will issue orders immediately upon assuming command, prescribing dress throughout command to be wholly blue; those in service uniform other than officers, and men of the regular army, and those wearing a colored brassard on left arm to be considered as the enemy, "Browns." Officers and men within the command and not on outpost duty or on information duty will remain within camp limits.

The commanding officers of the Third Infantry, Battery B, Battery C, Signal Corps and Hospital Corps will report for orders to Colonel George W. McCoy, First Infantry, 9 a. m., August 3, 1904.

The commanding officer will make dispositions to cover the several camps against possible attack from the northwest, west and southwest.

A line of resistance will be selected and intrenched, outposts established and along a frontage extending from Fall Creek on the north to 15 along road marked 17, 16, 15, and every precaution will be taken to prevent surprise and resist attack. During the tactical exercises which follows, the ground south of 14, 15 and east of 15, 19 to the limits of the reservation is considered impassable country and must not be encroached upon. Every care will be taken to avoid damage to growing crops, buildings and fences.

The rules contained in "Provisional Instruction for Maneuvers" will govern the exercise.

Special attention is again called to Memo. Orders No. 5179 covering inspection for ball cartridges.

By command of Brigadier-General McKee.

ALFRED B. SCHANZ,
First Lieutenant and A. D. C., Acting A. A. G.

FIELD ORDERS,
No. 2.

1. The following dress is prescribed for the field exercises of this day and night: Blue trousers and shirts and campaign hats.

2. All persons wearing the service uniforms excepting the officers and men of the Regular Army and those wearing a colored brassard on the left arm are to be considered enemies.

3. In case of an attack on the camp the Third Infantry will take up a position, its right resting on Fall Creek on a line extending in a northerly direction from 17, and extending to the left on the road 17, 16, 15, connecting with the right of the First Infantry, which will continue the line to 15.

4. Major Thomas B. Coulter, Third Battalion, First Infantry, with sufficient cooked rations for two meals, will establish the outposts.

5. The commanding officer Battery C, First Artillery, with his command and sufficient coked rations for two meals will at 1:15 p. m. today report to Major Coulter for duty with the outpost.

6. Battery B, First Artillery, will be assigned a position later.

7. Every care will be taken to avoid damages to growing crops, buildings and fences.

8. The rules contained in "Provisional Instructions for Maneuvers" will govern the exercises.

9. Special attention is called to Memo. Order No. 5179 covering inspection for ball cartridges.

10. No fires will be permitted by the outpost during the day except in concealed positions and absolutely prohibited after dark.

11. Brigade Headquarters will be established at Headquarters First Infantry. After the action opens it will be as near as practicable in the center of the line in the rear.

12. Brigade Headquarters will be indicated by a small U. S. flag.

By command of Colonel McCoy.

Captain First Infantry, A. A. A. G.

REPORT No. 16. APPENDIX "m."

HEADQUARTERS THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, IND., August 4, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Provisional Brigade, Blue:

Sir—I have the honor to report that the Third Regiment, I. N. G., 43 officers, 438 men, remained in camp the night of August 3, 1904. At 3:50 a. m. August 4, word was received from the front that the enemy was sighted in force immediately in the west, and the battalion commanders were at once ordered to get their commands out and advance to the positions assigned them. All of which was duly performed in the prescribed manner on the line of resistance as ordered by the commander of the provisional brigade.

The march was in the directions of west and northwest from the camp of the Third Infantry. The Third Battalion, commanded by Major Harrison, deployed to the left in support of the right center of the whole position, and Major Kuhlman with the Second Battalion deployed to the right. The First Battalion under Major Blum was held in reserve.

This disposition of the troops was according to orders issued at 10:30 p. m. August 3, 1904.

Very respectfully,

EDWIN P. THAYER,
Colonel Commanding Third Infantry.

REPORT No. 16. APPENDIX "n."

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BATTALION,
THIRD INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
AUBURN, IND., August 19, 1904.

The Adjutant, Third Infantry, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—On Thursday, August 4, "To arms" was sounded at 3:50 a. m., and it was reported that the enemy were moving on the camp via the Spees ravine road and firing could be plainly heard in that direction.

I was ordered to hold the right of the line and moved out in double time at 3:57 a. m., Major Harrison, who was to join me on the left, having moved out at 3:55 a. m. Major Blum, who had the regimental reserve, followed at 4 a. m.

I met the enemy driving in our outpost at the turn of the ravine road near the spring, and immediately formed for defense. We were attacked by the battalions of Backman and Conde, the latter moving across my front in an open field at a walk and without any attempt at self protection, while exposed to an enfilading fire from Companies B, C and D of my battalion, and the direct fire from Company K and one company of Major Coulter's battalion of the First Infantry.

While this encounter was in progress, recall was sounded and the regiment returned to camp, arriving at 5:10 o'clock a. m.

While the reports of the umpires were not specific as to the results of this engagement, I estimate that I would have lost in actual conflict one-fourth of my battalion and that Major Conde's battalion, opposing me, would have been practically annihilated as it moved across my front.

Very respectfully,

A. L. KUHLMAN,
Major Third Infantry.

REPORT No. 16. APPENDIX "o."

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, IND., August 4, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Provisional Brigade:

Sir—I have the honor to submit the following report:

Assumed command of the First Infantry at 9:00 a. m., August 3, 1904, immediately upon Colonel George W. McCoy assuming command of Provisional Brigade under Memo. Order No. 5233, Headquarters Indiana National Guard, 1904. Detailed Lieutenant H. H. Austin as Regimental Adjutant and Captain McCurdy was ordered to report to Major Coulter as topographer on outpost.

At about 3 p. m., August 3, three scouts from the Brown force were captured by myself and turned over to a Cossack post at point marked "15" on the map.

Gave instructions at 10 o'clock p. m. to have Company I report immediately upon sounding of alarm to Captain Cleary as support of Battery B.

At 9:30 p. m. a system of connecting groups was established between the reserve of the outpost and headquarters of the Provisional Brigade.

At 3:55 a. m., August 4, the first shots were fired in our immediate front. The "Call to arms" was sounded at 4:02 and at 4:06 the companies had formed and reported.

Company I proceeded at once to the support of Battery B on the extreme left of the line and at 4:10 two companies of the Second Battalion, Major Coleman, marched to the entrenchments and occupied them. At 4:20 the two remaining companies of this battalion were ordered to the front and took position in line of skirmishers on the left of the line and at once cleared the front of Browns, who had approached within 300 yards of the line extending south from the trenches.

The two lines in the second advance of the Browns having arrived within the 200-yard limit, I directed "Cease firing" to be sounded at 4:25 a. m.

During the action, Major Louden was ordered up as reserve and took position with three companies under cover in rear of the firing line.

Major Coulter, in command of the Third Battalion, was assigned to outpost duty.

Captain Guthrie, Acting Regimental Surgeon, took a good position on the firing line in rear of the earthwork, being well protected, and there established a "First aid" station.

Very respectfully,

JAMES F. FEE,
Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding First Infantry.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD BATTALION,
FIRST INFANTRY, INDIANA NATIONAL GUARD,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Provisional Brigade:

Sir—I have the honor to report on participation of this battalion in Tactical Exercise of August 4, 1904. By Field Orders No. 2, Headquarters Provisional Brigade, I was placed in command of outposts and charged with their establishment. My command consisted of Companies A, B, G and M, First Infantry, and Battery C with three 2-pounder Hotchkiss r. f. guns. Total strength, 13 officers, 159 men.

Companies A, B, G and Battery C established ten Cossack posts as shown on accompanying map (Report No. 14, Appendix "a"), each furnishing its own support. Company M was the reserve.

The outpost formation was established by 2:30 p. m., August 3. Early in the afternoon the scouts and pickets got in touch with the enemy's scouts and an occasional shot was heard during the afternoon and night. At 3:10 a. m. on August 4, a single shot was heard in the direction of the extreme northern outpost. Soon the attack became more spirited to the front, and at 3:45 became general, but heaviest to the extreme right. This had been expected and the reserve was in easy supporting distance of this flank. The right of the line was supported by the Third Infantry and the left by the First Infantry.

Captain Pease, of Company G, reports that after the outposts had been driven in, his assembled company fired volleys for some time directly into the flank of one gun of Battery A at a range of 600 yards.

It does not seem possible that the attack could have been successful at any point. While it is true that the attacking force moved forward regardless of any resistance, they were subjected to the most galling fire and never could have reached the places where they could do much execution. The rules of fire were not observed, and the writer called personally to the Blue forces to cease firing, although not a part of his own command. The Browns were still advancing.

It is recommended that in these maneuvers a sufficient number of umpires be provided, and that they be present at the commencement of the action.

Very respectfully,

THOMAS B. COULTER,
Major Commanding Third Battalion, First Infantry.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BATTALION,
FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, First Infantry, I. N. G.:

Sir—I have the honor to report on part taken by this battalion in the Tactical Exercise of August 4, 1904, as follows:

My command consisted of Companies F, C, L and E; total strength 9 officers, 131 men.

The battalion, in response to call to arms at 4:02 a. m., August 4, 1904, formed quickly. Companies F and L, pursuant to verbal orders, were sent forward and occupied the entrenchments west of the Spees house. They left camp in column of fours and deployed as skirmishers at the proper time.

Shortly afterward these companies fired on a heavy line of Browns at a distance of 250 yards. The Browns continued to advance under heavy fire in an open field until within 200 yards of the entrenched line, when the command of "Cease firing" was given.

Companies E and C, upon reaching a point on the right and rear of the line of entrenchments, took position behind a number of old straw stacks and poured a heavy fire into the Brown line, which was advancing across an open field and a flanking fire into the Brown's left.

After the command "Cease firing," when the lines were only 200 yards distant, the Browns continued to advance until within 100 yards of our line. Immediately after, by order of Lieutenant-Colonel Fee, commanding the regiment, this battalion was assembled and marched back to camp.

My conclusion is, that under all the circumstances of the terrain and relative strength of opposed forces, the Browns, if the action had been real, would have been shot to pieces.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM J. COLEMAN,
Major First Infantry, Commanding Second Battalion.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BATTALION,
FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
FORT BENJAMIN HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

The Adjutant, First Infantry, Indiana National Guard:

Sir—I have the honor to make the following report:

My command during the Tactical Exercise, consisted of Companies H, K, D and I, First Infantry, total strength 11 officers, 110 men. By orders Company I was detached as support for Battery B on the extreme left of the Blue position. The other three companies formed regimental reserve. Call to arms was sounded at 4:00 a. m., August 4, and this battalion was under arms ready to move at 4:03 a. m. The command remained in quarters until ordered to position under cover of a hill west of camp and behind the firing line. The action was of short duration and the battalion did not get under fire or into action.

Very respectfully,

T. J. LOUDEN,

Major First Infantry, Commanding First Battalion.

BATTERY B, ARTILLERY BATTALION, I. N. G.,
FORT BENJAMIM HARRISON, August 4, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Provisional Brigade:

Sir—I have the honor to report as follows:

This battery, consisting of 3 officers and 36 men, two 3.2-inch field pieces, remained in camp the night of August 3, 1904. On the morning of August 4, the camp was attacked at 4:00 a. m. from the west. At 4:10 the battery occupied the gun pits southeast of the Spees house, and was supported by Company I, First Infantry. The attack had by that time developed and the battery opened fire on the enemy, firing 53 shots from the two pieces. The position of the battery was then inspected by umpires and the battery returned to camp at 6:00 a. m.

Respectfully,

WILL C. CLEARY,

Captain Commanding Battery B.

REPORT No. 16. APPENDIX "t."

BATTERY C, ARTILLERY BATTALION, I. N. G.,
AUBURN IND., August 10, 1904.

The Adjutant, Artillery Battalion, I. N. G.:

Sir—On August 3, 1904, my battery was assigned to the command of Colonel McCoy, Provisional Brigade of Blues, and was placed on the outpost for the night. The morning of Wednesday had been devoted to the construction of gun pits. With one officer and forty enlisted men, we took position on the highest point (east of the Yandes house) overlooking territory northwest and west of camp, and controlling the Baker bridge. The position, as I believe, was an excellent one and in time of actual war, three pieces of artillery so placed and properly supported by infantry, would be capable of standing off a force four times the number that would be in its defense. As it was, we were attacked at 4:00 a. m. August 4, by five companies of infantry, numbering 12 officers and 256 men. They came up over the hill at a run and as near to each other almost as in company front. They observed none of the instructions laid down in orders issued. They came right up to the muzzles of the pieces and spoiled our fun. Had it been a reality, most of them would have been incapacitated. The enemy claimed that we were captured. If we were, I believe that Hamlet's father's ghost captured him. I would as soon believe in the stories told of the ghosts walking in the graveyards. If we were captured, it was by the spirits of men departed, and not by the bacon-eating mortals of the Second Infantry.

At the close of the engagement we returned to camp. The men were in good condition. I appreciated the courtesy extended to me by Colonel Smith, Major Backman, Captains Garrard and Van Camp and other officers of the Second Regiment as an imaginary prisoner. They fed me well and turned me loose.

Very respectfully,

JAMES L. GLASCOCK,
Captain Commanding Battery C.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST INFANTRY, I. N. G.,
CAMP OF INSTRUCTION, August 4, 1904.

The Assistant Adjutant-General, Provisional Brigade:

Sir—I have the honor to report, as Surgeon of the Provisional Brigade, the following disposition of the Medical Department during the battle of August 4, 1904. The Base Hospital was located at the camp of the First Regiment of Infantry, myself in charge. Captain George Guthrie with his aid established a "first aid" station, just in the rear of the firing line, in a protected ravine. It was my intention to establish a second dressing station just beyond the danger zone, but Captain Sommers, who was ordered to report to me, failed to do so from a misunderstanding of orders, hence the second station was not established, but the Base Hospital was only three-quarters of a mile from the firing line. The litter squads were disposed along the firing line in convenient places to carry the wounded to the first aid stations. The battle lasted less than an hour, and there were no casualties.

Very respectfully,

EUGENE HAWKINS,
Major-Surgeon First Infantry and Acting Chief Surgeon Provisional Brigade.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS

OF

GOVERNOR J. FRANK HANLY

TO THE
SIXTY-FOURTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY
INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS:
Wm. B. Burford, Contractor for State Printing and Binding.
1905.

Inaugural Address of Governor Hanly to the Sixty-fourth General Assembly.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

A generously partial and confiding people by a verdict more nearly approaching unanimity than any ever before rendered by them, have confided to our care, for a time, the interests of the State, in so far as governmental agencies can effect such interests. Such an unexampled and unprecedented expression of trust and confidence by them creates, by the inexorable law of compensation, obligation for us, without example or precedent. Their action rightly and accurately understood is a demand for the strictest possible accounting for our every official act—a call to the "better angels" of our natures, and in no instance is it to be construed into license to follow selfish or personal purposes either of our own or of others. Public reasons should underlie and impel every public act. That much the people demand. Less than that they will not long abide.

The oath of office which I have just taken here in your presence, in the presence of this concourse of our fellow citizens, and in the presence of Almighty God, like unto that so recently taken by each of you in your respective chambers, is a most solemn and binding obligation—one well calculated to impel whoever takes it to high and patriotic service. Cherishing as I do a belief in the existence of a just God, in the teachings of the Christ, and in the immortality of my own soul, the words "so help me God" frame the most sacred pledge my lips can utter or my mind conceive. That oath now lies upon my conscience, and there it shall continue until the commission I have received shall be returned to the people who gave it. If I fail, and in some things I may fail, not one of my countrymen, including all those who have so generously trusted me, will be so deeply grieved as I myself shall be.

I congratuate you upon the happy auspices under which we begin our public service. We are assembled under conditions of unsurpassed material wealth and prosperity. Field, mine and factory have yielded rich reward to the efforts and industry of the wealth producers of the State. Labor is employed and hopeful. Farmers have witnessed a steady increase in values and in the accumulation of their savings. Merchants have enjoyed a growing and profitable trade. Manufacturers have held old markets and have gained new ones. Transportation companies have closed a year of unequaled profit, and the banking and financial institutions, both State and national, that have to do with the savings and investments of the people, are upon sound and satisfactory footing. There have been few failures within the lines of legitimate business. Mismanagement and speculation in some instances have brought disaster. Some private banking institutions, for the supervision of which there has been in the law no adequate provision, and a few national banks have closed their doors, but none of these have substantially affected general business or financial interests.

KEEPING INSTITUTIONS OUT OF POLITICS.

Usually fortunate in the administration of State affairs, we have been especially so during the last twelve years. In that time there has been no malfeasance in any public office of the State. Governor Matthews set a high standard of executive efficiency and excellence, and the late Governor Mount raised that standard yet higher and inaugurated many wise and improved business methods in the handling and expenditure of the public revenues. Today Governor Durbin goes out of office after four years of executive service unexcelled by either of his immediate predecessors. He carries with him into private life the good will and kind wishes of our best citizenship, and he may justly feel that he has earned the confidence and the gratitude of his countrymen.

During his administration the public debt has been rapidly decreased and the annual interest charge materially lessened. Honesty and economy have characterized every department of the government. The correctional, penal, benevolent and charitable institutions of the State have received from him considerate care and efficient management. These institutions have been placed upon a plane far above partisan politics, and there this administration intends to keep them. There shall be no backward step. Above all personal and party obligations, however sacred and binding they may be, I hold the good of the State and the welfare of its unfortunate wards. There shall be no removals of persons holding positions in any of such institutions except for the good of the institutions themselves. Upright and efficient service will guarantee continued tenure of position. Negligent and incompetent service will insure immediate removal.

STRICT BUT SANE ECONOMY AT INSTITUTIONS.

The policy of the administration in regard to the institutions of the State shall involve strict but sane economy. Value received shall be required for money expended. Necessary improvements will be insisted upon. Needed repairs will be made. To refuse actual needs is not economy, but extravagance. This applies to the educational institutions with the same force that it does to the other institutions. In the days of hardship and privation our fathers established these schools. Shall we, their children, in our day of ease and plenty, refuse to provide for their needs or let them languish or deteriorate for want of means? Not so. Having established and maintained them until their usefulness has been successfully demonstrated and their fame has spread over the land to such an extent as to fill them to overflowing with an eager and virile student life, we can not abandon them now, and to refuse to recognize or provide for their necessities is a step toward abandonment. I do not believe we intend to take that step. And I therefore urge full and careful consideration of their wants to the end that their capacity, equipment and facilities shall correspond to the growth and development of the State, and shall equal at all times the demands made upon them.

TUBERCULOSIS INSTITUTE COMMISSION ADVISED.

The proposition to establish a State hospital for the scientific treatment of tuberculosis promises so much in the way of the improvement, the cure and the prevention of that dread disease as to deserve serious consideration. Experiments in New York, Rhode Island and Massachusetts have demonstrated the value of such an institution, and have turned the best thought of our own people to the consideration of our duty in that behalf. In 1903 one death out of every four that occurred in the State from preventive causes was due to consumption. Deaths from that cause that year numbered 4,876, and for the year just closed deaths from such cause have not been fewer in number. There is high authority for the statement that scientific treatment under the favorable conditions to be secured in a State hospital will save to useful life 49 per cent. of the persons treated, and bring improvement to 43 per cent. of the others. Such a work appeals to every humanitarian impulse of our people. The condition of the finances, however, is such as to preclude an appropriation by you for the immediate establishment of such an institution. But something can be done. An initial step can at least be taken. I recommend that a commission be created composed of five members, one of whom shall be a member of the Senate, two of whom shall be members of the House, and two of whom shall be practicing physicians of the State. Such commission should be invested with authority to investigate the subject and report the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations as it shall deem wise, to the next General Assembly for its consideration.

ADDITIONAL HOSPITAL FOR INSANE ADVOCATED.

The institutions for the insane have become inadequate to house this most unfortunate class of our population. They are daily refused admission to such institutions because of sheer lack of room to receive and care for them, and are, therefore, remanded either to the care of their own friends, or to the poor houses and jails of the several counties, where they remain without proper care or treatment, a charge upon the county in which they live. Under such conditions the question of cure, or even of improvement, is practically eliminated from the problem. Irremedial and hopeless insanity is often the result, when under humane surroundings and rational scientific treatment, improvement or even recovery might be assured. Left in the poor houses and the jails, without medical treatment or intelligent care, many of them become permanent charges upon the public, when a short term in a State institution would effect a cure and enable them to return to their families and become sulf-supporting—an asset to the State instead of a liability. There are said to be 226 of such unfortunates in the State who have been committed upon inquisition to the hospitals for the insane, but who have not been received for lack of room, and 434 more who are proper subjects for inquisition and treatment.

In view of these conditions there can scarcely be dispute or debate as to the duty of the State. Its obligation is plain and imperative. A new hospital should be constructed. The people can act only through you, their chosen representatives. It is for you to say whether this condition shall continue. I can only suggest, but you can act. In behalf of the 660 neglected ones who sit in mental darkness amid unsanitary conditions and unwholesome surroundings, without medical or humane treatment, and without hope in the hearts of the friends who love them, I appeal to you. And lest you do not hear the appeal, or hearing, you forget, I beg you to remember the words of the great Teacher, for surely He must have thought of such unfortunate, stricken ones as these when He said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

It has been suggested, and with some reason, that additions to existing hospitals should be built, rather than to enter upon the construction of a new one. The basis for such contention is that it will cost less money to build additions and afford more immediate relief. I am still of the opinion, however, that it will be better to establish a new hospital than to undertake to build such additions. If additions be built to the present institutions it will be necessary, at least in one instance and possibly in two, to enlarge the lighting and heating plants at such institutions. The enlargement of such institutions until they will have sufficient capacity to care for a thousand patients each, will only meet present necessities. The total number that can be provided for in that way is 679. There are practically that many now who ought to be cared for by the State. A new institution will not only answer present demands, but it will provide for future needs and its establishment will cost but little, if any more, than the three proposed additions.

NEED OF AN EPILEPTIC INSTITUTE.

Closely connected with the question of an additional hospital for the insane is another matter of equally grave importance—the establishment of an institution for epileptics. Of these there are said to be 381 who are in the hospitals as insane. There are many others in the jails and poor houses, and still others at large; in all 920 who ought to be receiving the charity of the State in a properly appointed institution. A number of States have established such institutions. In Ohio, New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey epileptic colonies or villages have been in successful operation for a considerable time, varying from three to fourteen years. In such States the matter is no longer an experiment, but has become a part of the established policy of the State. The history of these institutions is most interesting. Five to 10 per cent. of all patients received are cured, and there is marked improvement in many others.

Epilepsy is hereditary. Competent authorities estimate that one-third of those afflicted with the disease have inherited it and are therefore bearing the "blight of ancestral sins and woes." For these there is little or no hope of recovery. They are children of the State in the fullest possible meaning of the term. In two-thirds of the cases, however, the disease is said to be due to other causes than heredity, and in most of such cases there is hope of improvement and often of a full return to intellect and strength. The nature of the malady is such that those who are afflicted with it must be denied the usual privileges of schools, entertainments, society and employment, and are compelled to grow up into adult life, ignorant, idle, isolated and neglected. Outdoor life, consistent diet, scientific and skilled treatment, congenial occupation and a sympathetic companionship which lessens the sense of neglect and isolation that weighs so heavily upon them in the world of normal men, are essential to their improvement or recovery. These can best be had in institutional life. A village or farm colony, where its inmates may find opportunity to turn to useful account such faculties as have not yet been destroyed or impaired, and which are capable of development, and where something of home life and its sympathies may be had and enjoyed, affords the best plan for such an institution. The establishment of such an hospital can be justified also on economic grounds.

The insane and the epileptics in the poor houses and jails of the several counties are already public charges, and unless cared for by the State, are destined to remain so indefinitely. There, they are costing from 40 to 50 cents a day for maintenance. They can be maintained in a State institution at a cost of from 17 to 20 cents a day. If the first cost of such an establishment be eliminated, State care is much more economical, considered from a money standpoint alone, than jail or infirmary custody. It is also more humane and scientific, and it precludes the epileptic from begetting his kind, a thing of incalculable future benefit to the race.

I am persuaded that the time has come in Indiana when we ought to take these worthy and dependent children of the State out of the poor houses, the jails and asylums, where they are a burden to the public and a horror to themselves, and care for them in a State institution as becomes our wealth and rank among the great States of the Union. The first appropriation need not be large. It is believed that $150,000 will be sufficient to purchase a farm and start the institution. To this, in the beginning, there should be sent only that class of epileptics most calculated to respond to treatment and best qualified to assist in the work of the construction and improvement of the institution.

The law providing for the establishment of an additional hospital for the insane, or of an epileptic institute, should provide for the appointment of a commission of not less than five persons to select and purchase sites for them, under such restrictions as to cost, area and location as, in your judgment, shall seem wise.

FINANCES OF THE STATE.

For twelve years we have been engaged in debt-paying. The record of the late administration in that regard is without precedent in the history of the State. There now remains but $1,207,000 of the bonded foreign debt; $407,000 of that sum is represented by 3 per cent. school fund refunding bonds of the issue of June, 1889. These bonds are payable at the pleasure of the State, but will not be due until June, 1909. The sinking fund tax rate of 3 cents on the $100 will produce this year a fund something more than sufficient to discharge this issue of bonds in full; $300,000 of the bonded foreign debt consists of 3½ per cent. funding bonds of the temporary loan of the issue of April, 1895. These are payable at the pleasure of the State after April, 1910, but will not be due until April, 1915. The remaining $500,000 of such debt consists of 3½ per cent. State House temporary funding bonds of the issue of May, 1895, payable at the option of the State after May, 1910, but not due until May, 1915.

The present sinking fund tax rate of 3 cents on the $100 produces an annual sinking fund income closely approximating $450,000. This tax should be reduced to a rate sufficient only in amount to meet the bonded foreign debt when the same becomes payable in 1910. More than that is not needed and will only accumulate as idle money in the State treasury unless we go into the market and purchase bonds before our option to pay matures, a thing we ought not to do, to the extent which the present rate will make necessary if it be continued. Indeed, the present necessities of the State which can be met only out of the general fund, are such as to justify us in reducing the sinking fund tax rate to 1 cent on the $100. Such a rate will produce something like $750,000 by 1910, or within $50,000 of enough to redeem the entire bonded foreign debt the day the option to pay it matures, and five years before it is actually due. The repeal of the sinking fund tax in its entirely has been suggested, but that ought not to be done. Some provision should be left for the payment of the debt, and it should be sufficient in amount to meet it by the time it becomes payable under the terms of the loan.

DEBT PAYING CAUSES EMBARRASSMENT.

The estimated expenses for the State government for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1905, including specific appropriations now available and the estimated cost of the present session of the General Assembly, are $463,000 in excess of the estimated revenues accruing to the State within such fiscal year. This condition of the finances will become an actual embarrassment to the treasury before the end of the current year. It can be met only by borrowing money outright or by anticipating the revenues for the next fiscal year. It is due to two causes. First, to the large appropriations made by the last General Assembly; second, to a substantial invasion of the general fund for the purpose of making payments on the State debt. The sum of $140,379.45 has been taken out of the general fund during the last two fiscal years, $416,703.25 in three years and $521,091.59 in four years, and applied to the payment of the State's indebtedness not yet due, at a time, too, when the general fund was already overdrawn, and when the revenues accruing to such fund were being anticipated far in advance. Bonds were bought in the market with money from the general fund in the face of the fact that there was sure to be a heavy deficit in that fund at the close of each fiscal year. Debt-paying is commendable, but the present embarrassment could have been saved by conserving the general fund and applying only the sinking fund to the payment of the debt, especially so as such fund would have been ample to meet the entire bonded foreign debt long before it would have become due. The revenues for the present year have been anticipated to the extent of $529,649.03.

The estimated revenues accruing to the general fund for each of the years 1906 and 1907 from the present levy, such estimate being based upon last year's receipts, will be $2,971,157, or $5,942,314 for the two years.

The regular expenditures for the administration of the State government, including the maintenance of the several State institutions, and not including specific appropriations for such institutions, based upon the year just closed, will be $2,364,630 for each of the years 1906 and 1907, or $4,729,260 for the two years. This would leave a balance in the treasury to the credit of the general fund of $1,213,054, from which specific appropriations for the years 1906 and 1907 might be made were it not for the fact that the expenses of the present year will exceed the revenues, as heretofore shown, something like $463,000, which deficit must be supplied either by borrowing money or by anticipating the revenues for 1906. Deducting the deficit of $463,000 from the balance of $1,213,054, left in the treasury after paying the regular estimated expenses of the two years, we have a balance of $750,054 from which specific appropriations can be made, whereas the institutions already established seem to be actually in need of specific appropriations for the two years of $1,174,596, or $424,542 in excess of the money that will be available for that purpose.

In addition to the needs of the present State institutions, there is urgent need, as before suggested, for the construction of an additional hospital for the insane, and for which, if it be established, there will have to be appropriated not less than $500,000 for the two years. There is also a like need for the construction of an epileptic institute, for which not less than $150,000 should be appropriated.

If these two institutions are established and appropriations made as suggested, and we make the provision that the existing State institutions actually require and make good the deficiency for this year, it will necessitate specific appropriations for the two years aggregating $2,287,596, or $1,074,542 in excess of the estimated revenues available for that purpose within the two years.

WOULD USE PART OF SINKING FUND LEVY.

These facts make it apparent that we must either fail in our present responsibility to the institutions already established and refuse to construct either of the new hospitals suggested, or we must provide additional sources of income for the general fund. After much thoughtful consideration I am persuaded that we ought to adopt the last course, rather than the first, and I therefore recommend that the sinking fund tax rate be reduced to 1 cent; that the 2 cents taken off of that rate be transferred to the levy for the general fund and that the tax rate for the general fund be increased by an additional levy of 1½ cents on the $100. The 2-cent levy transferred from the sinking fund to the general fund will produce, approximately, $600,000 in two years, and the additional levy of 1½ cents will bring into the treasury substantially $450,000. These sums, together with the $1,213,054 remaining to the credit of the general fund after the payment of the regular expenses of the two years, will aggregate $2,263,054, or within $24,542 of the total expenses for the two years, with existing institutions properly cared for and with two new and much needed institutions substantially established and the present deficit made good. I make this recommendation with unfeigned reluctance, because of the great expenditures involved and of the increase of the State tax levy which such expenditures make imperative, but I have been able to devise no other way, as satisfactory, to meet the confessed institutional needs of the State. While we may have been debt paying at an unprecedented rate the needs of the State's institutions have been multiplying and can not longer be deferred. It will be better to meet these needs now frankly and boldly than to shirk our responsibility by refusing to recognize them and leaving the helpless and unfortunate wards of the State in poor houses and in jails, charges upon the respective counties where they live. A rich and prosperous people will respond generously to the one policy, but I am persuaded that they would be slow to forgive the adoption of the other. Nor will the increased burden long continue. The $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents added to the general levy may be removed in two years, and in six years the remaining 1 cent sinking fund levy may also be removed, for at the end of that period there will remain no bonded debt to be provided for or paid.

For these reasons I most earnestly recommend the adoption of the plan herein mentioned, and sincerely hope it will meet with your approval upon full consideration and debate. The deed, if done, will square itself with the years.

PRISON TRADE SCHOOLS AND STATE WORKHOUSES.

An act of the General Assembly, approved March 11, 1903, created a prison commission composed of the warden of the State prison, the general superintendent of the Indiana Reformatory, the secretary of the Board of State Charities, and of three members to be appointed by the Governor. Under that act the commission has been organized, and its members have given much time to the investigation of the questions referred to them, and after thoughtful consideration they have submitted certain conclusions to you in the form of a report, which I understand has been laid before you. That report should challenge your attention as a whole, but I respectfully urge upon your consideration two recommendations contained therein. The first is the suggestion that a convicted prisoner who is given a jail sentence is the prisoner of the State, and should be under direct State control in some institution of the State where he can be employed at useful labor, instead of being confined in jail and kept in idleness under county control.

A system of workhouses under State control, in which all male prisoners convicted of crime, which under existing law is made punishable by imprisonment in the county jail, shall be confined, is proposed. I can not now discuss the details of the report of the commission in this behalf, but I am impressed with the belief that the suggestion contains the practical basis of a much needed reform.

The second recommendation involves the abandonment of the contract labor system in the State Reformatory and the employment of the prisoners there in a school of letters, in trade schools and at labor on State account. The existing labor contracts at the Reformatory will expire in July, 1906, and, in my judgment, ought not to be renewed. Some employment for the prisoners of the institution must of necessity be provided, and it should be of a character that will affect in the slightest degree possible the laboring and producing classes of the State. The system of contract labor now in force compels free labor to compete with convict labor and forces manufacturers into competition with prison-made goods, and fixes and establishes prices of such articles in a damaging measure.

The employment of prison labor on such account, that is to say, in the production of articles to be sold by the State or used by the State in its various institutions, or by the political divisions thereof, has been demonstrated to be practical and of all methods least objectionable to free labor and production and most satisfactory to all the people. Such method of employment, together with trade schools and the school of letters recommended by the commission, is in harmony with the humane principles and reformatory methods already adopted and in use by the State in the care and treatment of the prisoners under its control. The labor contracts at the State prison do not expire until October, 1910. If the method recommended by the commission be adopted for the Reformatory by the present General Assembly its value will have been practically demonstrated before we are called upon to meet the question in the State prison. The recommendation represents the best thought of those most competent to advise upon this most important subject and deserves your highest consideration.

CONTINUANCE OF CODIFICATION COMMISSION ADVISED.

Pursuant to the provisions of an act of the General Assembly approved March 9, 1903, a commission was appointed in April of that year to prepare a compilation, revision and codification of the laws of the State concerning public, private and other corporations, and statutes relating to highways and drainage, and such other statute laws as such commission should deem proper.

The commission has prepared a report which is already before you, together with several bills embodying the results of its labors. Its report covers a wide field and includes a number of difficult and important subjects, such as cities and towns, drainage, proceedings in the exercise of the power of eminent domain, private corporations, highways, and the criminal code. The report and the bills accompanying it deserve the best thought of each of you. The varied and important subjects treated affect closely many interests of the people and the corporations of the State.

Taken as a whole, the work of the commission, as presented to you, constitutes the most important legislation likely to come before you. While each of the prepared bills should be scrutinized, analyzed and debated with care and critical intelligence, the skill, learning and ability of the members of the commission are so well known and their work has been done with such zeal and intelligence that I commend the results of their labors to you with full confidence that they can, in the main, safely be accepted.

The life of the commission expires by limitation of the law which created it, with the adjournment of the present General Assembly. There are still many important and difficult subjects affecting many vital interests that have not as yet been considered. Revision is greatly needed as to them. In fact, the work of the commission will not be complete, or the purpose of the law creating it obtained, if the labors of the commission are to end with your adjournment. A knowledge of this leads me to the conclusion that the life of the commission should be extended for a period of two years, to end with the adjournment of the next General Assembly.

The whole subject is of such imperative moment that I venture to express the hope that you will not fail to enact the several bills submitted after such amendment and alteration as upon full debate and consideration you may deem wise, and that you will not fail to continue the commission as suggested.

STATE SUPERVISION OF PRIVATE BANKS.

Sound banking institutions are absolutely essential to stable financial, commercial or industrial conditions. This is so true that years are required for a community to recover from the effects of a single bank failure. The losses occasioned by such failures are not confined to savings alone. These, of course, are swept away, but such failures are always attended with a betrayal of trust and of confidence that does far more to injure the business interests of the community and society in general than the direct money loss sustained can possibly accomplish. Men who have known each other for years and who have had full confidence in each other suddenly become doubtful and suspicious with a resultant disturbance of business and commercial affairs and the embarrassment of other perfectly solvent and safe institutions.

The number of private bank failures in this State within the last year constitutes irrefragable proof of the need of legislation which will give the State authority to inspect and supervise every private firm, partnership or institution engaged in any manner in the banking business. In some of the recent failures of private bankers an investigation of their affairs made after assignment has disclosed the most flagrant and criminal disregard of the rights of their depositors. In some instances the savings of patrons of the bank have been checked out by the proprietors within twenty-four hours after they were deposited, and by them converted to their own use. In one instance, at least, this was done to an extent of almost $300-000, and the fact of such malfeasance concealed and covered up for years. A trusting and confiding clientele was robbed daily, week after week, month after month and year after year, in the most reckless manner, the possibility of which is a reproach to the State.

The people whose earnings have been embezzled and squandered, together with every man engaged in honest private banking, of whom there are many in the State, rightly demand relief at the hands of their Representatives. The question should be taken up with considerate care, having due regard for the interests of both the private banker and the depositor.

No private individual, firm, corpartnership or institution of any kind should be permitted to use the work "bank" in connection with its business, or to receive the deposits of the people, or to engage in any manner in the business of banking, without first setting aside a cash sum as capital to be maintained unimpaired so long as such business is conducted. The sum required as capital I submit to your intelligent judgment, but it should be adequate in amount, taking into consideration the character of the community in which such bank is located.

There should also be an inhibition against the loaning of money, either directly or indirectly, to any person, firm, copartnership or corporation, either as principal or surety, beyond a fixed and reasonable sum, taking into consideration the amount of paid-up capital of each institution.

In connection with the above requirements the State should be given full power of inspection and supervision, through an officer to be appointed for that purpose, and such officer should be required to give bond and should be held liable civilly upon such bond and be subject to criminal prosecution for the neglect of his duty or for malfeasance. While these restrictions will not prevent bank failures, I am persuaded that they will go far, if enacted by you, toward minimizing their number and extent.

URGENT NEED OF STATE RAILROAD COMMISSION.

Railroads are public highways and the business of operating them is a public business. Their existence is due wholly to the fact that they are public utilities. When they cease to serve the public, the reason of their being ceases. Modern conditions make the "transportation tax" a most potential factor in the commerce of the country. It affects every product of the field, shop or mine and levies tribute on both producer and consumer. Up to the limit of fairness the tax can be justified; beyond that it can not. It is possible for freight rates to determine not only where business shall be done, but who shall do it. In the absence of legislation those who pay the tax have no voice whatever in determining what it shall be. The carrier arbitrarily determines that for itself. Having power to make freight rates, and freight rates being the controlling factor in determining where and by whom business shall be done, the carrier becomes the master, and the people it was created to serve its servants.

That the common law, the courts and their remedies are inadequate to afford any practical relief as between the shipper and the carrier, or even between carriers themselves, is now quite generally conceded.

That the competition of carriers, markets and waterways has ceased to be a sufficient safeguard against the evils that necessarily grow out of and accompany the country's vast transportation business is also a generally accepted truth.

Neither Congress nor the General Assembly of the State has time to investigate and fix transportation rates, and both are precluded by constitutional limitations from conferring legislative functions upon the courts.

Some impartial tribunal to act as arbiter to determine questions as to rates and collateral subjects, rather than the sellers of transportation, is, therefore, a modern necessity.

These considerations led some years since to the creation of a Federal commission by the Congress of the United States, upon whom both judicial and legislative power was attempted to be conferred—the judicial power to declare an existing rate to be unjust, and the legislative power to determine what the rate should be thereafter. The purpose of the statute has since been aborted by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States holding that the act gave no legislative power to the commission to fix rates, but conferred only judicial power to determine that a specific rate was unjust. For instance, under the decision of the court the commission may declare that a 20-cent rate was too high, but it has no power to say what a just rate is. The transportation company is left free to impose a 19-cent rate until it in turn may be declared unjust and set aside, and so on ad infinitum. The effect of the court's decision is to emasculate the statute and leave little of it worth preserving.

The power of Congress to confer upon a commission both judicial power to decide what is unjust and the legislative power to declare what is right, is not open to debate. That has often been judicially determined. And a like power is vested in the General Assembly of this State in regard to commerce within its own borders.

While the Congress of the United States has sole jurisdiction of all transportation questions relating to interstate commerce, the State is sovereign in its jurisdiction of all such questions in so far as they relate to State commerce. The question is a live one, and is of great importance not only to the shippers and the transportation companies of the State carrying on interstate commerce, but to every producer and every consumer in the State.

The question is a difficult one and deserves our most considerate care and intelligent judgment. Its consideration should be entered upon dispassionately and should be continued without prejudice against or a desire to punish the transportation companies of the State. On the other hand, the wealth and power of such companies ought not to be permitted to exclude the people or the needs of the shippers, the producers or the consumers of the State from our consideration. As between the two we should hold an even balance.

Like considerations have led to the establishment of railroad commissions in thirty-one States of the Union, and in twenty of these the commissions are given power to establish rates.

The same considerations that led to the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission by the Federal Congress and to the establishment of commissions in other States, now make it imperative that a State railroad commission be created by this General Assembly.

POWER TO FIX RATES ESSENTIAL.

Such commission should have power, not only to decide that an existing rate is illegal and unjust, but it should also be given authority to determine what would be a legal and just rate and to declare the same. And the rate, when so fixed by the commission, should stand until reversed by the judgment of some appellate tribunal to which the right of appeal should be provided for.

Without the power to fix rates, the commission would not be effective. If the evils sought to be reformed are to be reached, the power mentioned is essential. The law should also be so framed as to prevent unreasonable and inexcusable delay in the transportation of freight or cars, or unjust discrimination in rates, either by way of rebates or otherwise. It should also prohibit discrimination against localities in furnishing cars and should have some provision relative to the transfer and switching of cars. Bills of lading, releasing or limiting the common law liability of carriers with reference to property covered by such bills while in the custody of such carrier, should be prohibited, and the commission should have power to hear and determine differences affecting any of the matters suggested, whether arising between shippers and carriers, or between the carriers themselves.

The recent and growing desire for national ownership of railroads is due very largely to the unjust rates, rebates, discriminations and arbitrary conduct and management of the great transportation companies in their relations with the public. I am sure such a policy is a mistaken one. And I am equally sure that the enactment of a just and fair law, creating a railroad commission and clothing it with power to correct the abuses that have grown up in connection with the transportation business of the country, ought not to be opposed by the managements of such corporations. Indeed, they ought to consent to the enactment of a law which shall provide for fair and just supervision through a properly constituted commission. By consenting to the correction of such abuses they will do much to stay, and perhaps to avert, the more radical sentiment of the country just now crystallizing in the demand for public ownership.

GROWING RESPECT FOR THE LAW.

There are multiplying signs throughout the country of a growing respect and regard for the sacredness of the law that are reassuring and hopeful, and nowhere is this sentiment more pronounced than in Indiana. While lawless assemblages, riots and lynchings have decreased within the last year in all the States taken as a whole, there have been none in Indiana. It is my most sincere wish and hope that this condition may continue; that respect for the law may increase, and that the sentiment for its enforcement may intensify throughout the borders of the State until all shall recognize its majesty and give willing obedience to its mandates. The law is freedom's only safeguard; without it there can be no such thing as liberty.

Whoever wilfully disregards or violates it pulls down the pillars of his own house and sins against his country, its institutions and his kind. And this applies with equal force to all men—to the rich and the poor, to the great and the small, to the capitalist and the laborer, to the public official and to the private citizen. Before the law all these must be equal, and they shall be so considered by this administration. The law shall be enforced without fear or favor, in the cities, in the country and everywhere, in so far as the adminsitration can control its enforcement either by precept, example or mandate.

FREE PASS EVIL—A FORM OF BRIBERY.

A custom of giving and receiving free transportation has grown up, on the part of transportation companies on the one side, and of public officials on the other. These favors are not bestowed upon the same men in private life, but are extended to them only upon their elevation to public place. They are given as complimentary, and are bestowed quite generally, with here and there an exception, upon the officers of every department of the government, municipal, county or State. Indeed, it is not unusual for officers whose duties do or may affect the interests of such companies, as against the interests of the public, to accept not only free transportation from the railroad companies, but free telegraph and express franks from telegraph and express companies as well.

It is said in defense of the custom that such favors are mere gratuities or courtesies, the acceptance of which creates no obligation to the donor on the part of the officer receiving them, and that many honest men accept these favors and are not improperly influenced by them. It scarcely can be urged, however, that such favors are either given or accepted from a sense of civic pride or righteousness. The fact that some men receive them without any recognition of the favor implied by such acceptance and are not improperly influenced thereby is an imperfect defense, for it is of itself a confession that some men who accept them are improperly influenced. There are no more practical business men in the world that the managers of the great railway, telegraph and express corporations of the country, and these men would not annually give away to public officials in Indiana thousands of dollars in value of such favors if the net aggregate results of the custom were not beneficial to them. If the resultant benefits were not worth more to them than the value of the transportation or franks given, none would be issued.

The fact that the custom is continued year after year is strong evidence that it pays to continue it. No lawyer would permit a juror to remain upon a jury where high interests of his client were involved if he knew such juror had received and accepted substantial favors from the adverse party to the suit, and he would most certainly insist upon the discharge of such juror from the panel if he were to receive and accept such favors after he had been sworn as a juror in the cause. If, in any such case, the verdict went against his client, and after verdict he learned the fact of the juror's acceptance of such favors from the hands of the successful party to the suit, there is no lawyer who would hesitate to make such fact the basis of a motion for a new trial, and there is no court that would not grant the motion upon proof of the charge made. The plea on the part of the offending litigant and juror that the favors given and received were mere courtesies and did not influence the verdict would be neither considered nor received as a sufficient answer.

The officials of the various municipalities and counties, and the officials of the State, constitute the jury before whom are brought countless grave and important interests, upon the one side of which are the corporations and upon the other side of which are the people. For this reason such officials have no right to use or accept substantial and continuing favors from the corporations during their terms of service. Where the whole jury accepts them there need be no surprise if the people complain that the jury is packed against their interests. Right or wrong, ill or well-founded, such a feeling is an unwholesome one. The simple truth is that the custom is wrong and indefensible and often leads to abuses little short of scandal. Reduced to their last analysis, such favors are petty bribes. The fact that they sometimes fall short of their purpose is not a sufficient answer. The tendency of the custom is to make men—not all men by any means, but some men—servile to those from whom they are received. An end should be put to the custom. The abuse of free transportation and free franking privileges should stop.

The time to reform is now. In recognition of the plainest principles of right, in common honesty, in answer to the people's just demand and out of protection to themselves, public officials should discontinue the use or acceptance of such favors. I submit for your consideration the enactment of a statute that will prohibit the giving of free transportation or of the franking privilege to any official, municipal, county or State, by any person or corporation, or the acceptance of any such favor by any such officer, either directly or indirectly, under such penalties as shall insure its observance. The inhibition should also include telegraph and express company franks. Such an act will purify and strengthen the public service and, in my judgment, will meet with the hearty approval of the people of the State.

LOBBYISTS NOT SAFE COUNSELORS.

The character of the legislation coming before you for your consideration is such as to bring to your respective chambers the representatives of many great corporations. It is right that they should be heard, but it is wrong that they should exclude from your consideration the varied and important interests of the public or the great masses of the people who, of necessity, can not have paid agents to voice their interest to you. All lobbyists are not corrupt, and it may be that they sometimes perform useful public service, but the paid agent of any special interest is not, as a rule, a safe counselor. He is wont to look only to the interests of those who employ him, and in his zeal to "make good" with them, to forget the greater and more important interests of the public.

Corporate interests of late have become far too powerful in legislative assemblies. This is true in most of the States, and it has been true in ours. There have been instances in the not far distant past when the paid agents of such corporations invaded the sacred precincts of the General Assembly, and with unseemly and arrogant assumption took their place upon the floor during a session of that body, and on a roll call upon a measure involving matters of the gravest concern to the people, sought to dictate the votes of some of the members upon such measure. And, yet, they were not removed nor denied the privileges of the floor, but continued to enjoy them until the end of the session. It is difficult for the people to believe that such conduct would have been tolerated, much less condoned, by men who owed no favors to the corporations represented by the offending agents. You can end the reign of the lobbyist in Indiana if you will, and I venture to express the hope that you will do so.

NICHOLSON LAW AMENDMENT.

The act of the General Assembly of 1895, commonly known as the "Nicholson law," was enacted in answer to the demands of an aroused and enlightened and righteous public sentiment. In the main it is a good law and ought to be permitted to stand. It provides for, and legalizes the right of petition on the part of the legal voters of any township, or of any ward in any city, against the granting of license to any applicant to retail intoxicating liquors in such township or ward, and that right ought not to be given up or surrendered.

Rules of practice under the present statute and many questions of law relating to its enforcement have been settled by the courts, and are now established and well understood. The several sections of the act have been so frequently interpreted by the courts that the law, taken in connection with the decisions touching its meaning, constitutes a system for the control of the retail liquor traffic of such importance that the friends of law and order ought to stand by it as it is, rather than consent to its repal, or to the substitution of any new or untried system. An entirely new act would require years of vexatious litigation before a judicial interpretation of it could be had, or its meaning be established or understood.

There is, however, a grave defect in the present statute. It can be remedied by an amendment, which will add greatly to its effectiveness, without impairing its value or destroying the decisions of the courts which have upheld it.

The aroused, enlightened and righteous public sentiment which made essential the enactment of the law ten years ago, now makes imperative its amendment. That sentiment is today stronger, more enlightened and more powerful than ever, and deserves quick and satisfying response at our hands.

The defect to which I direct your attention is found in Section 9 of said act. This section grants to a majority of the legal voters of any township, or of any ward in any city, the right to remonstrate in writing against the granting of a license to any applicant for license to sell in any such township or ward, and provides that after the filing of such remonstrance, it shall be unlawful for the Board of County Commissioners to grant a license to such applicant during a period of two years from the date of the filing of such remonstrance. By this statute the right of remonstrance is vested in the majority of the legal voters of any township, or of any ward in any city. But the right is limited in its application to a remonstrance against the individual seeking the license and not against the trade, whereas the business of retailing liquors is the evil sought to be excluded or prohibited by the people who remonstrate against an applicant. Their objections are not personal, nor are they directed against the applicant as an individual. They are based upon moral, economic and public grounds, which affect the order, peace and repose of society within such territory, and are against the traffic itself. To the people within such territory the prohibition of the business is everything, and the individual applying for license is nothing.

PRESENT NEED OF REPEATED REMONSTRANCES.

When the statute under consideration was enacted, the boards of commissioners of the several counties in the State could hold regular sessions of their respective boards but once in three months. An application for license could be filed only at a regular session. Thus applications were limited to the four quarterly sessions of such boards held within each year. This brought the question of remonstrance before the people but four times a year. Since the enactment of the "Nicholson law" there has been a change in the statute relative to the time of the regular meetings of boards of commissioners. Such boards are now required to meet in regular session once each month. The effect of this change in the law has been to make it possible for an application from any township, or any ward in any city, to be filed every thirty days. This brings the question of remonstrance before the people twelve times a year. Those who desire to engage in the retail liquor traffic make use of the present provision of the law, to the annoyance and harassment of the people of many townships and city wards. In some of them "eternal vigilance" has ceased to be the price of liberty and has become ineffectual to preserve the rights of the people. A remonstrance carrying the necessary majority to prevent the granting of license is filed today and the license is defeated, but tomorrow some other applicant, in the pay of the wholesale liquor interests, gives notice of his intention to apply at the next session of the Board of Commissioners, which session is only four weeks away.

If a new remonstrance is filed and the second applicant is defeated, the same performance is enacted by some one else, and so on, month after month and year after year, until worn out and discouraged by constant effort and expensive litigation that never ends, and from which there is no respite, the people are defeated and the will of the majority is overborne and trampled upon by the agents of a traffic, the unholiness of which all men, save those engaged in it, confess.

This condition is intolerable, and ought not to continue beyond the day of your adjournment and the publication of your enactments. It destroys the peace and disturbs the order and tranquility of society, creates constant and unceasing turmoil among the people, subjects them to frequent trials and constant expense, and finally ends in the defeat of their often and solemnly expressed will.

The statute should be so amended that the remonstrance provided for shall be against the granting of license to any and all applicants, and where successful, that it shall be unlawful thereafter for the Board of Commissioners to grant a license to any applicant therefor during a period of two years from the filing of said remonstrance. Such a remonstrance will strike directly at the traffic, and not at the individual. If successful, it will exclude the business from a township or ward for a period of two years, and give peace, order and repose to the community.

PROPOSED CHANGE WOULD NOT IMPAIR SYSTEM.

It will give the right of petition a practical and an efficient application, and will go far toward satisfying public sentiment upon this most difficult question. Such an amendment will not impair the system created by the Nicholson law for the control of the traffic, nor the judicial interpretation it has received. On the contrary, it will strengthen and give vitality to its provisions. The precedents already established will remain precedents still.

I have given much thought and consideration to this subject, because of its importance, because I have been and am conscious that many of my fellow-citizens, whose judgment and good will I greatly value, have been and are profoundly interested in the question, and have been and are giving it their most sincere attention, and because many members of your respective bodies have been and are considering remedial legislation affecting the existing statute.

Public sentiment relative to such legislation never was as strong nor as purposeful as it is today, and I would, if I could, direct that sentiment along safe and practical lines. I therefore appeal to you, and to the great body of the people of Indiana, without regard to party affiliations, to join in an effort to secure the amendment suggested. The question is not a party question. It is above and beyond all parties and is as broad as our common citizenship, as deep as our free institutions, and as abiding as righteousness itself.

IN CONCLUSION.

This address has already grown too long, but there are so many important questions upon which I have not touched that I close with reluctance. I do not forget that all my predecessors in the high office to which I am called, were capable and efficient executives; that many of them were much more than that, and that one, at least, was supremely great, or that I must in some degree measure up to them. I am conscious that in the discharge of the grave duties that await me I can not stand alone and I shall not try to do so. I therefore turn to you and to the people of the State for assistance and support. To you and to them I shall often come, and were it not for the confidence I have of your forbearance and of their partiality, I should have little hope of succeeding amid the multiplying and perplexing difficulties of the coming four years.

But your strength shall be my strength, and their will shall be my will. I believe in you, and they, I am sure, will not go far astray nor long remain away from the path of truth. Both you and I can safely trust them. They did not fail either Lincoln or Morton in their day, and they will not fail us in ours if we do but prove worthy and fitly bear their high commission.

Humbled and chastened by the responsibilities of this hour, by those yet to come, and by the memory of the great men who have preceded me; sustained by an abiding faith in my fellow-citizens and by an unfaltering trust in the goodness, the mercy and the guiding care and wisdom of Almighty God, I now assume the office of chief executive of this, to me, the dearest State in the great republic.

ADDRESS

OF

NEWTON W. GILBERT

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

TO THE

Senate of the Sixty-fourth General Assembly

INDIANAPOLIS:
WM. B. BURFORD, CONTRACTOR FOR STATE PRINTING AND BINDING.
1905.

Address of Lieutenant-Governor Gilbert to the Senate.

Gentlemen of the Indiana Senate:

In laying down the gavel which was placed in my hand four years ago, I can not forego the desire to say a few words which will be faintly expressive of the regret I feel in the severance of our former official relations. From that day until the present there has been no moment while we were in this chamber that was not fraught with pleasure for me. The minority and majority alike have uniformly sought to lighten the burdens of my office and to assist me in the discharge of its duties. We have labored together earnestly, striving to represent aright the magnificent constituency which had honored us.

With due regard for the importance of the executive branch of our State government, we should ever keep in mind that except for the legislative branch which enacts the laws and grants or refuses appropriations, even the chief executive himself will be hampered and rendered, in a large degree, impotent. May we not feel, therefore, that some considerable share of the praise which is accorded the administration just closing and the retiring Governor, may be appropriated by the legislatures, which made possible the payment of State debt, piled up in days that are past by prodigal hands, and provided for the improvement and enlargement of State institutions.

We are at the high tide of prosperity in Indiana. Into the homes of her people, in country, city and hamlet, have come comforts and opportunities which until recent days were unknown. Legislation and education have combined to uplift our people and multiply their opportunities. In unprecedented measure they have indorsed the administration of our present distinguished Governor, and have shown their belief that he who will be our Governor one hour from now, will steadfastly follow in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors. From a boy in the then swamps of northwestern Indiana to the Governor's chair in this magnificent commonwealth is a long and difficult journey. He who makes it without faltering by the wayside has demonstrated his strength, his energy, his devotion, his courage, and the people have done well in confiding in the fullest measure in the Hon. J. Frank Hanly.

MAJORITY AND RESPONSIBILITY.

It is not well to forget, however, that in equal measure confidence has been reposed in this Legislature. The majority is larger than ever before. Its responsibility is proportionately greater. Grave questions confront you. In some cases you tread upon unknown ground. It is not always easy to discriminate between what seems to be good for the few and that which is good for all. It is all the people that a General Assembly should represent. But the people's faith will be upheld. Never before have all the people had as high ideals as to-day. In Washington there is a man—a common man—who, by his simple life, his unswerving integrity, his sublime courage, has given to all the people of this country higher ideals of public service. He has sought out offenders in high places. He has demanded and will secure the correction of evils practiced by the greatest corporations of modern times, in the same certain manner that he seeks to protect the poor woman from the brutal treatment of the more powerful. He has made America the proudest nation of the earth, respected by all. And, withal, he has consistently taught from day to day the doctrine of love of fellow as well as love of God. It can not be otherwise. All whose duty it is to serve the people will be strengthened in resolve and uplifted in purpose by the magnificent example of our great President, Theodore Roosevelt.

HANDING OVER THE GAVEL.

The time has come when I shall relinquish this gavel, in this day not an emblem of authority, but rather an emblem of orderly procedure. Others will wield it in the days to come with vastly more ability and with better results, but none with a more earnest purpose to use it only for the right. When the next generation sends its representatives to this chamber, and our public records are examined in the light of that day, may we not hope that, while our shortsightedness may be disclosed, there will be none to assail our integrity of purpose.

And now, as I say farewell to you who have made the association of years so pleasant, let me say that one feature of the program gives me profound pleasure. It is to hand this gavel, and all that accompanies it, to my distinguished successor. His life, public and private, has been an open book in Indiana. He brings to the discharge of his duties the best education, the highest culture, the loftiest purpose. The interests of the people are not only safe in his hands, but more, they will be promoted in the highest degree. I predict for him a distinguished career.

Again thanking you for your generous consideration during the last four years, extending to each and all my kindest wishes for the future, and praying that upon this General Assembly may be showered the richest blessings of Almighty God, I have the distinguished honor of presenting to you the Lieutenant-Governor-elect of the State of Indiana, the Hon. Hugh T. Miller, who will arise and assume the oath of his office.

ADDRESS

OF

HUGH TH. MILLER

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

TO THE

Senate of the Sixty-fourth General Assembly

INDIANAPOLIS:
WM. B. BURFORD, CONTRACTOR FOR STATE PRINTING AND BINDING.
1905.

Address of Lieutenant-Governor Miller to the Senate.

Gentlemen of the Senate:

Along with the handicap of succeeding immediately one of the most capable and popular presiding officers your body has ever had, there falls to me the added misfortune of having to send today my halting words in hopeless pursuit of Governor Gilbert's brilliant and ready wit. And with this comes the diffidence one feels whose brief legislative life has been spent in the hall on the other side of the Capitol.

Still, in that short time two years ago I came to know well so many of you, and since then acquaintance and friendship have so broadened and deepened that now my only hope is that you may feel as much at home with me here as I do when I look into your faces. You will pardon me, I know, gentlemen of the House and ladies and gentlemen, this personal word or two with the members of the Senate.

The Lieutenant Governor has so rarely in our scheme of government either voice or vote, that it seems almost presumptuous for him to address himself to questions that may call for legislative action. Any yet mere lack of initiative should by no means imply lack of interest. Indeed, it will be impossible to serve the people well if matters that touch their welfare are not considered constantly and closely.

The legislative session just begun, ladies and gentlemen, with all due allowance made for natural disposition to magnify the present, is one in which many questions of capital importance must be settled in one way or another. We need, therefore, to display unusual industry, as well as increased wisdom, and in the successful or attempted solution of these problems we must cut loose as far as possible from partisan prejudice and local self-interest, remembering that we represent not only the districts and parties which chose us, but all the people of this, the best of all the States.

And when we act for the people, their interest in its wide sense rises high above that of the individual, the corporation, the profession, the class. Individual liberty and corporate enterprise have played a necessary part in successful social and economic development, and they should always be given ample opportunity. But their powers must not be perverted to selfish ends, in which the common good has no place, and powers not granted must not be assumed or usurped.

Unfortunately not every one who speaks long and loud for the people—the common people—is their real friend and benefactor. The demagogy which is forever setting forth real or fancied popular ills, without serious or practical purpose of alleviation, seeking mere partisan advantage in a certain line of action or inaction, is quite as worthy of condemnation as is the selfishness which uses threatened or imaginary radical action as excuse for permitting existing abuses to entrench themselves or new ones to find lodgment.

From one quarter we may expect relief from this session's avalanche of proposed legislation. The six bills so carefully prepared by the Codification Commission will no doubt forestall, and should precede in the work of ten of our important committees all measures, save a few, like those dealing with capital punishment, a railroad commission or private banks, which, while related by title to the work of the commission, are new subjects and were not deemed by members of the commission to be open to them under the terms of the act prescribing their duties.

Many other problems confront us, however—problems which the work of the Codification Commission does not involve. Time would fail me to discuss these problems, which were set out by Governor Durbin a few days since in striking form, and it is superfluous to enumerate.

Each of you realizes that we must arrange to care for our dependent and defective citizens in the most humane, the most economical and the most prompt manner possible. There is no question among us that corruption in general elections and this and other evils in primary elections should be eliminated as far as legislation can drive them out. The people are expecting us to take up the problem of the liquor traffic, of divorce.

By no means the least of our tasks is that of adjusting the State's finances. Not that we are burdened with heavy debts, not that our treasury is empty, not that our tax rate is excessive. But the appropriations which our institutions, existing and proposed, are asking exceed by far our revenues available for this purpose. In the last few weeks I have visited each of the State's institutions, and while, almost without exception, the management is efficient and economical in every respect, the equipment is in many cases inadequate, out of date or defective. It is a matter that calls for close study, this determination of most crying needs, this revision of estimates, and our legislative committee of visitation finds this year's problems the most difficult of the series.

As we enter upon this season of hard work we welcome aid that may make it less difficult, but we must have this aid given in certain ways and not in others.

The distinguished gentleman who in another hour will cease to be Governor of our State, and that other distinguished gentleman whom a few days since our colleagues of the House chose as their Speaker, have already spoken of the annoyance and danger to be found in the legislative lobby. There is lobbying and lobbying, ladies and gentlemen. The popular conception of the work of a minister who labors to defeat the passage of a bill which in his opinion undermines public morals, may not be lobbying, but this it is, strictly speaking. Such lobbying, however, is public service. We have no quarrel with the lobbyist who seeks to convince with statistics, testimony and argument in the lobby or committee room, even though the selfish element be not wholly absent from his efforts. But we do quarrel with the lobbying that violates rules and proprieties to invade the floor of the Senate and of the House, that seeks by good fellowship, personal favors, champagne and cold cash to reach ends worthy or unworthy. Let us have done with it.

I have this day in your presence, ladies and gentlemen, sworn to uphold those principles and precepts upon which free government in our country and our State is based. I pledge you my word again that this shall be my first, my last, my constant care.

BIENNIAL MESSAGE

OF

WINFIELD T. DURBIN

GOVERNOR

TO THE
SIXTY-FOURTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY

INDIANAPOLIS:
Wm. B. Burford, Contractor for State Printing and Binding, 1905.

Biennial Message of Governor Winfield T. Durbin to the Sixty-fourth General Assembly, 1905.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

It is an unfortunate provision of our constitution which plunges a Governor on the first day of his administration, and in a condition of comparative unpreparedness, into a legislative session, and terminates his term in the opening days of a General Assembly to which his counsel, given in the light of lengthened experience and increased information, would be of greater value than that offered at any earlier period of an administration. To present suggestions as Governor to a General Assembly which will, practically in its entirety, belong to a subsequent administration would seem an anomalous procedure, except for the precedent which makes this duty incumbent upon the retiring executive, and the circumstances which have rendered it impossible for him to transmit a general message to more than one preceding General Assembly.

The Sixty-fourth General Assembly meets amid circumstances the most propitious. For a considerable period of years the State has been in the full enjoyment of a large measure of material prosperity. The past decade has been characterized in Indiana by an unparalleled growth in industrial interests; by a vast increase in farm values; by unprecedented development of means of transportation and intercommunication; by the discovery and exploitation of natural resources rivaling in extent and surpassing in variety those of any other State in the Union. The progress of the State has not been confined to material development; we have kept pace with the most advanced among our American commonwealths in almost every phase of activity which has claimed the attention of states in the light of a broadening conception of the State's duty toward its citizenship. Our public service has been free from scandal; we have permanently established a precedent, more powerful than any statute, that the commonwealth's business demands and must receive the same intelligent and jealous care that the honest and prudent business man gives to his private concerns or to the trusts which others have imposed upon him. We have fostered education, we have amplified the beneficence of our benevolent and charitable institutions, not simply by adding brick and mortar to them, but by infusing into their administration more of the spirit of responsibility to the people and to the State's unfortunate wards. We may safely at this time throw open the doors of every Indiana State institution to the broad light of day without fear that scrutiny will bring reproach to centers of responsibility. This condition of affairs has not been attained without unceasing effort; it has not been, it may not be maintained without continual care; good government does not create itself. But it is to the glory of our people that they demand and secure clean, wholesome, business-like administration of public affairs, and that the executive official who seeks to place and maintain the public service upon a high level, may know that the people will ultimately understand and appreciate the effort, whatever amount of criticism may come from those who, prompted by a variety of motives, oppose responsible authority in the development of plans for betterment. Without claiming in the creation of such a condition more than a humble share of credit, I will say with a full knowledge of what this statement implies that in the administration of her public affairs, Indiana has, during the past decade, combined honesty and economy with efficiency and humanitarianism in a degree unsurpassed by any other State of the Union. And if there is need for justification in such a course more than the pleasure and pride which comes with duty well performed, there ought to be significance and admonition to the party in power in the fact that this is the sixth successive Legislature in which that party has been predominant, and this in a State in which so long a continuous tenure is a standing denial of the usual order of things.

And there is admonition, too, in the fact that more and more the people of this country are demanding of their servants in authority a strict accounting of their stewardship. This is a government of political parties, and in a democracy they offer the only available method of responsible government, but happily a party name is ceasing to be a sufficient cloak for official rascality or incapacity. In the recent elections the gaps which yawn between the State and national results in a half dozen northern commonwealths where public opinion is active and predominant, show that American citizenship is rising to a better appreciation of its own rights and responsibilities. The best politics in public administration is the absence of politics as a controlling motive; the best politics in legislation is patriotic devotion on the part of the legislator to our whole citizenship, without regard to party. The time ought to come when there is no necessity in our General Assembly, which has before it for consideration practically no questions of national policy, for a division into the majority and minority side, and when the only line of demarcation drawn should be the self-created boundary between those who seek unselfishly to serve the public weal and those whose purpose in public life is the furtherance of ends inconsistent with the general good.

We may not safely be content with what has been accomplished, for our responsibility, your responsibility, is to the future, with its increasing demands upon the conscience and the intelligence of those who represent the people in places of authority. In a civilization developing so rapidly as is our own, passivity is comparative reaction; standing still is retrogression. Particularly on broad and elemental questions of government, our people are thinking with an intensity that begets swift progress, and the legislative body which depends too much upon precedent will find itself lagging behind the general advance of public sentiment.

Upon no Indiana General Assembly gathered in many years has there rested so heavy a burden of responsibility as that which devolves upon you. Conditions are such as to demand during the present session larger provision for the increasing number of our defectives and dependents. The work of the Codification Commission, involving a revision of a considerable portion of our entire statute law, in itself presents sufficient subject for deliberation to occupy the entire session, and beyond this, two or three important questions, moral as well as political in their nature, and affecting vitally the future of our commonwealth, press themselves upon your honorable bodies for attention.

THE PROTECTION OF THE FRANCHISE.

Foremost among these I place the preservation of the elective franchise from pollution. I believe that I speak for the vast majority of the people of this State when I say that the time has come for the application of drastic remedial measures to the plague of corruption which is fastening itself upon our politics to an extent appalling to those who look forward to the ultimate in the sort of progress that has been made along these lines in recent years. We have in Indiana advanced legislation for the protection of the purity of the ballot, but the statistics of political debauchery in this State for the year 1904, if it were possible to present them, would be nothing short of astounding. And in this the Indiana situation is not peculiar. In intelligence, in wealth, in morality, her citizenship averages well with that of any other State in the Union, though there may be an unusual degreee of activity in our political contests, which in itself is healthful. But I am informed by unquestioned authority that in a single county of this State casting in 1902 a total vote of little more than five thousand there were in the last campaign nearly one thousand two hundred voters regularly listed as purchasable, and that fifteen thousand dollars raised by assessment from candidates and otherwise were spent by the contending political parties in the effort to control that county. This county is recognized as one of the plague spots of the State from the standpoint of political debauchery, but the situation there is rivaled in other counties, and wherever it exists it represents only the goal, and this not the ultimate goal, toward which every community in this State will trend unless remedial legislation be effected. The striking fact about political corruption is that it is as much a communicable plague as leprosy; that every year, in any community where the vote-buying system has become prevalent, there is a growth in the number of those who are ready to make merchandise of the suffrage. Within the most recent years there is appearing in connection with this evil a phenomenon vastly more significant than the sale of votes by ignorant and vicious persons inherently lacking in self-respect and tempted to the sale of the franchise by poverty—and this is the astounding disposition manifested by many men fairly prosperous to look upon a vote as a legitimate object of barter and sale. Instances have been brought to my attention during the last few weeks where in contests for the office of township trustee, votes have commanded as high as twenty-five or thirty dollars each, and where citizens of substance have prostituted their honor for that price.

It is unnecessary in this presence to portray the results which inevitably must follow the adoption of a let-alone policy to this menacing condition of affairs. The prostitution of the franchise implies the pollution of the very fountain head of republican government. To palter with mere questions of expediency while a menace of this sort is imminent is like repairing a window while the whole house is on fire. Our present need is legislation framed in the light of a clearer conception of the real enormity of the offense involved in the purchase or sale of a vote, and of the fearful consequences which must follow an extension of the system of suffrage-corruption toward dominance in our elections.

The evils of this system do not cease with the loss of honor involved in the act of the individual who sells his vote. It makes necessary the creation of large campaign funds often collected from special interests which expect the payment at public expense of far more than value received by the party succeeding to power. It makes necessary an assessment of candidates for local office so heavy that no poor man unwilling to mortgage himself to those who expect to use him, or to seek recompense by imposition upon the public, may aspire to public position. The avenue to office through primaries and elections, is coming to be a road that smells to heaven, and the class of men most needed in public position, unwilling to undergo the exactions and annoyances often involved in the candidacy for office, is ceasing to be in evidence in practical politics. The system is rapidly increasing the power of money, not only in elections, but with those chosen to places of responsibility at the polls, and with no interruption of the current which has now set in, we may reasonably look forward to the time when Indiana has fallen from her present high estate, and her public affairs are within the control of plundering agents of conspiracy against the public good.

Our present statute against the crime of suffrage prostitution is nothing short of farcical. It provides for the temporary disfranchisement of any person selling his vote. It places no penalty on the vote buyer, on the theory that to impose punishment upon both parties to the transaction would make conviction impossible. Accepting this theory, punishment should be prescribed for the vote buyer and not the vote seller. The law against seduction does not punish the person seduced, but visits a penalty upon the guilty plotter against virtue. The fact that men who consider themselves and are considered by their neighbors respectable and law-abiding citizens are swept into the vortex of corruption every two years during the excitement of a struggle for supremacy should not deter the Legislature from defining the purchase of a vote in a primary convention or an election as a felony, punishable on conviction by imprisonment in a penal institution, relieving the vote-seller of liability and offering such a reward for successful prosecutions that the dangers of the system will become so great that it will cease to command the services of anyone who values either his freedom or his good name. It may be argued that such a law would invite blackmail, but I venture the assertion that it will result in the blackmailing of no one who does not invite the process by some overt act.

The use of the voting machine has proven a satisfactory innovation in several counties of the State, not only as a measure of economy and expedition, but as a means of further protecting the secrecy of the ballot, which by various devices is being violated under our present system. I believe the General Assembly would do well to give consideration to the advisability of requiring the gradual introduction of voting machines in all the counties of the State.

THE SALOON QUESTION.

The past two years have witnessed a great awakening among the people of our State to the dangers of the saloon as a social and political factor. There is a general belief that the State has failed to hold the retail liquor traffic to an accountability sufficiently strict. More and more as I have looked into the personnel of the unfortunates who crowd our penal and charitable institutions I am impressed with the large part sustained by the liquor traffic in recruiting the poor-house, the insane hospital, the jail and the penitentiary. The evil of liquor drinking is as old as civilization, and

I am not sufficiently impractical to believe that it may be eradicated by any arbitrary act of legislation, but that the State has not only the power, but is burdened with the duty of so regulating the traffic which it legalizes as to cause the minimum of injury to the public weal, there can be no doubt among reasonable men. We have upon the statute books of Indiana a liquor law that is not unreasonable, but without failing to note the fact that there are many men engaged in the liquor traffic who are ready and willing to abide by the law as it exists, my own experience leads me to the statement that the general tendency of the retail traffic is in opposition to its enforcement. Thus the saloon becomes an example of law breaking in almost every community, and the object lesson is offered to many of those who are ready pupils in crime. The saloon thereby becomes in thousands of instances an institution from which are quickly graduated those whose names crowd the dockets of our criminal courts. Partly this condition of affairs is due to new conditions prevailing in the liquor business. Formerly the retail liquor dealer was in nearly every case independently engaged in the business; later, owing to the process of centralization common to all lines of trade and industry, the dealer has become in many, if not in most cases, a mere agent of corporations engaged in the manufacture and sale of liquor. The result has been a lowering of the morale of the retail traffic in a general way. There seems to be no special reason why the saloon, being a legalized institution, should not be carried on as any other business is conducted, in conformity with the laws of the State and the ordinances of the corporation within which it is located. The fact that it will not do so, and that there does not seem to be sufficient strength in the arm of the law to compel it to do so, is responsible in large part for the rapid rise of a sentiment which has a significance that ought not to be lost upon those engaged in the liquor traffic. The saloon has not hesitated, however, to inject itself with increasing aggressiveness into political affairs, and the growing participation of the saloon and the evident results of this activity in primaries and elections is a feature of our politics which challenges attention.

The growing disposition of many of those engaged in the retail liquor traffic to place the saloon in the attitude of a law breaker and a center of vice and crime may be corrected to a large degree at least by making the saloon keeper more directly responsible to the public sentiment of his community. I suggest the advisability of placing the onus of securing a petition for the granting of a license bearing the names of a majority of the legal voters of a ward or township upon the applicant for license, and that authority be vested in each circuit court to revoke the license of any saloon within its jurisdiction whenever it is made to appear that the conduct of such saloon is contrary to law and a menace to the peace and order of the community.

THE DIVORCE QUESTION.

The statistics of our courts, showing that in large and increasing number persons are seeking the dissolution of the obligations of marriage, are a source of alarm to those who realize that the home is the institution which lies at the basis of any civilization worthy of the name. The increasing carelessness with which these obligations are assumed and thrown aside may well be a cause of anxiety to those who have at heart the future welfare of society. Sometime ago I entered into correspondence upon this question with a large number of the judges of our courts with a view to arriving at some conclusion with reference to the character of legislation desirable to meet this condition, but the result has been to develop only a confusion of counsel.

It is evident, however, that divorce is a symptom of the disease which legislation should be framed to reach, if possible, and not the disease itself. We may well doubt whether society is served by compelling persons to live in wedlock and to rear families under the conditions which are usually brought to light in an action for divorce. The repeal of all our divorce laws would cure the evil from a statistical standpoint, but in few cases would it alleviate the deplorable conditions of which these statistics are indicative. The contractors of hasty, improvident and imprudent marriages would not be deterred from their error and folly by more rigorous restriction of divorce, since the contracting of such marriages in itself implies a carelessness of consequences. I suggest, however, the advisability of a law prohibiting the remarriage of divorced persons for a reasonable period after the entering of the decree, and the substitution of separate maintenance for divorce in many cases for which the law now provides divorce.

There is a point beyond which the prevention of either marriage or of its dissolution is promotive of immorality rather than of healthful domestic conditions. The State should exercise the right, however, of preventing the contracting of marriage between persons manifestly unfit to assume its obligations, and particularly such marriage as insures the propagation of defectives who are certain to become a charge upon the State. The issuing of marriage licenses should be surrounded with greater safeguards, particularly the safeguard of publicity. The wisdom of requiring due notice by publication of an intention to assume the obligations of marriage has been suggested, and I commend the same to your consideration. We may reasonably consider the advisability of requiring on the part of those applying for license to marry, medical evidence that the contraction of marriage will not threaten society by the perpetuation of mental or physical deficiency. Certain it is that the mere effort to compel the mismated to live together will not serve as a corrective of the evils which arise out of marriages contracted without regard to the inevitable eventualities.

REPORT OF THE CODIFICATION COMMISSION.

Pursuant to an act of the last General Assembly creating a Codification Commission, approved March 9, 1903, I appointed as members of said Commission Marcellus A. Chipman, of Madison County, and Timothy E. Howard, of St. Joseph County, Daniel E. Storms being made a member of said Commission by law as Secretary of State. This Commission organized on April 10, 1903, and has since been continuously engaged in the preparation of a report now before your honorable bodies, the consideration of which will perhaps constitute the most important duty devolving upon the present General Assembly. The work of this Commission has not been confined to a compilation and co-ordination of the laws enacted since the last revision in 1881, but in many phases covers the entire period of the State's history since the adoption of the Constitution of 1850. The work of the Commission has been to gather together all the existing laws on the subjects touched, and to construct therefrom, in the language of the Commission, "out of the best material that could be gathered from any source, a general, as well as comprehensive statute, bringing these important subjects up to what the Commission deemed was the general policy of the State with respect thereto." The subjects selected by the Commission for this purpose were cities and towns, drainage, proceedings in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, private corporations, highways, and the criminal code. Upon all of these subjects the Commission is now ready, or will be early in the present session of the General Assembly, to submit bills to the legislature.

The questions raised by this Commission are perhaps more important than any which have been submitted to any legislative body in this State since the Constitutional Convention of a half century ago. Their consideration should command the most thoughtful attention of every member of the General Assembly.

THE STATE'S FINANCES.

In the management of the State's fiscal affairs during the past two years there has been no departure from the precedent of exacting from those charged with the responsibility for disbursing public funds the same strict accountability required from those engaged in the discharge of a private trust. The phrase "business administration" means more than the words directly imply. Properly applied it means a realization in practice of the theory which lies at the basis of goverment genuinely democratic—the strict accountability of the public servant to those from whom are collected the trust funds intended to be used only for the specific purposes and by the specific methods prescribed by law. Such a sense of accountability is a necessary prerequisite to good administration, and its absence is inevitably the beginning of extravagance and waste, inefficiency and scandal. The official, either in high or low position, who is unwilling to yield faithful acquiescence to the admirable provisions of the laws guarding the disbursement of money collected from the people, is unfit for the public service.

In Indiana in recent years we have made notable advances in the matter of bringing our State governmental affairs to a clear business basis. The abolition of the fee system as a source of personal perquisites for State officials, and the increases in the amount of fees collected, the decrease in per capita cost of maintenance of the various State institutions, the establishment of the competitive system in bids for State institutions, the abolition of the "junketing" system in legislative consideration of the wants of these State institutions, the introduction of thorough bookkeeping methods and insistence upon the use of approved vouchers in the diversion of funds from the State treasury, the decrease in interest on the State debt by reason of its rapid reduction, the failure to follow the example of other States in multiplying State departments and bureaus, the application of business principles generally to the management of State affairs, is resulting in a saving to the people of Indiana of more than a million dollars a year. But this is by no means the most important result. The process of placing our governmental affairs upon a business basis has resulted in bringing into our civil service the sense of accountability to the public which is the necessary antecedent of every phase of good government.

In State and local governments the general tendency during the past decade has been toward steady increase of public expenditure, until in many communities taxation has come to be well nigh synonymous with confiscation, and this without visible evidence in most instances of commensurate improvement of the public service. It is interesting to note that in Indiana we are collecting less money into the general fund from which the ordinary expenses of the State government are paid than we were ten years ago; yet the field of State activity has constantly been widening during that period, and the testimony of disinterested commentarians is that there has been a steady improvement in the character of the service rendered by the State to the taxpaying public. Our attention is often directed to the vast budgets of some other States in proof that we should emulate them in the size and variety of our appropriations, but investigation does not reveal wherein these States secure better service for their lavish expenditures of public funds. It is true that in Indiana the State tax levy is a very small part of the burden borne by the taxpayer, but it is also true that the State at least should set an example in the matter of economical administration.

I believe with the late Governor Mount "that the debt-paying policy is the true one," and that "the record that has been made by which so much of the principal of the State debt has been paid and the interest saved, is one that is and will continue to be of incalculable advantage to our commonwealth." At a time when there is criticism of the debt-paying policy it is worthy of note that the State is a third of a million dollars richer today than it would otherwise have been, because of the application by succeeding Finance Boards during the past of every available dollar from the General Fund toward the extinction of interest bearing obligations, even if we take into account only the saving in interest and not the temptation to extravagance which is offered by an overflowing treasury.

The following payments on the State debt have been made since the last session of the General Assembly:

July, 1903, three per cent. school refunding bonds.....	$250,000
November, 1903, three and a half per cent. refunders..	85,000
January, 1904, three and a half per cent. refunders....	200,000
July, 1904, three per cent. school refunding bonds.....	250,000
January, 1905, three per cent. school refunding bonds..	206,000
Total.....	$991,000

A total payment on the State debt since the beginning of the present administration of $2,808,000.

The criticism has been offered by the uninformed that the State Finance Board anticipated indebtedness by the retirement of bonds, unpayable except by special arrangement, in the payments of November, 1903, and January, 1904. Availing itself of an opportunity to pay off deferred bonds bearing three and a half per cent. interest the State Finance Board applied the State debt sinking fund and a small amount derived from the general fund in retiring these rather than current three per cent. bonds, in the belief that the consequent saving in interest of $1,425 annually was of advantage to the State.

The amount of the State debt on January 5th of this year was as follows:

Three per cent. refunding bonds.....	$407,000 00
Three and a half per cent. temporary funding loan.	800,000 00
State stock certificates.....	5,615 12
Purdue five per cent.....	340,000 00
Indiana five per cent.....	144,000 00
Total.....	$1,696,615 12

Of the above amount $407,000 have the optional clause and are redeemable at the pleasure of the State; the $800,000 3½ per cents. can not be paid until 1910 and are not due until 1915; the $340,000 five per cent. Purdue bonds and the $144,000 Indiana bonds are perpetual and represent a permanent pledge of the State toward the support of these institutions. Upon the State stock certificates $5,615.12, which are internal improvement certificates, interest has been stopped, and although the State has endeavored to secure trace of the owners, the effort has been unavailing, and it is unlikely that the State will ever be called upon for the redemption of this claim.

An effort has been made on the eve of the assembling of the Legislature to impress the members of the General Assembly and the people of the State generally with the belief that the financial affairs of the State are in a precarious condition, that the State Finance Board has diverted money from the general fund for the payment of the State debt to such an extent that the treasury is now embarrassed by reason of its action, that the construction of public institutions authorized by the last General Assembly has been delayed because of deficiencies in the revenues thus created, and that the situation now presented from a fiscal standpoint is cause for anxiety. There is no foundation in fact for these assumptions, which are put forward in support of projects for large expenditure by the General Assembly. During the fiscal years 1903 and 1904 the total amount diverted from the general fund and paid on the State debt amounted to $140,218, or an average of $70,000 a year. In those two years, it may be added, the interest charges on the State debt were decreased in the aggregate by reason of payments made in 1902 and 1903, $92,720, leaving an alienation from the general fund as compared with former years of less than $50,000. A fact more significant to the General Assembly than the application of this amount to the extinction of interest-bearing obligations is that the last General Assembly made appropriations footing up nearly nine hundred thousand dollars more than those of the preceding Legislature, without making additional provision for meeting the demands upon the treasury thus created. If it had not been for the imposition of insuperable legal barriers to the fulfillment of the program of new construction laid out by the last General Assembly, and the growth of the custom of anticipating the revenues each year by securing advance payments from the several counties, an embarrassing situation might have been presented.

The present General Assembly should understand that it is impossible for a State to increase its expenditures without also commensurately increasing its revenues and not create a gap between the two that will ultimately result in embarrassment. The debt-paying policy, continued for a decade and repeatedly indorsed by the people, has been maintained in the face even of these adverse conditions. The unnecessary continuance of an interest-bearing debt by a public corporation with the readily available assets possessed by such a State as Indiana, is absolutely indefensible from a business standpoint.

The present State debt sinking fund levy of three cents on the hundred dollars will yield, before it is possible to lift it from the duplicate, sufficient revenue to discharge every dollar of the State debt due before 1915, or payable before 1910, and leave a balance of about $40,000 in the fund. The amount of the remaining obligation will be only $800,000. I therefore recommend the discontinuance of this levy, believing that the debt-paying policy is so well established that the small remaining portion of the debt may be met out of the general fund.

A study of the appropriations of General Assemblies during the past decade shows a marked increase in the item "specific appropriations." The general running expenses of the State have not increased in a commensurate proportion. Of course the demands upon our public institutions have increased with remarkable rapidity during that period, and especially in the past four years by reason of increased population and increased cost of commodities which enter into subsistence; but it would seem that our expenditures must have outstripped our actual needs. During the last four fiscal years the following amounts were spent by the thirteen State institutions on account of new buildings and extraordinary repairs:

1901	$260,386 05
1902	270,851 52
1903	154,449 57
1904	223,940 51

The disbursements on account of specific appropriations from 1895 to 1904 (fiscal years), inclusive, were as follows, as shown by the records of the State Auditor:

1895	$171,296 24
1896	147,177 44
1897	223,737 23
1898	74,035 17
1899	180,738 43
1900	336,935 70
1901	259,860 12
1902	345,287 77
1903	287,981 62
1904	482,262 79

The remainder of the specific appropriations for the fiscal years 1904-1905 aggregated $625,682. The specific appropriations of the last General Assembly for the two years aggregated in excess of one million one hundred thousand dollars, as against expenditures on the same account of approximately six hundred and thirty thousand for the preceding two years, five hundred and ninety-five thousand for 1900 and 1901, two hundred and fifty-four thousand for 1898 and 1899, and three hundred and sixty thousand for 1896 and 1897. As compared with the specific expenditures of the biennial period immediately preceding, which was high water mark for the decade, the appropriations for the fiscal years 1904 and 1905 were increased nearly half a million dollars, the increase itself being twice the amount of all the specific expenditures for 1898 and 1899. This increase of a half million dollars, to which was added an increase of four hundred thousand dollars in other appropriations, was offset by an increase in revenues of only about two hundred thousand dollars. Of course it would be impossible to continue such a policy without ultimate embarrassment.

It is the duty of the General Assembly, which fixes the tax levy, to provide by immediate taxation for the payment of the obligations created by its own appropriations. The issuing of bonds to meet deficiencies in the current revenues of the State, which must inevitably be necessitated by a failure to fix a commensurate tax levy, is a method of shifting responsibility which is not only costly to the people, but essentially dishonest because intentionally deceptive. By reason of such a procedure, the people of Indiana have been compelled to pay more than two million dollars in interest to bondholders during the past fifteen years, for which they have nothing to show. Fair treatment of the people requires that the State tax levy shall be an index of State expenditure, and those who bear the burdens of taxation are inclined to favor decreased expenditures rather than an increased tax levy.

The balance in the general and benevolent funds on January 1, 1905, was $585,321.86, as against $778,812 on January 1, 1901, at the beginning of the present administration, and $574,928 on January 1, 1903. To the present balance may be added $240,000 due in fee settlements from State offices, making an aggregate balance of about $825,000, as against a balance on the same basis four years ago of $960,000. In other words, the balance in the treasury at the close of this administration, despite the vastly increased demands upon the treasury by reason of increased appropriations is but $135,000 less than it was at the beginning. The amount is sufficient, reinforced by revenue from the June settlements, and the usual anticipations of the December settlement prior to the end of the fiscal year, to meet the anticipated expenditures for the present fiscal year. The estimated receipts in the general fund for the fiscal year approximate three million dollars; the regular expenditures on the 1904 basis $2,300,000, the cost of the legislative session $120,000, a total of about $2,420,000. Estimating at the close of the present fiscal year that $175,000 will have been spent in the work of building the two new public institutions provided by law, there will then remain to be provided for, during the next two fiscal years, the following program of construction demanded by institutional conditions:

Girls' Industrial School and Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb (in addition to amount accruing from sale of institutional lands)	$225,000
Additional provisions for the insane	500,000 to be distributed over two years, in which the amount available for specific appropriations during the period will be $1,100,000, even with the increased aggregate of regular appropriations made by the last General Assembly fully maintained. The people will not complain if under the stress of these unusual demands upon the resources of the State economy is practiced in other directions.
Total	$725,000

Calling in payments from counties in advance of the regular settlement dates is a method of anticipating future revenues which has resulted from the action of the General Assemblies in discounting the future. The custom has been in vogue for many years, the record of its continuance having been traced back in the Auditor's office as far as 1887. The natural tendency has been to pass along the inherited burden, rendered lighter or heavier as occasion has demanded.

If it shall be found necessary to make special provision for the demands for new institutional construction the suggestion is offered that this may be accomplished by substituting for the three-cent State debt sinking fund levy for a period of two years a three-cent special institutional levy, which would bring into the treasury in two years, approximately nine hundred thousand dollars. With all possible payments upon the State debt prior to 1910 provided for by the revenues from the State debt sinking fund accruing before it is possible to lift it from the duplicate, it will be possible with the income for this period thus supplemented to carry out plans of new construction which will anticipate institutional needs for several years to come and make it possible thereafter to accumulate in the general fund sufficient to meet the remainder of the State debt when it becomes payable. The increased revenues in the general fund resulting from the gradual growth of the tax duplicate should be sufficient to provide for all the legitimate expansion in public expenditure. By such an arrangement there will be no increase of the total tax levy, which would, in my opinion, be entirely unnecessary. The fiscal affairs of the State present no problems that may not easily be solved by wise and economical legislation. I therefore recommend that with the suggestion indicated the State tax levy remain as at present, $30\frac{3}{4}$ cents on the hundred dollars.

Appended hereto is an itemized statement prepared in the State Auditor's office showing the receipts and disbursements for a period of ten years from 1895 to 1904, inclusive.

OUR INSTITUTIONAL SYSTEM.

One of the most valuable reforms authorized by the statutes of Indiana in recent years is the authorization of a Legislative Committee, appointed by the Governor as soon as the personnel of the General Assembly has been legally determined, for the purpose of visiting the several State institutions, investigating the conditions prevailing and the methods employed therein, ascertaining their wants, and determining their actual needs. The results of this method of gathering information for the benefit of the General Assembly have been most salutary. They have made it not only unnecessary, but decidedly inadvisable, for the representatives of these institutions to appear before the Legislature in the role of lobbyists in order to insure proper consideration of their requirements, and it has given to the General Assembly the benefit of a tentative determination of the real needs of these institutions, uninfluenced by any motive other than the furtherance of the interests of these institutions and the protection of the State from imposition. It has forever done away with the spectacle once presented by junketing committees, whose visits to these institutions usually took on the proportions and the atmosphere of a picnic.

Under the authority conferred by this law I appointed Senator Fremont Goodwine, Representative Sydney W. Cantwell and Representative Thomas W. Honan, the last named representing the minority party, upon this committee. For several weeks this committee has been engaged in visiting the several institutions and State departments, gathering information to be offered in evidence as a basis for intelligent action in the matter of appropriations. I commend its report, comprehending in its scope every phase of State administration, to the General Assembly. Because it deals in greater detail with institutional affairs than would be practicable in the limits of this message, I shall not attempt to review them except in generalizations.

In Indiana the absolute elimination of politics as a motive in institutional management, except in the application of the doctrine that in this particular the absence of politics is the best politics, is a practice firmly established. By law the boards of all these institutions are bi-partisan except that at the State Prison, which I have made so by voluntary action. The representation of the minority party on these boards is actual, and not nominal, my object having been to realize the spirit of the law by enlisting in the State's service on these boards the strongest and most representative members of the opposition party available therefor, believing that this method would constitute an additional guarantee of guardianship of the State's best interests. Of the twelve male superintendents of our State penal, benevolent and charitable institutions, five differ in politics from the administration in power. Though responsible in a general way to the several boards of control, and these in turn to the Governor, who is by law placed at the head of our institutional system, these superintendents are absolutely supreme in the matter of subordinate appointments, and are free to employ and discharge for the good of the service. No system of laws and regulations affecting the superintendents in the discharge of this function would be worth the paper it is written upon but for the existence, on the part of the administration of which these officials form a part, of a spirit of devotion to the underlying principles of non-partisanship in institutional affairs.

The people of Indiana want first of all to know, and they have a right to know, that the public service for which the taxes collected into the State treasury are levied is honestly, wisely and economically rendered. Convinced of this they do not demand a penuriousness in the consideration of real institutional needs which will result in denying a hearing to the promptings of humanity or the demands of a broadening conception of the State's duty toward its citizenship. Institutional conditions, present and prospective, are such as to indicate the necessity of larger provision for the classes to the care of which the State is already committed, and to suggest to many the advisability of a widening of the scope of the State's activity along institutional lines.

The most serious problem presented, and one which presses for immediate solution, is that involved in the inadequacy of our institutions for the insane to provide for those whose care is a duty of the State. The State is committed to the care of the insane by the Constitution itself, and the first duty of the General Assembly, from an institutional standpoint, is toward these unfortunates. The State should care for the incurable insane, rather than for any new class of defectives, if the choice must be made between them.

They are already a public charge in poorhouses and jails, not only at a cost to the several counties greater than that involved in their maintenance in State institutions for the insane, but often under conditions which are a reproach to our civilization.

The estimated number of insane persons in Indiana, including the incurable, for whom provision needs to be made by the State, is about 600. By increasing the capacity of the Northern, Eastern and Southern hospitals to 1,000 beds each, and rearranging the hospital districts in such manner as to distribute the insane in accordance with this readjustment, additional accommodations may be had for about 800 patients, which would relieve the situation for the present and ten years to come. It is estimated that this could be accomplished by an expenditure of about five hundred thousand dollars, whereas the cost of a new institution would not only be a much larger amount, but would involve larger annual expenditures for maintenance.

In my message to the last General Assembly I recommended the creation of a Commission to investigate the advisability of establishing a hospital or colony for epileptics. This Commission, consisting of Senator Newhouse, Senator Purviance and Representative Stansbury, has visited a number of institutions, and after much study of the subject has completed a report for your consideration. It is in my opinion a mistake to confuse the subject of provision for the epileptics with that of relieving the congested condition of our hospitals for the insane. In the four institutions for the insane there are fewer than four hundred epileptics, whose removal would not reduce these institutions below their proper population, present accommodations considered, while jails and poorhouses would still be occupied by insane persons whose condition is quite as deplorable as that of the epileptics thus removed. There is a difference of opinion, too, as to the advisability of associating sane and insane epileptics in the same institution, Kansas being the only State which has up to this time undertaken such an experiment. In the New York State Library's "Review of State Legislation, 1903," Dr. J. C. Carson, Superintendent of the Syracuse (N. Y.) State Institution for Feeble-Minded Children, writes, with "The Feeble-Minded and Epileptic" as his topic: "The policy of placing all classes of epileptics in one institution is a doubtful one, and the effect on sane or simply feeble-minded epileptics from contact with those who are insane can hardly fail to be prejudicial to their interests. The generally accepted opinion is that it is much better to provide for the custody of insane epileptics in hospitals for the insane."

THE INDIANA REFORMATORY.

The Sixty-third General Assembly passed an act placing in the hands of the Governor the power to reorganize the Board of Managers of the Indiana Reformatory. The condition of affairs at that institution had been a source of annoyance and anxiety to the responsible authorities not only during the present administration, but throughout that of my predecessor, the late Governor Mount. Alone among the penal and charitable institutions of the State, there was constantly manifest on the part of the management of the Indiana Reformatory a disposition to resist the supervision of the executive whose responsibility to the people of the commonwealth must be accompanied by the authority of a chief executive if the theory of representative and responsible government is to be realized in practice in our State affairs. The attitude of the trustees of this institution was that it was a separate and independent corporation, without accountability to the State government, which rapidly developed into a position of antagonism toward those officials elected by the State to represent them in the management of our institutional system. The serious character of such a precedent is readily apparent and its adverse effects upon the interests of the commonwealth have been revealed during the investigations which have followed the reversion of the institution to the control of our State government. The enactment of the Reformatory bill not only confirmed the provision of the constitution making the Governor the responsible head of the State government, but because of what has followed it has emphasized the wisdom of a centralized system of authority, coupled with direct responsibility to the tax-paying public.

Acting under the authority of the law, the resignations of two members of the old Reformatory board were requested. A third vacancy occurred by expiration, and a fourth member remained upon the Board as reorganized. Realizing the impossibility of accomplishing the desired reforms in the institution so long as there was either direct or indirect perpetuation of the former regime, the Board of Managers on July 1, 1903, appointed W. H. Whittaker, of Indianapolis, General Superintendent. The result of the new administration has been the accomplishment of moral, sanitary and fiscal reforms which have served to revolutionize conditions in the Indiana Reformatory, and place it in line with the spirit and methods of our institutional system.

When the new management assumed control August 1, 1903, it was ascertained that certain contractors in the institution had permitted their labor bills to stand for months, whereas their contracts provided that said bills should be paid within thirty days (the State to receive interest at the rate of eight per cent. on unpaid bills). It was also found that just claims due the State from certain contractors to the amount of several hundred dollars had not been collected and that the labor of inmates had been furnished to certain contractors without charge.

The facts were found and presented to the Board of Managers by the General Superintendent October 29, 1903, as follows:

Unsettled labor accounts due the State, $1,198.88; interest due on unpaid labor accounts, $3,498.60; due on extra labor furnished contractors from July 1, 1896, to December 1, 1902 (19,545 days at 40 cents per day), $7,818.00, making a total of $12,515.48 that was admitted by contractors as due the State and an immediate settlement was made. The last $500 of this amount will be paid to the State Treasurer in February, 1905.

In addition to this saving the earnings from the contracts for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1903, were $10,990.22 in excess of what they were under the last complete year of the old administration. This is in the face of the fact that the same contracts were in force each year, with practically the same number of inmates employed. For the fiscal year ending October 31, 1904, after turning back into the State Treasury unexpended appropriations to the amount of $2,846.62, there was not a dollar of indebtedness standing against the institution, which makes a saving to the State for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1904, as follows:

Extra labor and interest from contracts	$12,515 48
Excess in earnings	10,990 22
Unexpended balance of appropriations	2,846 62

Making a net saving to the State of $26,352.32, it being the first year in six that the Reformatory at the end of each fiscal year did not have a deficit as shown by appropriations made by the General Assembly as follows:

The Legislature in the year 1897 gave to this institution a deficiency appropriation for maintenance of $19,690.30.

The Legislature of 1899 gave to this institution a deficiency appropriation for maintenance for 1898 of $6,595.63, and a specific appropriation to prevent deficits in 1899 of $6,500.00.

The Legislature in 1901 gave to this institution a deficiency appropriation for 1899 and 1900 of $17,314.06.

To reimburse the Repair Fund for the year 1900 a deficiency appropriation of $1,408.80 was made.

Total to cover deficits in six years, $51,508.79.

In addition to this, $38,408.40 was illegally withheld from the labor contracts from February, 1896, to August 26, 1899. This amount was withheld by the General Superintendent to construct a certain building that was never authorized by the Legislature, and not one dollar of the expense was ever passed upon by the Board of Managers. The records show that purchases were made for material to be used in the construction of this building three years after it was completed. This building, constructed, could not have cost to exceed $23,000, the remainder, $15,408.40, having been used by the General Superintendent for maintenance and other purposes.

Upon the change of management of the institution, August 1, 1903, the sanitary conditions prevailing in the Reformatory were bad. The forty beds in the hospital would not hold the sick, and there were from 150 to 175 at sick-call every morning. At the close of the fiscal year ending October 31, 1904, there were from twenty-five to forty at sick-call and but from six to eight in the hospital. The deaths in the institution have been reduced more than fifty per cent.

The drug bills under the old management ranged from $140 to $150 per month, while under the present management they range from $30 to $40 per month.

The schools of letters and trades schools that the people of Indiana supposed existed under the old management were operating in name only. Since the new management has taken charge the trades schools have been put on a good basis and there are now enrolled 100 boys who are being instructed in the various trades; the schools of letters has been so organized that from 150 to 200 inmates are receiving proper educational facilities.

The per capita cost for maintenance for running this institution for the year ending October 31, 1904, was $114.90, while for the year ending October 31, 1903, it was $118.25. The discipline of the institution is much better than it was under the old administration. The lock-step and ball and chain have been abolished. In 1903 there were 133 reports against inmates for short work; in 1904 there were no reports for short work. In 1903 there were twenty-nine reports against inmates for bad work on contracts, while in 1904 there were no reports for bad work. The discipline reports in 1903 were 2,185, while in 1904 they were 1,215. The number of punishments in 1903 were 588, while in 1904 they were but 386. In the year ending October 31, 1903, there were 12,432 days lost on account of sickness in the institution, while in the year ending October 31, 1904, there were but 4,888 days lost. Total days lost in sick cell in 1903, 5,933; total number days lost in sick cell in 1904, 838.

I have thus gone into detail without, however, more than touching the edges of what might be said with reference to the contrast in conditions present and past at the Indiana Reformatory, because there was so general a misunderstanding of this measure when enacted, due to the control of the larger avenues of information by those responsible for what we may mildly term the mismanagement of the affairs of this institution. Those who advocated the cause of good government in this instance were denounced as "spoilsmen," while those who opposed it, many of them from the best motives but misled by misinformation, were styled "reformers." It will be well for the members of the General Assembly to remember during the session just opening that all that bears the reform label is not reform. Sometimes it is calculating crookedness and sometimes it is well-intentioned zeal without information.

SEPARATION OF GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FROM WOMANS' PRISON.

In accordance with the provisions of an act passed by the Sixty-third General Assembly, approved March 11, 1903, authorizing the creation of a Commission to decide upon a location, purchase land upon which to erect buildings and supervise the construction of said buildings, for the use of the Indiana Industrial School for Girls, I appointed the following gentlemen to comprise the Commission: Eddy M. Campbell, of Indianapolis, and John T. Stout, of Paoli, Republicans, and Eudorus M. Johnson and August M. Kuhn, of Indianapolis, Democrats.

After giving careful consideration to all propositions submitted and personally inspecting the various sites offered, the Commission unanimously decided to select and purchase what was known as the Miller site, located seven and one-half miles northwest of the city of Indianapolis, comprising in all 127 acres, the consideration being $10,925.

After a careful investigation of the number and character of buildings and equipment necessary to properly house and care for the inmates of the contemplated school, conformable to law, and after having received bids upon the plans drawn by the architect, the Commission was convinced that the buildings could not be erected and completed within the appropriation provided. The advice of the Attorney-General being sought in the premises, an opinion was rendered by him to the effect that the Commission could not under the act spend the entire amount appropriated for a partial completion of the objects therein specified. It was also discovered that no appropriation had been made for the separate maintenance of the institution from the time of its completion until an appropriation by the succeeding General Assembly could become available. It was therefore determined to hold the work of construction in abeyance until further provision in the way of an additional appropriation could be made.

The expenses of the Commission, exclusive of the amount paid for the land, were $3,290.24. The balance of the appropriation, amounting to $135,784.76 reverted to the general treasury.

It is recommended that this General Assembly provide a sufficient appropriation to enable the Commission to properly complete the work contemplated by the provisions of the act. The Commission recommends that this appropriation be $250,000.

RELOCATING THE INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The Commission created by the Sixty-third General Assembly for the purpose of selling certain real estate and re-locating the Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, composed of the Governor, the Attorney-General and the Board of Trustees of the institution, cleared the title to the property of the institution by securing quit claim deeds, as well as by a suit for the quieting of title, wherein judgment was obtained. The Commission appointed Charles E. Coffin and Isaac N. Ritchie, of Indianapolis, and Marcus S. Sonntag, of Evansville, as appraisers of the real estate. After the report of the appraisers was received the property was duly advertised and the Commission has sold of said property about 77.48 acres, for $177.250, the appraised value of this property, as reported to the Commission, being $129,720. Of this amount 14.71 acres was sold to the city of Indianapolis for $45,000. The city has already made the levy to make payment the coming year on this property.

The Commission still has about 14.46 acres to dispose of, for which the Commission has an offer of a thousand dollars an acre. If sold at this price the total would be approximately $192,000. Various proposed sites in Marion County for the relocation of said institution have been inspected by the Commission, but, as yet, no site has been determined upon. It is estimated that about $125,000, in addition to the amount accruing from the sale of lands, will be required for the erection of the institution.

STATE ARCHITECT.

As a measure of economy as well as with a view to securing the best results in the construction of public buildings, I again suggest the advisability of creating the office of State Architect. The commissions annually paid by the State for architectural work would more than provide the compensation of such an official and his experience would be of advantage to the State in securing the best methods of construction and close conformity with specifications by contractors. The functions of such an official would extend to the supervision of repairs as well as of original construction and also to the installation of heating, lighting and water systems. The increasing demands upon our State institutional system make it certain that the next few years will be a period of extensive construction, the erection of two new institutions already being provided for by law. Such an official could also be authorized and required to furnish standard plans and specifications for school buildings insuring their construction along modern sanitary lines and furnishing an approximate estimate of cost, which should serve as a basis of computation for school boards and township trustees and result in large savings along these lines. I am opposed to the creation or continuance of useless offices or bureaus, but urge this proposition as a measure of unquestioned wisdom and economy.

INSTITUTIONAL BOARD OF CONTROL.

The States of Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas and Minnesota have had satisfactory experience in the experiment of centralizing the general management of the State institutional system in a Central Board of Control, the members of which give their entire time to the supervision and direction of the affairs of these institutions, award all contracts, approve all plans for building and improvements, and exercise general oversight in institutional affairs. While we have had admirable results from our present system of independent boards, the plan of centralization successfully employed by these States appeals to me as a wise and economical arrangement deserving of the careful consideration of the General Assembly.

PRISON REFORM BOARD.

In conformity with an act of the last General Assembly I appointed John L. Rupe, of Richmond, C. G. Mauzy, of Fowler, and T. N. French, of Alexandria, to serve with the Warden of the Indiana State Prison, the Superintendent of the Indiana Reformatory and the Secretary of the Board of State Charities as members of a Prison Reform Board. This Board after careful consideration and investigation of jail and workhouse conditions and prison labor, has prepared a report which will be submitted to the General Assembly, and I commend the same to your thoughtful consideration. The expiration of the contracts at the Indiana Reformatory on July 1, 1906, make it incumbent upon the General Assembly to reach some conclusion with reference to the problem of effective employment in that institution. Two years ago I called into conference a number of gentlemen representing both manufacturers and wage earners, and after much discussion and consideration, no satisfactory substitute for the contract system as controlled and supervised in Indiana could be determined upon, and personally I doubt if one can be devised. Our State Board of Charities has performed an important and useful work in creating better conditions in the jails and poor-houses of the State, and I commend to the General Assembly the suggestion that the authority to enforce the demands of decency and humanity where such action becomes necessary, be centralized in accordance with the recommendations of the Commission.

STATE TAX BOARD.

I recommend that the State Tax Board be authorized to employ a permanent clerk, to be a stenographer, competent to report the annual proceedings of the Board, at a salary of $1,800 a year. Information relative thereto and the necessity therefor can be secured from members of the State Tax Board.

THE STATE LABOR COMMISSION.

The wisdom of the law creating the State Labor Commission has been signally vindicated by the operations of this bureau during the past two years. During no period in the history of the State, since its manufacturing interests assumed large proportions, has industrial peace been so thoroughly established. While other States have been in the midst of serious disturbances attendant upon conflicts between capital and labor, we of Indiana have had, in the language of the recently submitted biennial report of the Commissioners, "fewer lockouts, strikes and boycotts, a smaller number of persons involved, a shorter duration of trouble, a lessened intensity of strife, more gratifying settlements and a greater number of adjustments without strikes."

The work of this Commission in the arbitration of industrial differences is in harmony with the spirit of conciliation and of consideration which is taking hold upon our industrial life in the light of a higher conception of the duty of citizens one to another. From the beginning the operations of this bureau have been conducted in an admirable manner, the best evidence of which is that so large a measure of good has been accomplished with so small a measure of publicity. There could be no commentary upon the good sense of both employer and employed in Indiana than the statement of the Commissioners in their report, that "It is safe to say that during the past two years there have been more than ten times as many settlements of labor disputes by arbitration and mediation in Indiana without open ruptures than there have been strikes." And this condition has been attained not at the price of liberty or self-respect on the part of either employer or employed, but through the exercise of mutual sympathy and understanding.

The State Factory Inspection Bureau and the State Mine Inspection Bureau have also continued their useful work in a spirit which has commanded the confidence of both employed and employer. Our laws for the creation and maintenance of safe and sanitary conditions in shop, store, mine and factory, are as well enforced as those of any other State in the Union.

REGULATION OF PRIVATE BANKS.

Recent developments have served to emphasize the demand for some form of State supervision of private banks. The private bank serves a useful purpose in many communities in which conditions would not warrant the establishment of such an institution under our State or Federal laws, but the State has a right to demand that there shall be a certain basis for the public confidence invited by the name "bank" itself. It is true that even State and Federal supervision have failed to accomplish the intended purpose of securing absolute safety, partly because of failure in the laws and partly because of failure in their execution.

The law in Indiana treats private banks, of which we have a very large number, as co-partnerships and fixes the financial responsibility accordingly. I renew my recommendations of two years ago that the law should definitely fix a capital to be fully paid in cash as a basis for private banks, the minimum amount being $25,000, the same as now provided for in the organization of State banks.

I believe that our system of examination and supervision of banks operating under our State banking law and thereby inviting a larger degree of public confidence, should be extended to the kind and character of loans made from the funds thereof, to the end that worthless or doubtful loans may be promptly eliminated from any return of assets.

The circulation of unfounded rumors adversely affecting the financial standing of any authorized bank or trust company should be defined by the law as a crime or misdemeanor, and punishment prescribed accordingly. The safety of more than one Indiana banking institution, the repository of the savings of the people, has been threatened in this way during the past two years, and the offense is one against the public interest which demands severe punishment.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

In its annual report to the Governor the State Board of Health suggests the reenactment of the amendments made in 1899 to the health law of 1891, which, in the language of the report, "made possible the collecting of correct mortality statistics and gave to the State health service a vitality and force which has resulted in preventing not a little sickness and death." These amendments were declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 1904, because of the omission by an engrossing clerk of a line in the title of the act. I join in the recommendation that these amendments be restored, and that our legislation be extended with a view to making possible the collection of complete and accurate records of contagious diseases, births and marriages. I concur also in the recommendation that a statute be enacted requiring that all schoolhouses hereafter shall be built to conform to natural sanitary laws, and that hygiene be taught in the public schools.

The State Board of Health recommends that there be established at Indianapolis a "State Laboratory of Hygiene," to be used in making sanitary analyses and for such examinations as will be of advantage in the prevention of disease, and also for the purpose of making analyses of foods and drugs with a view to the enforcement of the pure food and drug law.

I believe that an inspection of our health laws will reveal the fact that the State Board of Health is already burdened with too many duties, some of which it is compelled to neglect because its functions cover so wide a field. We have had upon our statute books for six years a drastic law against food and drug adulteration, the enforcement of which by the State Board of Health is made mandatory, and each succeeding General Assembly has made appropriations for purposes among which has been specifically mentioned the enforcement of this statute. Yet it remains practically a dead letter upon the statute books—certainly not altogether because of the absence of a State Laboratory when the means of making analyses are available in so many quarters. The chemical examinations for diagnosis of disease could probably be accomplished without the establishment of a special laboratory for the purpose.

If it is desired to establish a laboratory for analyses looking to the enforcement of the pure food law, I believe that Indiana should follow the trend of recent legislation in placing this chemical work in the hands of the chemist of Purdue University. The Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture correctly declares that this work can be done more economically in a well-established laboratory such as is found in Purdue University than it can be in a small laboratory established specially for that purpose. It is important, too, as we are admonished by scandals in other States attendant upon the execution of the pure food laws, that this work should be removed as far as possible from the influence of politics, and carried on with an idea more to practical and scientific results than to spectacular effects. This plan has been adopted in Oregon, Washington, North Carolina, Kentucky, North Dakota, Idaho, Wyoming and other States.

RAILROAD COMMISSION.

The present General Assembly will be asked to enact a law creating a Railroad Commission. The subject should be approached in a spirit of consideration for the rights of both the shipper and the railroad corporation. The question of railroad rates and service is one that vitally affects the commercial interests of the State. Class legislation is not demanded by the people of Indiana, and that radicalism which defeats itself should have no part in the deliberations of the General Assembly upon this important subject. A measure that takes into account the interests of all concerned would doubtless be of great public benefit. To the end that such a result may be secured, I recommend that the railroad committees of both Houses deliberate in joint session, with a view to formulating a bill which will neither be oppressive to any legitimate interest, nor fail to correct the inequalities of which complaint is made.

REGULATION OF AUTOMOBILES.

The number of accidents resulting from the careless and reckless driving of automobiles suggests the advisability of legislation regulating the speed and manner of handling of these machines upon the streets and highways of the State.

FORESTRY.

The forest policy of the State is now a subject of much public interest. It is worthy of note that Indiana is the only State in the Middle West that is pursuing a definite course with a view to the preservation and development of this vitally important agricultural and industrial interest.

The last General Assembly passed an act authorizing the State Board of Forestry to purchase two thousand acres of land at a cost of not to exceed eight dollars per acre, for the purpose of establishing a State Forest Reservation, Laboratory of Forestry Demonstration and State Nurseries and appropriating $1.50 per acre annually for the maintenance of the reservation. After a careful investigation of many tracts of land within the State deemed suitable for the purposes contemplated, the State Board of Forestry selected and purchased two thousand acres of land in Clark County at an aggregate cost of $16,000. The land selected is peculiarly adapted to the purposes for which it was secured, and under the personal and careful supervision of the Board has been converted from an unimproved condition at the time of purchase into a valuable forestry reserve, which, although in its infancy, gives promise of rendering to the State in the comparatively near future valuable returns on the expenditure it has necessitated. The land has already been enhanced in value more than double the consideration paid for it by the State. The reserve promises to become a permanent experimental and educational institution for the advancement of forestry in the State. The development of this policy will greatly affect the usefulness and value of the more than 600,000 acres of broken and at present almost worthless agricultural lands in Indiana, and insure to the industrial institutions of the commonwealth a sufficient timber supply for the future.

PREVENTING DESERTION.

I submit with favorable recommendation a suggestion from Lieutenant-General Adna R. Chaffee, United States Army, that Section 6193 of the Revised Statutes of Indiana be amended as follows as a further means of preventing desertion from the military service:

"Be It Enacted, etc., That Section 6193 of the Revised Statutes is hereby amended to read as follows:

"6193. Every person undergoing a sentence of imprisonment on conviction for any felony or misdemeanor shall be disfranchised during the period of such imprisonment; and every deserter from the military service of the United States, or from the militia of this State, when called forth by the Governor, or, in time of invasion, insurrection or rebellion, by the President of the United States, shall be deemed to have voluntarily relinquished his right to vote at all elections, and shall not be entitled to participate in elections in this State until he shall have returned to the command from which he deserted, made good the time lost in desertion, and served out the term of his original enlistment."

FIRE LOSSES AND INSURANCE.

I renew my recommendation of two years ago that there be enacted a fire marshal law, similar to that in operation in the State of Massachusetts. The unusual fire loss in Indiana in recent years is reflected in higher rates for insurance, which constitute a heavy tax upon the entire insuring public. In States where fire marshal laws have been enacted, better conditions prevail, and when these laws are general, fire losses can but be less and premiums thereby lowered. A fire marshal statute, properly enforced, will decrease the loss ratio in fire insurance. To require by law that property shall be kept in an insurable condition, to officially investigate and control building construction, to pursue and punish incendiarism, to investigate causes and carelessness, are the general remedies sought to be applied in the fire marshal legislation of recent years.

Much has been accomplished toward the extinction of "wildcat" insurance in this State, but much remains to be accomplished before there is back of every insurance policy the guarantee of payment which is the right of every man who pays a premium. Our statute covering the class of securities foreign insurance companies are permitted to hold should be broadened so that municipal and county bonds of other States may be included. This would increase the facilities for insurance without lessening the security of the insured.

REVISING THE JUDICIARY.

Each succeeding General Assembly is besieged with demands for the creation of new judicial circuits, not in the interests of the taxpayers of the State, or by reason of public necessity, since statistics show a gradual decline in litigation. It was my duty during the last General Assembly to veto two such bills, and I believe that by this action other measures of similar nature were prevented from receiving favorable consideration at the hands of the General Assembly.

I believe with the late Governor Mount that "the growing expense of our courts can be obviated and existing inequalities removed through the reorganization of the State into court districts each comprising several counties, equalizing as nearly as possible and providing for a number of judges to correspond with the size of said districts," thus obviating the necessity of a special judge in any case. Such a revision, based upon the needs and rights of the people, would result not only in large savings to the public treasury, but would in my opinion secure greater expedition and more satisfactory results in litigation.

MONUMENTS AND MARKERS.

The Commission authorized by an act of the General Assembly, approved March 11, 1901, for the purpose of locating and erecting monuments to mark the positions held by Indiana regiments at the Battle of Shiloh, has completed its work with the dedication of twenty-one massive monuments of Indiana stone permanently commemorating the valorous service on that historic field of nineteen regiments of infantry and two of artillery. The total cost of these monuments, with the expenses incident to the work of the Commission, aggregated approximately twenty-eight thousand dollars. Not only was there especial appropriateness in the use of Indiana stone in the construction of these monuments, but by reason of its adoption massiveness was coupled with exceptional durability.

The Indiana monuments at Shiloh were dedicated on April 6 and 7, 1903. The occasion was rendered notable by a pilgrimage of several hundred Indianaians, traveling by special train and a fleet of steamboats, to Pittsburg Landing. In the party were many survivors of the battle, including the distinguished Major-General Lew Wallace. The exercises, participated in by General Wallace, James Whitcomb Riley, Assistant Secretary of War Sanger, Colonel Josiah Patterson and General George W. Gordon, of Tennessee, and others, were especially notable. It is gratifying to feel that the brave part played by Indiana soldiers in two great western battles—Shiloh and Chickamauga—has been appropriately commemorated at the very places made historic by their valor.

Acting under the authority conferred by an act of the last General Assembly I appointed as members of the Vicksburg Commission M. M. Lacey, of Fountain City; Rev. E. L. Semans, of Wabash; A. B. Crampton, of Delphi; Henry C. Adams, of Indianapolis, and Philip Lester, of Little York. This Commission has twice visited the scene of operations about Vicksburg, now composed within the limits of a National park, and has submitted a report for the consideration of the General Assembly with a view to carrying out the purpose contemplated in its creation. I recommend the appropriation of an amount sufficient to permit the erection of monuments and markers of the simple but massive character adopted for the National military parks at Shiloh and Chickamauga.

One great National park remains upon which the service of Indiana troops has as yet not been commemorated—that of Antietam. The Indiana regiments which fought in this great battle, while not numerous, gave such an account of themselves that their record reflects luster on the name of Indiana, and the advisability of entering upon the work of appropriately recognizing this service suggests itself.

The last General Assembly made provision for the erection of a monument or historical marker at the scene of the Pigeon Roost massacre near Scottsburg, Clark County. As members of this Commission I appointed John W. Martin, of Scott County, Senator James W. Fortune, of Jeffersonville, and Joseph Hodapp, of Jackson County. A handsome shaft of Indiana stone, appropriately inscribed, was erected at a cost of $2,000. It was formally dedicated, with appropriate exercises, on October 1, 1904, in the presence of a vast gathering of people.

THE ORGANIZED MILITIA.

In view of the fact that the provisions of Section 3 of the "Act to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes," approved January 21, 1903, contemplates that the organization, armament and discipline of the organized militia in the several States and Territories and in the District of Columbia should be the same as that which was then or might afterward be prescribed for the regular and volunteer army of the United States, within five years from the date of the approval of that act, the Secretary of War has expressed an earnest desire that the military laws of the several States should, in certain fundamental respects, meet the requirements of the general militia law in respect to the organization of their several military establishments.

It is therefore recommended that the militia law of this State, in so far as it prescribes the organization thereof, be so amended as to conform to the law prescribing the organization of the army, and that the power be given the Governor, as Commander-in-Chief of the militia, to make such changes, by general order, in the organization of the militia as may from time to time become necessary to accomplish the conformation thereof to that of the army.

I have no hesitancy in saying that there has been in recent years a distinct advance in the matter of placing the organized militia of Indiana upon a real military basis. The idea that the work of the National Guard is boy's play has been superseded by a disposition to yield cheerful compliance to the necessary exactions of discipline and businesslike methods in the handling of company accounts. The one company of the Guard which has been called into active service during the past two years performed its duty with a cool-headedness and courage which would have done credit to any detachment of regulars and which has won encomiums everywhere.

There should be an increasing appreciation of the patriotic service rendered by those who make the sacrifice involved in the work of the Guard by officers and men. It is unfortunate that the State is not prepared to construct armories for the various companies and batteries with a view to perpetuating local military organizations. Especial difficulty has been experienced in securing proper quarters for the organizations comprising the Indianapolis battalion. The erection of an armory for this battalion on suitable land now owned by the State west of the State House would be an appropriate State undertaking. The State would not only provide by this method for the proper housing of our military organizations at the State capital, but would save the considerable amounts annually expended for armory rent and officers' headquarters. In connection with this armory, which need not be an elaborate structure, it would be an act of wisdom to erect a warehouse for military stores. The loss by deterioration through the storing of military supplies in the basement of the Capitol is great, the rooms being without proper light and ventilation and too warm for the purpose.

The disposition to oppose the National Guard either on the part of wage-earners or employers has decreased to a marked degree in Indiana, not only because of a better understanding of the necessity of the militia as a means of preserving law and order, but because of the absence of any disposition to supplant civil with military government by employing the Guard except under the stress of real necessity. The Evansville episode was useful in that it demonstrated effectively to some of the very persons engaged in ridiculing and abusing our civilian soldiery that when the National Guard of Indiana is once called into action it is for a serious purpose from the carrying out of which it will not be diverted by the demonstrations of the lawless.

Following the Evansville episode there was manifested a disposition by some employers, acting under coercion, to discriminate against members of the Guard because of their connection with our citizen soldiery. Such an attitude is nothing short of treasonable. The man who strikes at the National Guard, aims beyond this expression of the State's authority, at the laws, the institutions and the very liberties of our people. I recommend the enactment of a law prescribing severe punishment for the crime of seeking to secure discrimination against a member of the National Guard, or engaging in such discrimination, because of the connection of such citizen with an organization which, as the Constitution of the United States declares, is "necessary to the existence of a free State."

DECLINE OF LYNCHING.

Lynchings and similar manifestations of the mob spirit have been unknown in Indiana during the past eighteen months. On July 6, 1903, Company E, of the First Regiment, Indiana National Guard, while defending the jail and other public property at Evansville against the attack of a mob ostensibly seeking to avenge the murder of a policeman by a negro, but actually engaged only in a senseless uprising against duly constituted authority, was fired upon after enduring for many hours the taunts and jeers of a large assailing party. The fire was returned by the soldiers of the Guard and by deputies stationed in the windows of the jail. The result was the killing of eleven persons, the wounding of many more, and the instant dispersal of the mob. Deplorable as was this tragedy, its effect as an object lesson has been most salutary. It will perhaps be some time before a company of the Indiana National Guard, in the discharge of its sworn duty, will again be attacked by a mob. Upon the request of the authorities of Evansville, the local company of the militia was reinforced by the Vincennes and Terre Haute companies, and by the Indianapolis battalion, but normal conditions were quickly restored and the troops were promptly withdrawn, the request of the local authorities for a trial of the negro under the protection of the National Guard being refused on the ground, first, that however guilty the man, he was entitled to a fair and impartial hearing conducted in a judicial way, and again, that it was the duty of the local authorities to control the situation by employing the means given them under the law for maintaining their supremacy. A few days later the negro whose crime had been made the excuse for this uprising died at the Indiana Reformatory, to which institution he had been transferred for safe keeping.

The Indiana anti-lynching law, providing for the forfeiture of office by any sheriff failing to offer proper resistance to any mob seeking to seize a prisoner, is a salutary one, and doubtless in the Evansville case had been the cause of the removal of the negro to a place of safety. More potent than any statute, however, in the maintenance of the supremacy of the law, is the force of public sentiment, which should be so active in the matter of lynch law that any sheriff or other peace officer failing to perform his sworn duty in such an emergency may expect to be branded as a coward and an incompetent, which indeed he is. We need to have established as a doctrine universally accepted that the man who invokes violence in an assault upon the law, whatever his pretext, must be struck down by the law's strong arm.

DRAFTING OF BILLS.

Experience in the consideration even of the completed legislation of two General Assemblies impels me to the suggestion that greater care should be required not only in the formulation of bills, but in rendering it certain that no important measure shall find its way to our statute books, in the hurry and confusion of a session, involving unforeseen results to the people of the State. Each succeeding General Assembly finds the calendar of both houses crowded in the closing days of the session with bills which must in the nature of things go to the Governor without consideration being given to their merits by a large proportion of the membership of either body, and the Governor is unable within the brief period allotted for the purpose to give to these proposed measures the proper amount of study with a view to discovering defect or hidden meaning in them.

In several States an effort has been made to provide for more careful preparation of legislative bills through the appointment of official draftsmen, whether from within or without the membership of the Legislature. A small committee of able and experienced members, selected from the membership of the House and Senate, could render service of the highest value to the State by revising the phraseology of such bills as have been favorably reported from committee, calling attention to features palpably unconstitutional, and, most important of all, attaching to each bill a clear and concise statement of the purpose and effect of the proposed legislation, to be read whenever the bill is brought before either house for action.

With a view to preventing changes or erasures in bills, the last General Assembly passed an act providing that bills shall be engrossed and enrolled from specially designed type selected by the State Board of Printing and copyrighted for the exclusive use of the State. The State Board of Printing has carried out the purpose of this act by the adoption and copyrighting of a distinctive typeface which it will be impossible to successfully counterfeit.

SUCCESSION TO THE GOVERNORSHIP.

Section 7575 of the Statutes of Indiana provides that in case of the death, removal or resignation of both the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor, the President pro tem. of the Senate shall act as Governor, and in case the Senate has not elected a President pro tem. the Secretary of State shall call the Senate into session to elect a President pro tem., who shall act as Governor. This arrangement is not only out of accord with the theory of popular election of executive officers, but is unnecessarily complicated.

I recommend the enactment of a statute providing that the Secretary of State, Auditor of State and Treasurer of State, in this order, as set forth in the Constitution, be placed in the line of succession for the Governorship in case of the death or disability of both Governor and Lieutenant-Governor. While the line of succession might be extended further, this would doubtless provide for even the most remote contingency.

PUBLICATION OF JOURNALS.

Hereafter appropriations made to officials of the House and Senate for the preparation of the journals of the two bodies should be made available only when the Governor shall have certified the completion of the work. The immediate availability of the compensation has had an apparent tendency to delay the preparation of the copy for these publications.

FINAL ALLOWANCE OF WAR CLAIM.

On November 5, 1904, I was notified by the Auditor for the War Department of the allowance of the claim of the State of Indiana for additional reimbursement on account of expenditures incident to the mobilization of volunteer forces later enlisted as regiments of the United States volunteer army for service in the war with Spain, aggregating $9,191.51, for which amount draft was duly received and the amount paid into the State Treasury.

VENTILATION OF THE SENATE CHAMBER AND HALL OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The last General Assembly constituted the Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor and the Speaker of the House a Committee for the purpose of devising and carrying into effect a plan for the better ventilation of the Senate Chamber and the Hall of the House of Representatives. After due investigation the Commission accepted the proposal of the Glazier Nozzle and Manufacturing Company for the installation of a system of Pullman ventilators. The cost of this equipment, completely installed, was $1,260. It is thought by the Commission that this will provide as good a system of ventilation as is attainable in view of the difficulties presented by the architecture of the Capitol. A purity of atmosphere subject to the analysis of any competent chemist is guaranteed by the company installing the system.

COMPILATION OF STATE MANUAL.

The last General Assembly authorized the compilation by the State Librarian of a State Manual, which was duly prepared and published. The Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor and the Speaker of the House were constituted a Commission to determine the compensation of the State Librarian for this service, said compensation being fixed at an amount not to exceed $1,000. The Commission fixed the State Librarian's compensation for this work at $600.

OIL INSPECTION BUREAU.

The report of the operations of the Oil Inspection Bureau for the twenty-two months ending November 1, 1904, shows an income to the State in fees of $53,534.18. The total to January 1st for the two years will reach at least $65,000. Prior to January 1, 1903, the State had never received a dollar from this source, the entire amount of the fees collected going to the State Oil Inspector and his deputies. The financial benefits accruing to the State from the oil inspection law of 1903 amply justifies its enactment.

THE COMMON SCHOOLS.

The common schools are an interest which lie close to the heart of the people of this State. The tendency toward making our educational system "top heavy" by accentuating the claim upon the public of the high school and university, rather than the common school, is to be deplored. The wages ordinarily paid teachers in the common schools are not such as to encourage men and women of talent and ambition to remain in the service of the State as teachers. In some localities, owing to the insufficiency of local valuations to produce adequate revenue for school purposes, the conditions are especially deplorable. The situation is one which invites the serious consideration of the General Assembly.

INDIANA AT THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE EXPOSITION.

In accordance with an act of the last General Assembly providing for the proper representation of the State at the St. Louis World's Fair, I appointed as members of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Commission the following named gentlemen: Newton W. Gilbert, of Fort Wayne; Henry W. Marshall, of Lafayette; James W. Cockrum, of Oakland City; W. W. Wicks, of Bloomington; W. W. Stevens, of Salem; W. H. O'Brien, of Lawrenceburg; Crawford Fairbanks, of Terre Haute; D. W. Kinsey, of New Castle; N. A. Gladding, of Indianapolis; Frank Ball, of Muncie; C. C. Shirley, of Kokomo; Fremont Goodwine, of Williamsport; Joseph Grass, of Huntington; Stephen B. Fleming, of Fort Wayne, and Melville W. Mix, of Mishawaka.

This commission has performed its duty in a manner calling for special commendation. The representation of the State at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was such as to reflect great credit upon the commonwealth. Without lavish expenditure Indiana took high rank among the States and nations represented at St. Louis by reason not only of the beauty of its building and the simple hospitality extended to more than three million persons who crossed its threshold, but because of the character of our private and official exhibits. The Indiana State Building was erected and furnished at a cost of $60,000, and was one of the most commodious and attractive structures on the Plateau of States. The State collected and installed thirteen general exhibits, on which four hundred and ten awards and prizes were given by the Superior Jury, including nine grand prizes awarded to the State. No other State surpassed this record. Two hundred and twenty-five school corporations and eighty-four counties were represented in the very creditable educational exhibit made by Indiana, which was by general consent accorded first rank and was awarded a gold medal. Thirty-seven counties were represented in the very creditable agricultural exhibit and the same number in the horticultural exhibit.

The State was represented by one hundred and eight individual exhibitors in addition to those who contributed to the State exhibits. Seventy-seven awards and prizes were given by the Superior Jury to these individual exhibits. A classified list shows thirty-two exhibitors in the Live Stock Department, thirteen in the Department of Liberal Arts, eight in the Department of Manufactures, eight in Machinery Hall, seven in the Palace of Electricity, twelve in the Transportation Building, sixteen in the Department of Agriculture, one in Horticulture, two in the Department of Mines and Metallurgy, two in the Department of Fish and Game, four in the Department of Social Economy, one in Physical Culture and two in the Art Palace. In the live stock exhibit Indiana made a showing exceeded by only two other States or nations. Of premier champion awards on cattle Indiana received more than any other State or nation.

Including those who participated in the State exhibits and the individual exhibitors, there were eight hundred and six of our citizens who in some way exhibited products of the State at the Exposition, at an estimated aggregate value of $250,000. In attendance at the Exposition Indiana surpassed every State except Missouri. Indiana has just ground for pride in the prestige attained by the splendid comparative showing made at St. Louis and has reason to feel that the appropriation made for this purpose was an excellent investment. Of the $150,000 appropriated the commission will be able to return at least $15,000 to the State Treasury.

IN CONCLUSION.

In conclusion I desire to call the attention of the General Assembly to the fact that if reports current are to be credited, the Legislature now entering upon its session will be called upon to resist the importunities of the most corrupt professional lobby which has visited itself upon any General Assembly in the history of the State. On the one hand will be temptation to extravagance and waste, on the other resistance to legislation for the common welfare of the people of the State. Already the names of members of the General Assembly are being used, and the necessity of large sums of money to prevent needed legislation or to pass questionable measures is being urged. Without assuming that such influences will affect the deliberations of this General Assembly, I direct your attention to the effects which have followed the success of interests selfish and corrupt in dictating legislation in other commonwealths. The people have placed their trust in you, and to you they look for fidelity and forethought in the discharge of the important duties attendant upon membership in the State's law-making bodies.

The influence of every member of this General Assembly who has come here with a determination to faithfully perform his full duty should be exerted not only toward the rebuke of every illegitimate method of approach which may be employed by those seeking to influence legislation, no matter what their professional or political standing, but toward the apprehension of any corruptionist, no matter what his standing in society or political organization, to the end that the law may have opportunity to deal with the briber, because no matter what his standing, a briber is a briber just the same. We have had within recent years some astounding revelations with regard to malfeasance on the part of public officials in other Commonwealths. Our public affairs have on the whole been conducted in a clean and wholesome atmosphere, and these conditions should not only be maintained, but be improved. Reform in public affairs, when these have been conducted on a low level, is to be applauded, but better than reform or revolution is the absence of the necessity of such a procedure.

For my successor soon to be inaugurated I solicit that complete and sympathetic co-operation of the General Assembly which is his due, not only because of his exalted office, but because he will bring to his duties an earnest purpose to serve faithfully and well the people of this Commonwealth. Thorough harmony should prevail between the executive and legislative departments of our State government, to the end that out of a mutual desire to further the Commonwealth's best interests there may come legislation and administration that will realize the expectations and merit the approbation of the people whom you represent in common.
